

John Adams
Library.

IN THE CUSTODY OF THE BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY.

SHELF N<sup>o</sup>
★ ADAMS 201.5
v.3

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2009

AN H I S T O R Y
OF EARLY OPINIONS CONCERNING
J E S U S C H R I S T, COMPILED FROM ORIGINAL WRITERS; PROVING THAT THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH WAS AT FIRST UNITARIAN.

By JOSEPH PRIESTLEY, LL.D. F.R.S

AC. IMP. PETROP. R. PARIS. HOLM. TAURIN. AUREL. MED.
PARIS. CANTAB. AMERIC. ET PHILAD. SOCIUS.

V O L. III.

Id verum quodcunque primum, id adulterum quodcunque posterius. TERTULLIAN.

Εἰ μὲν ἐβελονίῳ πάντες, ἐφ' ἧς τὸ ὄνομα τῆ θεᾶ καὶ σώτηρος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ χριστοῦ ἐπιτεκλήσῃται, μηδὲν τῆ ἀληθείας τῆ εὐαγγελιστῶν παρεγ-χωρεῖν, τῆ δὲ παραδοσῆς τῶν ἀποστόλων, καὶ τῆ ἀπλόησιν τῆς πίστεως ἐξαρκεῖσθαι, ἔδεν ἂν ἡμῶν εἶδει λογῶν ἐν τῷ παρόντι. BASIL.

B I R M I N G H A M, PRINTED FOR THE AUTHOR, BY PEARSON AND ROLLASON, AND SOLD BY J. JOHNSON, NO. 72, ST. PAUL'S CHURCH-YARD, LONDON.
MDCCLXXXVI.

✓ 169

Y. A. C. S. I. 4. 2. 14

ADAMS 201.5
#13

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

ADAMS 201.5

C O N T E N T S

OF THE

THIRD VOLUME.

B O O K III.

THE History of the Unitarian Doctrines. Page 1

Introduction. ibid

CHAPTER I.

That the Jews in all Ages were Believers in the Divine Unity. 7

SECTION I.

The Fact acknowledged by the Christian Fathers. 9

SECTION II.

Of the Reasons why, according to the Christian Fathers, the Doctrine of the Trinity was not discovered to the Jews. 18

SECTION III.

The Sentiments of the Jews, as expressed by themselves, on the Subject. 26

A 2

SEC-

iv C O N T E N T S.

SECTION IV.

Of the Jewish Angel METATRON, &c. 40

CHAPTER II.

General Considerations relating to the supposed Conduct of Christ and the Apostles, with Respect to the Doctrines of his Pre-existence and Divinity. 50

CHAPTER III.

Of the Conduct of our Saviour himself with respect to his own supposed Pre-existence and Divinity. 64

CHAPTER IV.

Of the Testimony of Athanasius to the Caution with which the Apostles divulged the Doctrines of the Pre-existence and Divinity of Christ. 86

CHAPTER V.

Of the concurrent Testimony of other Fathers to the Caution of the Apostles, in teaching the Doctrines of the Pre-existence and Divinity of Christ. 101

CHAP.

C O N T E N T S. ▼

CHAPTER VI.

Of the Caution observed by the Apostles in teaching the Doctrines of the Pre-existence and Divinity of Christ to the Gentile Converts. 113

CHAPTER VII.

Of John being thought to have been the first who clearly and boldly taught the Doctrines of the Pre-existence and Divinity of Christ. 123

SECTION I.

The Acknowledgments of the Christian Fathers that John was the first who taught the Doctrines above-mentioned. 125

SECTION II.

Reflections on the Subject 148

CHAPTER VIII.

Of the Nazarenes and the Ebionites ; shewing that they were the same People, and that none of them believed the Divinity or Pre-existence of Christ. 158

CHAPTER IX.

Of the supposed Church of Orthodox Jews at Jerusalem, subsequent to the Time of Adrian. 190

vi C O N T E N T S.

CHAPTER X.

Of the supposed Heresy of the Ebionites and Nazarenes, and other Particulars relating to them. Page. 201

CHAPTER XI.

Of the sacred Books of the Ebionites. 212

CHAPTER XII.

Of Men of Eminence among the Jewish Christians. 219

CHAPTER XIII.

Unitarianism was the Doctrine of the primitive Gentile Churches. 233

SECTION I.

Presumptive Evidence that the Majority of the Gentile Christians in the early Ages were Unitarians. 235

SECTION II.

Direct evidence in Favour of the Gentile Christians having been generally Unitarians. 258

CHAPTER XIV.

An Argument for the Novelty of the Doctrine of the Trinity, from the Manner in which it was taught and received in early Times. 272

C O N T E N T S.      vii

CHAPTER XV.

Objections to the preceding State of Things considered.      Page 295

SECTION I.

Of the Testimony of Eusebius to the Novelty of the Unitarian Doctrine.      ibid

SECTION II.

Of the Excommunication of Theodotus by Victor.
303

SECTION III.

Of the Part taken by the Laity in the Excommunication of the early Unitarians, and other Considerations relating to the Subject.
308

CHAPTER XVI.

*Of the State of the Unitarian Doctrine after
the Council of Nice.*      318

SECTION I.

Of the State of the Unitarians from the Time of the Council of Nice, to the sixth Century.
322

SECTION II.

Of the State of the Unitarians after the sixth Century.      364

viii C O N T E N T S.

CHAPTER XVII.

Of Philosophical Unitarianism Page 376

CHAPTER XVIII.

Of the Principles and Arguments of the ancient Unitarians. 399

SECTION I.

Their Zeal for the Divine Unity, and their Sense of the Word Logos. ibid.

SECTION II.

Arguments of the ancient Unitarians from Reason. 415

SECTION III.

Arguments of the ancient Unitarians from the Scriptures. 423

CHAPTER XIX.

Of the Practice of the Unitarians with respect to Baptism. 439

V O L. III.

E R R A T A.

N. B. (b) signifies from the bottom of the page.

- Page 20. line 4. for in some places, read, to some persons
- ibid. line 5. for in, read to
- 136. line 1. for himself, read him
- 154. line 15. for with, read of
- 264. line 5. for logos, read the logos
- 277. line 9. (b) for which, read in which
- 292. line 11. for it, read them
- 295. line 4. (b) for by, read that
- 347. line 6. for his, read their
- 422. line 1. (b) for unto, read into

R E F E R E N C E S.

- Page 140. line 3. for κοφορησαι, read κερφορησαι
- 207. line 3. for πνευμαλα, read πνευμα
- 261. note * line 4. read ἀλεγεινησον αυτω

THE HISTORY OF OPINIONS CONCERNING
CHRIST.

---

B O O K III.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITARIAN DOCTRINE.

---

INTRODUCTION.

AFTER the view that has been given of the rise and progress of the doctrine of the trinity, which sprung from the absurdity and mystery of Platonism, and terminated in a mystery still more unintelligible and absurd, in which every thing that is simple and excellent in christianity was wholly swallowed up and lost, and a polytheism little better than that of the heathens took its place (for the worship of Christ led to that of the virgin Mary, and a thousand other persons, called saints) it is with peculiar satisfaction that I proceed to give an account of the doctrine of the divine unity, or the History of Unitarianism.

If I had not given what I imagine will appear to be a satisfactory account of the rise of christian idolatry, it might have appeared a very extraordinary and unaccountable thing; considering that the Jews, from whom the christians sprung, were all zealous unitarians in the time of our Saviour, and that they have continued such to this day. It even appears to have been the great object of the Jewish religion, as contained in the books of Moses, to preserve in the world the knowledge and worship of the one true God, notwithstanding the universal tendency to polytheism among all nations, in the early ages.

The doctrine of one great omnipresent being, the maker, and the immediate governor of all things, was too great and sublime, I do not only say, to have been dis- covered

covered by mankind, but even to be retained by any of them, after it was revealed, without particular provisions for that purpose. Though, I have no doubt, but that the first parents of the human race were instructed in the knowledge of the divine unity, their posterity soon adopted the notion of different gods, to whom they imagined the government of the world was delegated; and their attention to these inferior deities, on whom they thought that they more immediately depended, withdrew their attention, as it naturally would, from the supreme God, under whom they at first supposed that these lesser gods had acted. Then, being left to their own imaginations with respect to the characters of these gods, and having no models by which to frame them besides beings like themselves, they presently conceived them to be of very different dispositions, some of them cruel and base, and others lewd; and of course delighting in cruel, base, and lewd actions. To procure the favour, or to avert the displeasure, of these gods, they would,

B 2

would, therefore, practice many abominable, horrid, and atrocious rites.

The religious ceremonies, and the general character and practice of the heathen world, abundantly prove, that idolatry was not a mere speculative mistake, a thing only foolish and absurd, but of a very serious and alarming nature; and that it was therefore nothing that could be called jealousy in the true God, to take such extraordinary measures as the history of revelation represents him to have taken, in order to cure mankind of their proneness to idolatrous worship. It was a part which it became the supreme God, the benevolent parent of all his offspring, to take, and what a regard to their own happiness required. The mischief was of so alarming a nature, that the greatest severities were necessary, and therefore proper, to be employed for this purpose; and they must know nothing of the nature and tendency of the ancient idolatry, who find any thing to censure in the severity with which the Israelites were ordered to act, with a view to the extirpation
of

of it from among themselves, or the nations inhabiting the district that was destined for them.

It is not possible to imagine any instructions, or regulations, more proper to effect the extirpation of idolatry, and to guard the people from it, than the laws of Moses, interpreted by his repeated and earnest remonstrances on the subject with respect to the Israelites. Let the reader only peruse the book of Deuteronomy, and then form his judgment. And yet, so seducing were the idolatrous customs of those times, that their whole history shews how prone the Jews always were to abandon their own purer religion, and more simple rites, though, to appearance, sufficiently splendid, and having little of austerity in them. For they had only one fast day in the whole year, and three great festivals.

But the intention of the Divine Being, was equally answered by the obedience or the disobedience of that people; and after a series of discipline, they returned from the captivity of Babylon, with a new heart and a new spirit, in this respect. For they never discovered the least proneness to idolatry afterwards; but, on the contrary, always shewed the most scrupulous dread and jealousy on this subject. Nay, to a neglect of their religion, there succeeded the most superstitious attention to the smallest punctilios relating to it.

CHAP.

C H A P T E R I.

That the Jews in all Ages were Believers in the Divine Unity..

IT is impossible to read the sacred books of the Jews (with minds freed from the strongest prejudices) without perceiving that the doctrine of the divine unity is most rigorously inculcated in them. It is the uniform language of those books, that one God, without any assistant, either equal or subordinate to himself, made the world, and all things in it, and that this one God continues to direct all the affairs of men.

This is so evident from the bare inspection of the books, and the well known principles of the Jews in our Saviour's time, that even the christian Fathers, desirous as they were to find advocates for their doctrine of the trinity, and pressing even Platonism into the service, could not but allow it. They ransacked every part of the Old Testament, as we have seen, for proofs, or intimations, of the doctrine of the trinity, or of the divinity of Christ; but, though they imagined they found many such, yet they always acknowledged that the doctrines were delivered so obscurely, that the bulk of the Jewish nation had not perceived them.

They thought, indeed, that Moses himself, and the prophets, were acquainted with these doctrines; but that there were good reasons why they did not endeavour to make them intelligible to the rest of their countrymen; partly, lest it should have hindered the operation of their religion to divert them from idolatry, and partly, because the doctrines were too sublime to be communicated at so early a period, and before men's minds were properly prepared for them.

SECTION I.

The Fact acknowledged by the Christian Fathers.

AS these concessions are of considerable consequence to my argument, I shall produce a number of them, from the earliest christian writers to a pretty late period, to shew that it was the uniform persuasion of all those who were the greatest friends to the doctrine of the trinity.

I shall begin with Justin Martyr, the first who advanced the doctrine of the personification of the logos. What the Jews thought of their Messiah in his time, appears very clearly from a passage in his dialogue with Trypho, which will be produced hereafter. In the mean time, I shall give his opinion with respect to the doctrine of the Jews in general on the subject. "The Jews," he says, "thinking it was " the Father of all who spake to Moses,
" when it was the Son of God, who is " also

of this œconomy as what christians only were acquainted with*.

Tertullian had the same ideas. “ I “ adore,” says he, “ the fulness of the “ scriptures,” meaning those of the Old Testament, “ which manifest the maker and “ the things made; but in the gospel I “ find the minister, or the person by whom “ it was made, and the judge, viz. the word “ of the maker †.” “ It is the faith of the “ Jews so to believe in one God, as not to “ acknowledge the Son, or the Spirit.— “ What is the difference between us and “ them, but this? What need is there of “ the gospel, which is the substance of the “ New Testament (saying, that the law and “ the prophets were until John) if from that “ period the Father, Son, and Spirit, being “ three, are not believed to make one God.

* Ημεις εσμεν — οι την οικονομιαν τε δεσ κατανενοηκοτες. Ad Gentes, Opera, p. 40.

† Igitur in principio deus fecit cœlum et terram. Adoro scripturæ plenitudinem, quæ mihi et factorem manifestat et facta. In evangelio vero amplius et ministrum atque arbitrum rectoris invenio sermonem. Ad Herm. sect. 22. Opera, p. 241.

“ So

“ So God would renew his covenant, that,
 “ in a new manner, he should be believed “ in, together with the Son, and his Spirit ;
 “ that God may be known in his proper “ names and persons *.”

“ The Jews,” says Hippolytus, “ ho“ noured the Father, but they did not give “ thanks ; for they knew not the Son †.”

Origen also says, “ the Jews were not “ acquainted with the incarnation of the “ only begotten Son of God ‡.”

Eusebius speaks of the christians as differing from the Hebrews, in that the latter

* Judaicæ fidei ista res, sic unum deum credere, ut filium adnumerare ei nolis, et post filium spiritum. Quid enim erit inter nos et illos, nisi differentia ista? Quod opus evangelii, quæ est substantia novi testamenti, statuens legem et prophetas usque ad Joannem, si non exinde pater et filius et spiritus, tres crediti, unum deum sistunt? Sic deus voluit novare sacramentum, ut nove unus crederetur per filium et spiritum, ut coram jam deus in suis propriis nominibus et personis cognosceretur, qui et retro per filium et spiritum prædicatus non intelligebatur. Ad Praxeam, sect. 30. Opera, p. 518.

† Ἰουδαῖοι μὲν γὰρ εἰδοῦσάν τε πατέρα ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐκινῆσαν υἱὸν γὰρ οὐκ ἐπεγνώσαν. In Noetum, sect. 14. Opera, p. 16.

‡ Deerat enim illis in trinitate etiam de unigeniti incarnatione cognoscere. Opera, vol. 1. p. 290.

did not acknowledge the divinity of Christ*. He considered the doctrine of the divinity of Christ as peculiar to christians, and distinguishing them from Jews. “ If any “ Jew,” says he, “ be asked, whether God “ has a logos, he will say, certainly. Every “ Jew will say, that he has one, or more of “ them; but if he be asked whether he has “ a Son, he will not acknowledge it †.”

Cyril of Jerusalem says, “ In this respect “ our doctrine is more sublime than that of “ the Jews, in that they acknowledge one “ God the Father, but do not admit that he “ is the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, “ in which they contradict their own pro- “ phets, who say, in the scriptures, The “ Lord said unto me, thou art my Son, this “ day have I begotten thee ‡.” Cyril of * Μητε την θεότητα συνζητωντες αυτα. Demonstratio, lib. 4. cap. 1. p. 144.

† Ει γβν τις Ιβδαιων ερωσο τινα, ει λογον εχει ο θεος; παντως πα φησει. επει κη λογον, κη λογος πλειβς εχειν αυλον, ομολογησειεν, αν, Ιβδαιος ων, απας. ει δε κη υιον εχει. κη εϊ αν ομολογησειεν, ερωτηθεις. Contra Marcellam, lib. 1. p. 4.

‡ Ταυτη γαρ αν των Ιβδαιων ανωλερα φρονουμεν. οι μεν γαρ ειναι ενα θεον παλερα καταδεχονται τοις δογμασι—το δε κη παλερα ειναι τε κυριε ημων-Ιησϋ χριστϋ, τελον κ παραδεχονται, τοις οικειοις προφηταις

Alexandria also says, “ the Jews believed “ that there was a God who was before all “ things, and after him the creatures, but “ nothing intermediate between them *.”

Basil ranks the unitarians with Jews.
 “ If any one,” says he, “ suppose the Father, “ Son, and Holy Spirit to be one, one Being “ under different names, and that they are “ but one hypostasis, under three denomina“ tions, we rank him with the Jews †.”

“ The Hebrews,” says Leontius, “ have “ only one hypostasis, or person, and one “ nature of God ; plainly admitting no tri“ nity, nor saying that God is Father, Son,
 “ or Spirit, except that they call God Father, “ as the father of all men. They prove this “ one hypostasis from the words of Moses :

εκαθ' ἑαυτῶν φρονεῖτες, οἱ φασί, ἐν ταῖς θείαις γραφαῖς, κύριος εἶπε πρὸς με, υἱὸς μὲ ἐγώ σου, ἐγὼ σημεῖον γεγεννηκά σε. Cat. 7. p. 102:

* Intellexerunt enim in his quæ credita sunt, deum quidem esse ante omnia, et post illum creaturam, intermediam autem aliud omnino nihil. De Trinitate, lib. 3. Opera, vol. 2. p. 398.

† Εἰς τὸν αὐτὸν πάτερ λέγει, καὶ υἱὸν, καὶ ἅγιον πνεῦμα· καὶ ἐν πρᾶγμα πολυωνυμὸν ὑποτίθει, καὶ μίαν ὑπόστασιν ὑπο τῶν τριῶν προσηγορίων ἐκφώνημεν· τὸν τοῦτον ἡμεῖς ἐν τῇ μερίδι τῶν Ἰσραηλίων τασσομέν. Epist. 73. vol. 3. p. 123.

“ Hear,

“Hear, O Israel, the Lord thy God is one
“Lord*.”

Lastly, Theophylact says, “in the Old “Testament God was known to the Jews “only, but not as Father; he was after“wards revealed by the gospel to all the “world with the Son †.”

This is a series of testimony, sufficiently extensive for my purpose, as it clearly shows what was the general opinion among christians concerning the ancient faith of the Jews; and it is uncontradicted by any other evidence whatever. Some writers of yesterday have maintained, that the Jews always believed in a trinity, and that they expected that their Messiah would be the second person in that trinity; but the christian Fathers, who say just the contrary, were as much interested as any men could be, in finding that doctrine among the Jews, and they were nearer the source of information.

* Igitur Hebræi unam dicunt hypostasin (five personam) unamque naturam dei; nullam plane trinitatem admitentes, ac neque patrem, neque filium, neque spiritum sanctum dicentes: nisi forte sic deum, inquirunt, adpellemus patrem; ut qui omnium sit hominum pater: Unam ex eo probant esse hypostasin dei, quia Moses dixerit: audi Israelitica natio, dominus deus tuus, dominus unus est. De Sectis. Bib. Pat. App. p. 1849.

† Εἰ γὰρ καὶ ἐν τῇ παλαιᾷ ἐγνωτο, ἀλλ' Ἰουδαίους μόνους • καὶ εὐδὲ τέλει, ὡς πατὴρ • ὑπερονδε, διὰ τῆς εὐαγγελίας ἐξεκαλυφθῆ τῇ οικουμένη πᾶσιν, μὲν τῆς υἱ. In Rom. Opera, vol. 2. p. 4.

It was, indeed, imagined, as I have observed, that Moses and the prophets were themselves acquainted with the mystery of the trinity; but that they thought it was not a proper time to make a full discovery of that doctrine for the satisfaction of the body of the Jews. Eusebius says, that “Isaiah knew that there was a God in “God*” “The prophets,” says Chrysostom, “who foretold concerning Christ, “concealed their treasure in obscure “words †;” which implies that, in his opinion, they knew it themselves. “Adam,” says Epiphanius, “being a prophet, knew * Ησαϊας προφητων μεγιστος σαφως ειδε θεον εν θεω ειναι. Demonstratio, lib. 5. cap. 4. p. 225.

† Ουτως η οι προφητοι χριστον κηρυξαντες τη ασαφεια των λεξεων κρυψαν τον θησαυρον. De Sigillis, Opera, vol. 6. p. 169.

“ the Father, Son, and Spirit, and knew “ that the Father spake to the Son, when he “ said, Let us make man *.”

Pope Gregory likewise represents the people of the Jews as ignorant of the trinity, though the prophets might teach it †.

* Και ἰδεὶ πατέρα θεοῦ καὶ υἱὸν καὶ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, προσφώνησιν γὰρ ἑν.
 Lib. 1. p. 6.

† Ipsa enim dei cognitio quæ apud illam in spiritalibus patribus fuit, nota omni Hæbræorum populo non fuit. Nam omnipotentem deum, sanctam videlicet trinitatem cum prophetæ prædicarent, populus ignorabat: solum decalogum tenebat in fide, legem trinitatis nesciens. Super Ezekiel, Hom. 16. Opera, vol. 2. p. 83. F

S E C T I O N II.

Of the Reasons why, according to the Christian Fathers, the Doctrine of the Trinity was not discovered to the Jews.

AS the ignorance of the Jews, concerning the doctrine of the trinity, was an objection to the truth of it, which the christian Fathers, who defended it, could not be quite easy under, and they were often urged with it, as we shall see, by the unitarians; it may be amusing to know more particularly in what manner they accounted for the fact.

That there should be a gradual revelation of so great a mystery as that of the trinity, the Fathers thought to be an argument of great wisdom on the divine dispensations, as they were by this means better adapted to the different states of the world.

Chrysoftom represents Moses as saying, “ that the world was made by God, and not “ by Christ, as accommodating himself to “ the stupidity of his hearers. Paul him“ self,” he says, “ was contented to teach “ the same doctrine at Athens. But he af“ terwards

“terwards held a different language in the “epistle to the Colossians; and says, that “God in Christ created all things that are in “heaven and in earth. And John, the son “of Thunder, cried, saying, All things were “made by him, and without him was not “any thing made that was made. But not so “Moses; and justly, because it would not “have been proper to give those meat who “had need to be fed with milk*.”

“As Moses,” says Cyril of Alexandria, “was slow of speech, so the law of Moses “was slow to explain the reason of it, and “to open the theology of the holy trinity†.”

* Και μη ξηπιστης αγαπητε, ει Μωυσης ταυτην ειρεχε την οδον, εν αρχη κ̅ προομιους τοις παχυτεροις Ιεδακις διαλεγομενθ̅, οπε γε κ̅ ο Παυλθ̅, εν τη χαρηι, ηνικα τος αυτη η επιδοσις γεγονε τε κηρυγμαλθ̅, μελλων τοις εν Αθηναις διαλεγεσθαι. απο των ορωμενων ποιειλαι προς αυτες την διδασκαλιαν, ελω λεγων· ο θεος ο ποιησας τον κοσμον, κ̅ παντα τα εν αυτω. Ηνικα προς Κολοσσαις επεσελλε, μη κηλιταυτην ερχομενε την οδον, αλλ̅ ειρωσ αυτοις διαλεγομενου κ̅ λεγονθ̅, οτι εν αυτω ειλισθη τα παντα τα εν τοις ερανοις, κ̅ τα επι της γης, τα οραλα κ̅ τα αοραλα, ειτε θρονοι, ειτε κυριδιητες, ειτε αρχαι, ειτε εξουσιαι, τα παντα δι αυτον κ̅ εις αυτον εκλισθη· κ̅ Ιωαννης δε ο της βροντης υιος, εβοα λεγων· παντα δι αυτου εγενετο, κ̅ χωρις αυτου εγενετο ουδε εν. αλλ̅ εχ̅ ο Μωυσης ετως· εικωτως. εδε γαρ ην ευλογον τοις επι γαλακτοτροφεισθαι δεομενοις γερεας μεταδεναι τροφης. In Gal. 1. Opera, vol. 2. p. 13.

† Sicut Moses erat tardioris linguæ, ita etiam lex Mo-saica est tardioris linguæ ad explicandam ejus quod est rationem, et aperiendam sanctæ trinitatis theologiam. Collectanea. Opera, vol. 1. p. 1036.

“Observe,” says Job the monk, “the wisdom of divine providence, that to the ancients the Father appeared superior; in the new, the Son appeared in some places to be inferior to the Father, but in many equal to him; the holy spirit in many inferior, but in some equal; that what is unequal in human apprehension, might be brought to a perfect equality*.” According to this writer therefore, the doctrine of the divinity of the spirit was not fully revealed even in the time of the apostles, but was reserved for a later period.—However, Epiphanius thought that the divinity of Christ was taught by the prophets, though not that of the Spirit. “One God,” says he, “was chiefly preached by Moses, a duality by the prophets, and a trinity by the evangelists; this being suited to a more advanced state of know-

† Και σκοπει της θεουργου προνοιας τον παωσοφον τε κ' αρρητη ζυγον. ο πατηρ εδοκει τοις παλαι το μειζον εχειν: ο υιος δε παλιν κατα την νεαν ενιοις μεν το ελατιον, τοις πολλοις δε το ισον· το δε αγιον πνευμα τοις πολλοις μεν το ελατιον, ολιγοις δε το ισον. ινα εν το ανισον το απο της των ανθρωπων υποληψεωσ εις ισθητα επαναχθη. Phot. Bib. S. 222. p. 623.

“ledge.”

“ledge*.” He says the same thing in his Ancoratus, Sect. 73. Opera, vol. 2. p. 78.

The reason that is generally given by the Fathers why the Jews were not instructed in the doctrine of the trinity is, lest it should afford them a pretence for relapsing into polytheism; and certainly there was great danger of its operating in that manner. “The multitude of the Jews,” says Eusebius, “were in ignorance of this hidden mystery, when they were taught to believe in one God only, on account of their being frequently drawn into idolatry; they did not know that he was the Father of the only begotten Son. This mystery was reserved for the Gentile church, out of special favour to them †.”

* Θεότης δὲ μία ἐν Μωϋσῃ μαλιστα καταγγέλλεται, δυνὰς δὲ ἐν Προφήταις σφοδρὰ κηρύσσεται. Τριάς δὲ ἐν εὐαγγελίοις φανέρεται, πλεονὸν κατὰ καιρὸς καὶ γενεὰς ἀρμοζούσα τῷ δικαίῳ, εἰς γνῶσιν καὶ πίσιν. H. 74. Opera, vol. 1. p. 899.

† Το δὲ πλῆθος τῶν Ἰσραηλίων ἐθνῶν ἐν ἀγνοίᾳ ἐτυγχάνει τὰ κερυμμενοῦ τε τοῦ μυστηρίου, ὅθεν θεοῦ μὲν ἐδιδάσκοντο ἕνα εἶδεναι, διὰ τοῦ τῆ πολυθεῶν πλάνῃ συνεχῶς ὑποσυρεσθαι. πατέρα δὲ ὄντα τὸν θεοῦ υἱοῦ τῶ μονογενοῦς ἠγνοοῖ· τετο γὰρ ἐφυλάττετο τῆ ἐξ ἔθνων ἐκκλησία τοῦ μυστηρίου, κατὰ τὴν ἀξίαιτον χάριν αὐτῆ δεδωρημένων. Contra Marcel. lib. 1. cap. 20. p. 99.

Gregory Nazianzen, therefore, representing the propriety of judaism being abolished by degrees, says, “ the Father was preached “ in the Old Testament, and the Son ob-“ scurely ; in the New, the Son clearly, and “ the spirit obscurely, he revealing himself “ more clearly to us. For it was not safe “ to preach the divinity of the Son clearly, “ while that of the Father was not under“ stood, nor that of the Spirit, while that “ of the Son was not received, lest too great “ a burden should be laid upon us, or lest
 “ we should be dazzled with too much “ light, &c*.” And Chrysostom farther observes, that “ the precept, Hear, O Israel,
 “ the Lord thy God is one Lord, was not “ given till after the sin of the golden calf †;”

* Εχει γαρ ητως, εκηρυσσε φανερωσ η παλαια του πατερα, του υιον αμυδροτερον. εφανερωσεν η καινη του υιον, υπεδειξε τε πνευματος την θεοτητα, εμπολιτευειν νυν το πνευμα. Καφεγεραν ημιν παρεχον την εαυτη δηλωσιν. ε γαρ η ασφαλές, μηπω της τε πατρος θεοτητας ομολογηθεις, τον υιον εκδηλωσ κηρυττεισθαι. μηδε της τε υιου παραιδεχθεις, το πνευμα το αγιον, εν ειπω τι κη τομνηροτερην επιφορησεισθαι. μη καθαπερ τροφη τη υπερ δυναμιν βαρηθεντες, και ηλιακω φωλι σαδροτερον ει προσεαλοντες τη οψιν, και εις το καλα δυναμιν κινδυνευωσι.
 Or. 37. Opera, p. 608, 609.

† Οτε γουν εποισαν τον μοσχον, κη το γλυπτον προσευκησαν, τοτε ηκουσαν. κυριος ο θεος σε κυριος εις εστιν Ser. 24. Opera. vol. 5. p. 350.

as if it had not been the intention of providence to give them any such precept, if they had not previously shewn a disposition to abuse more perfect instruction.

Job the monk, of whose writings we have a particular account in Photius, comparing the great revolutions in the state of religion to earthquakes, says, “As the first earthquake had cured the world of idolatry, by contrary remedies, but concealed the difference of hypostases; so in the last times, the Jewish opinion of one person having gained strength in time, and by the law, and having destroyed idolatry; the Son then, in a manner worthy of God, and friendly to man, took flesh, and revealed the mystery of the trinity by degrees.” He likewise says, “the Saviour very wisely spake lowly of himself, and withheld the beams of his divinity, and prepared to let it shine forth in works*.”

* Και καθάπερ ο πρώτος σεισμος δια των ενανθίων ιασατο το πολυθεον επικυφάμενος των υποσασεων το διαφορον. ελω η εν εσχάτοις καιροισ, της Ιουδαϊκης δοξης εις εν προσωπον νομω η χρονω κρείυθεις, η περιελυσης το πολυθεον, ο υιος τηνικαυλα δεοπρεπως τε η φιλανθρωπως και σαρκα λαμβανει, και το της τριαδος καβα μικρον ανακαλυπτει μυστηριον.

It was customary, as we shall see, to represent the doctrine of the trinity as something sublime, and of difficult apprehension; and therefore fit for persons of ripe understanding, and deep reflection; of which on that account, even the christians of the first ages were allowed to be ignorant, and the common people in general, till a much later period. It was natural, therefore, to alledge this, also, as another reason why the Jews, living in the infant age of the world, should not have this sublime and difficult lesson taught them. “The Jews,” says Eusebius, “were not taught the doctrine of the trinity, on account of their infant state*.” Basil gives the same account †. Cyril of Alexandria, says, “The επαγγέλιον δε τῆσιν, ὡς πᾶσι τοῖς ἀποστόλοις ἐπιμαρτυροῦντο, καὶ τὴν τῆς θεότητος συνέθεσεν αὐτοῖς, τοῖς ἐργοῖς δε ταύτης πρὸς κέρμαζεν ἀσραπίειν, καὶ δι' αὐτῶν ἐδοκεῖ κηρυττεσθαι τῆς πατοκρατορικῆς δυνάμεως τὸ ἀξίωμα, Photii. Bib. sect. 222. p. 619.

* Καὶ τὰ νηπιαζοντὶ τῶν Ἰσραηλιτῶν λαῶ. Ec. Theol. lib. 2. cap. 18, p. 130.

† Ἦν γὰρ τι, ὡς εἰκεν, καὶ πρὸ τῆς κοσμοῦ τῆσιν, ὅτι μὲν διανοία ἡμῶν ἐστὶ θεωρησόν, ἀνισορήσον δε καλελείφθη, δια τοῖς εἰσαγομενοῖς ἐστὶ καὶ νηπιοῖς κατὰ τὴν γνῶσιν ἀνεπιτηδεῖον. Basil, vol. 1. p. 6.

“ doctrine

“ doctrine of the trinity was taught in “ types only, and not clearly. For what “ reason? Because the light of divine “ vision is not easily accessible to those who “ are but lately called to the knowledge “ of the truth, and have not their minds “ exercised to those speculations*.”

Our Saviour said that divorces had been allowed to the Jews on account of the hardness of their hearts. This also is given as a reason by Eusebius, why the Jews were not taught the doctrine of the trinity †.

* Ος εν τυποις εστι μονον, εχει δε κ̄ αισθητως, εδιδασκετο δια ποιαν αιτιαν; οτι τοις αρι κεκλημενοις εις επιγνωσιν αληθειας κ̄ εκ εν̄ριβη τοις επ αῡτη θεωρημασι την διανοιαν εχουσιν, απρασῑον πως ειναι δοκει κ̄ εστιν αληθως, το πως της θεωρησιας. Contra Jul. lib. 1. Juliāni, Opera, vol. 2. p. 19.

† Οτι προς την σκληροκαρδιαν τε Ιουδαιων λαου. Ec. Theol. lib. 2. cap. 20. p. 131.

SECTION III.

The Sentiments of the Jews, as expressed by themselves, on the Subject.

HAVING seen what the christian Fathers say in general of the ignorance of the Jews concerning the doctrine of the trinity, let us see what the Jews themselves have said on the subject, as far as we are able to collect it, either from the writings of the christian Fathers, or their own.

As the christian Fathers found the doctrine of the trinity obscurely hinted at in the Old Testament, and particularly in the account of the creation, in which God is represented as saying, Let us make man, we may wish to know what the Jews replied, when they were urged with this argument; and it is remarkable, that their answer was in general the same with that of the unitarian in the Clementines, in reply to Simon, who had urged that very circumstance, as a proof that there were more gods than one. However, there is a variety in the answers given by the Jews to this question, but all of them sufficiently ficiently natural, and not improper. Theodoret says, “the Jews say that when God said let us make man, he used the kingly style* ;” and this seems to be the most natural interpretation. But according to Tertullian, the Jews said that God addressed himself to the angels. “Did he speak to angels, when he said, let us make man, as the Jews say, who do not acknowledge the Son ; or, as if he himself was Father, Son, and Spirit, did he, say they, make himself more than one, and speak in the plural number †.” This also is the answer which Basil reports. “The Jews say God spake to the angels, when he said, let us make man,” addressing himself to an unitarian, who he said was “a Jew pretending to be a christian ‡.” Cyril of

* In Gen. xix. Opera, vol. 1. p. 15.

† Aut numquid angelis loquebatur, ut Judæi interpretantur, quia nec ipsi filium agnoscunt ; an quia ipse erat pater, filius et spiritus, ideo pluralem se præstans, pluraliter sibi loquebatur. Ad Praxeam, sect. 12. p. 506.

‡ Ακουε κ̅υ σου ο εκ της νεας καταβολης, ο τον Ιουδαισμον προσευων εν χριστιανισμω προσποιησει. τινι λεγει κατ' εικονα ημεζεραν. Hom. 8. Opera, vol. 1. p. 105.

Jerusalem says, that the Jews acknowledged only one God the Father*.

We may form a very good judgment of the sentiments of the Jews on this subject, from the account of a solemn conference between Gregentius, a christian bishop, and Herbanus, a learned Jew, in the presence of an Arabian prince, in the fifth century. As it is the only work of the kind that remains of so early an age, I shall quote several extracts from it, to shew how the Jews of that age felt and reasoned.

The Jew expresses his dread of idolatry in very strong terms. “The prophet “Moses,” he says, “if you read the penta-“teuch, pronounces a dreadful curse upon “the children of Israel, from God, the an“gels, and saints, calling in all the ele“ments under heaven, if we should ever “receive any other god beside the God of “our Fathers. Why then should you make “any words on the subject; for God him“self by the prophets strictly orders us,

* ΟΙ ΤΟ ΜΕΝ ΕΙΝΑΙ ΕΝΑ ΘΕΟΝ ΠΑΤΕΡΑ ΚΑΤΑΔΕΧΟΜΕΝΟΙ ΤΟΙΣ
ΛΟΓΜΑΤΙ. Cat. 7. p. 102.

“ saying,

“ saying, there shall be no other god in “ thee, nor shalt thou worship a strange “ god; I am the Lord thy God, who “ brought thee out of the land of Egypt.
 “ What think you of this*?”

“ It is grievous to me to desert the God “ of the law, whom you acknowledge to “ be a true god, and to worship a younger “ god, not knowing whence he sprung †.”

“ Whence do you derive your faith in “ the Father, Son, and Spirit, and intro“ duce three strange gods ‡.” “ Where “ did any prophet foretel that Christ was “ to be God man, as you say ||.” “ Why

* Μωυσης ο προφητης, ει την περιβαλευχον ανεγνως, μεγεθη καταραν τεθεικεν ημιν τοις υιοις Ισραηλ, απο θεου κη των αγ-γελων, κη των αγιων, θεις κη παντα τα στοιχεια τα υπ κρανον υπο καταραν, ει ποτε εβρον θεον υποδεξομεθα παρεξ τε θεου των πατερων. Τι εν λοιπον πολυπραγματοις; κη γαρ κη αβλος ο θεος δια τε προφητε παρεγχευα ημιν λεγων· εκ εσας εν σοι θεος προσφαλος, κη προσκυνησεις θεω αλλοτριω. εγω γαρ ειμι κυριος ο θεος σε, ο αναγαγων σε εκ της γης Αιγυπττε· τι εν δοκει σοι προς ταυτα. P. 36.

† Ουκ εν βαρυ μοι εσι καταλιπειν τον θεον τε νομω, ον κη συ μαρτυρεις, οτι εσι θεος αληθειας, κη προσκυνησαι θεω νεωτερω, ποθεν επειταχθεντι εκ ειδως. Ibid. p. 115.

‡ Ποθεν ενεξελαβεςθε πατερα κη υιον κη πνευμα πισευειν, κη εισφερετε εις το μεσον τρεις θεους αλλοκοτους. Ibid. p. 6.

|| Και πε νηξατο τις των προφητων, οτι θεος ανθρωπος εσα ο χριστος, ον τροπον λελαληκας. Ibid. p. 112.

“ did

“ did not God order Moses and the pro“ phets to believe in the Father, Son, and “ Holy Spirit, but yourselves only, who “ have lately discovered it, as you pre“ tend*.”

“ How do you call your Christ God, if “ my God has chosen him, &c. He cannot “ be a god, of whom you acknowledge it “ is said in the prophet, I have made thee “ strong. How can you call him your God
 “ and Saviour, who, as the prophet witnes“ ses, can do nothing without my God †?”

Lastly, having quoted the words of the prophet, “ I have heard thee in an acceptable “ time, I have formed thee,” he says, “ How “ dare you then make him equal to him “ that formed him ‡?”

* Τῷ Μωσῆ καὶ τοῖς προφήταις πῶς ἐκ ἐξεθέτο ὁ θεὸς πισ-τεύειν εἰς πατέρα καὶ υἱὸν καὶ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, ἀλλ’ ἢ μόνοις ὑμῖν νεώσι τὰτο ἐξευρηκόσιν, ὡς ὑμεῖς φατέ. Gregent. p. 7.

† Καὶ εἰ ἔτις ἐχει, ποῖω δε τρωπῶ τον χριστον συ θεον προ-σαγορευεις, εφ’ ὃ θεος ὁ εμος ἐξελεξατο, καὶ ηγαπησε, καὶ τα εξης; ἕκιν ἐκ ἐσι θεος. ὡς λεγεις, οτι φατκει περι αυτε δια τε προφητε, οτι ἐγὼ γαρ εἰμι ὁ ἐνίσχυσας σε. πῶς δὲ καὶ ἀποκαλεις αὐτον θεον καὶ σωτηρα σου, ὅς τις καθὼς ἡ προφη-τεια μαρτυρεῖ, ἀνευ τε ἐμου θεοῦ φρατῆειν τὸ ἔδυναται; Ibid.
 p. 111.

‡ Πῶς ἐν σου τολμας ἴσον τῷ πλασῆν αὐτῷ θεον ὀνομαζῶν Ibid. p. 151.

“ The

“ The doctrine of the trinity,” says the Rabbi Isaac, in his Munimen Fidei, “ as held by learned christians, rests on the slightest evidence, and is contrary to the doctrine of the prophets, the law, and right reason, and even to the writings of the New Testament. For the divine law gives its sanction to the unity of God, and removes all plurality from him*.” This writer shews, in many places, that the doctrine of the trinity is not taught in the New Testament. See p. 397. 403. 418, &c.

The contempt which the author of a Jewish treatise, entitled, Nizzachon Vetus, expresses for the christian doctrine of God being confined in the womb of woman, is peculiarly strong †. As to those who said that Mary was not rendered unclean by the birth of Jesus, he says the contrary is evident, from the offering that she brought for her purification*.

* Accedit his, quod dogma de trinitate falsum est, et a quibusdam eruditis Nazarenorum, rebus levissimis, sine ullo vero prophetico fundamento recens superstructum, quodque legi divinæ, verbis prophetarum, humanæ rationi, dictisque plurimis scriptorum novi testamenti repugnat. Quippe lex divina comprobatur dei unitatem, omnemque pluralitatem ab eo segregat. p. 113.

† Quomodo igitur iste deus esse posset, qui foeminam plenum immunditatis ventrem habentem, ingressus est? Et quem

Having seen what the christians, both unitarians and trinitarians, and also what the Jews, thought of the doctrine of the Old Testament concerning God, it may be some farther satisfaction to know in what manner the heathens decided in this case. We have the opinion of the emperor Julian on this subject, and it is decisively in favour of the Jews, and the unitarian christians. He says, “Moses not only once, or “twice, or three times, but many times

quem toties mater illius, novem graviditatis mensibus, eo detulit, quo fatura itabat? Quicque tempore nativitatis editus est inquinatus, et sordens, involutus secundinis, et abominabilis sanguine partus ac profluvii. Nizzachon. Vetus, p. 7.

* Quod si dicat adversarius: non inquinatus fuit intra viscera ejus. Nam, cum in Maria muliebris consuetudo defecisset, intravit eam spiritus, exivitque sine dolore, et sine sanguinis sorditie. Ad hæc respondere licet: annon vos fatemini eam obtulisse sacrificium puerperarum, cujus immundities causa erat? Idem enim sacrificium offerebant leprosus, hæmorrhousa, et puerpera, par turturum, aut duos pullos columbarum. Ibid.

“commands

“ commands to worship only one God, “ who, he says, is over all. He mentions
 “ no other God, but only angels, and lords, “ and many gods,” that is, the heathen gods. “ This great Being he made to be “ the first, but he made no second, like him, “ or unlike him, as you have done. If you “ can produce a single expression in Moses “ to this purpose, do it. That saying of “ his, A prophet shall the Lord your God “ raise up unto you, of your brethren, like “ unto me, bear him, is not said of the son “ of Mary. But if this be granted to you,
 “ he says that he shall be like to himself,
 “ and not to God, a prophet like himself,
 “ of man, and not of God*.”

* Ο τοιγυν Μωσής εκ απαξ, εδε δις, εδε τρις, αλλα πλειστακις εκ θεόν μονον αξιοι τιμην, ον δη κ' επι πασιν ονομαζει, θεον δε ελερον εδαμη, αγγελου δε ονομαζει, κ' κυριου, κ' μεντοι κ' θεου πλειονα. εξαίρειον κ' τον πατριον, αλλον δε εχ υπειληφε δευτερον, ελε ομοιον, ελε ανομοιον, κ' αδαπερ υμεις απεξειργασθε. ει δε εσι πα παρ υμιν υπερ τετων μια Μωσεως ρησις, ταυτην εφε δικαιοι προφερειν. Το γαρ, προφητην υμιν αναστησει κυριος ο θεος υμων, εκ των αδελφων υμων, ως εμε· αυτε αν-σεσθε· μαλιστα μεν εν εκ ειρηται περ. τε γεννηθεντι εκ Μαρίας. ει δε τις υμων ενεκα συγχωρησειεν, εαυτω φησιν αυτον ομοιον γεννησεσθαι, κ' ε τω θεω· προφητην ωσπερ εαυτον, κ' εξ ανθρωπων, αλλ' εκ εκ θεου. Cyril Contra J. l. lib. 8. Juliani. Opera, vol. 2. p. 253.

It has been seen that Philo personified the logos as much as the christian Fathers, and that they probably learnt of him the doctrine of a divine logos being the medium of all the communications of God to the patriarchs, and of this principle occasionally assuming a visible form. But Philo had no idea that this doctrine had any connexion with that of the Messiah, as he gives no hint that this was a character to be assumed by the logos; nor does it appear that the Jews in any age had such an expectation; though this has been pretended by some modern christians.

It is unquestionable that, in our Saviour's time, the Jews expected no other than a man in the character of their Messiah. Mary, the mother of Jesus, evidently expected that the Messiah was to be born in the usual way, of two human parents. For when the angel informed her that she should conceive and bear a son, who should be called the son of the highest, and to whom God would give the throne of his father David, she replied, Luke i. 34. How shall this this be, seeing I know not a man. Our Saviour could not possibly have puzzled the Jewish doctors as he did, by asking them how David could call the Messiah his lord, when he was his son, or descendant, on any other principle. For if they had themselves been fully persuaded that the Messiah, though descended from David, was the maker and God of David, a satisfactory answer to his question was very obvious. Origen reproaches Celsus for his ignorance, in not knowing that the Jews never believed that the Messiah would be God, or the Son of God*. Facundus very properly says, that “Martha and Mary would never have said to Christ, if thou hadst been here, had they thought him to be God omnipresent.” This writer also says, that the Jews always had expected, and that, in his time, they did expect, a mere man for their Messiah. “They did not know,” he says, “that Christ, the Son of God, was God; but they thought that Christ would be a mere * Ουκ οιδε μεντοι γε. οτι ε πανς τι Ιουδαιοι λεγουσι θεον ειναι τον Χριστον καλαθησεσθαι, η δεξ υιον. Con. Celsum, lib. 4. p. 162.

“ man, which any one may perceive that
 “ the Jews at this time also think *.”

Many christians imagine, that the child called Immanuel by Isaiah (chap. vii. 8.) must be God, because the word signifies, God with us. But the Jews understood their scriptures, and their own ideas with respect to giving names, too well to draw any such inference from this circumstance. Eusebius says, that they asserted it was not even the Messiah that was intended by Immanuel, but only some common child †.

Basnage, who studied the history and opinions of the Jews more carefully, perhaps, than any other modern writer, and who has written largely on this very subject, though a trinitarian himself, has exploded all the pretences of Cudworth, and others, to find the doctrine of the trinity,

* Sed non propterea Christum dei filium, deum sciebant; hominem autem purum arbitrati sunt Christum.— Quod etiam nunc putantes Judæos quilibet videbit. Lib. 9. cap. iii. p. 139.

† Ταῦτα δὲ πάντα περὶ τῆς τυγχόντος παιδὸς λεγέσθαι, ἐκ οὐδὲν ὡς συστήσαιεν οἱ ἐκ περιβολῆς. In El. cap. 9. Montfaucon's Collectio, vol. 2. p. 391.

either

either among the ancient or the modern Jews. “The christians and the Jews,” he says, “separate at the second step in religion. For after having adored together one God, absolutely perfect, they find immediately after the abyss of the trinity, which entirely separates them. The Jew considers three persons as three Gods, and this tritheism shocks him. The christian who believes the unity of one God, thinks that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, should all be called God, and have the same worship. It is impossible to reconcile opinions so contrary*.”

* “Les chretiens s’ecartent des Juifs des le second pas qu’ils font dans la religion. Car apres avoir adore ensemble un dieu, souverainement parfait, ils trouvent un moment apres l’abime de la trinite, qui les separe, et les eloigne souverainement. Le Juif regarde trois personnes comme trois dieux, et ce tritheisme lui fait horreur. Le chretien, qui croit l’unit  d’un Dieu, veut a meme tems q’on donne ce titre au pere, au fils, au Saint Esprit, et q’on les adore. Il est impossible de concilier des opinions si contraires; cependant il y a des theologiens hardis, qui ont tent  de le faire.” Hist. des Juifs, lib. 4. cap. 3. sect. 1.

This writer also says, that “ the Jews consider themselves as bearing their testimony to the unity of God among all the nations of the world*.” How far the Jews of late years are from admitting the divinity of the Messiah, we may judge from what Orobio said in his controversy with Limborch, viz. that, admitting what is impossible, that the Messiah whom they expect should teach that doctrine, he ought to be stoned as a false prophet †.

It has, however, been imagined by some, that the Jews had a knowledge of the doctrine of the trinity, that it spread from them among the Gentiles, and that traces of it may be perceived in the mysteries of heathen religions. But if this be the case, it is obvious to ask, why are no traces of this doctrine to be found in the Jewish scriptures, and the Jewish worship? Or, if the * “ Les temoins de l'unité de dieu dans toutes les nations du monde.” Hist. des Juifs, lib. 7. cap. 33. sect. 15.

† Dato impossibili quod Messias, quem expectamus, eam doctrinam [v. g. se equalem esse deo] Israellem edoceret, jure foret, ut pseudopropheta, lapidandus. Limberch's Amica Collatio, p. 111.

Jews had once been in possession of this knowledge, but had lost it in the time of our Saviour, why did not he, who rectified other abuses, rectify this, the most important of them all.

If an expectation of a Messiah had been prevalent among the Gentiles, we should certainly perceive some traces of it in their writings. It might have been expected, both on account of the interesting nature, and the obscurity of the subject, that there would have been different opinions about it, that it would have been a common topic in their philosophical schools, and that their historians would have given some account of the origin of such an expectation.

The sixth eclogue of Virgil may be allowed as a proof of such an expectation. But I do not imagine that any person now thinks that Virgil himself ever expected such a personage as he describes. The use that a poet might make of a vague report of a prophecy (brought probably from the east, and ultimately from the Jewish scriptures) but seriously believed by no person that we know of, merely to embellish a poem, is one thing; but the actual and universal expectation of such a person, is another

---

S E C T I O N IV.

Of the Jewish Angel METATRON, &c,

IN the third of Ben Mordecai's Letters, written by the late Rev. Mr. Taylor of Portsmouth, p. 72. I find the following extraordinary paragraph: " Among the notions of the more modern Jews, we must also observe, that the Cabbalists believed El Shaddai to be the same person as the angel Metatron, whom they supposed to be the instructor of Moses, and the Messiah, i. e. as Dr. Allix expresses it, He was, according to the christian phrase, the logos before his incarnation, or, according to the jewish phrase, the soul of the Messiah, whom they look upon as something between God and the angels, whom

“whom nothing separates from God.”
Allix, p. 456*.

“Bishop Pearson, in proving, by several “arguments, that Christ is called Jehovah, “says, the Jews themselves acknowledge “that Jehovah shall be clearly known in the “days of the Messiah, and not only so, but “that it is the name which doth properly “belong to him, for the proof of which he “quotes the book Sepher Ikkarim, ii. 8.
“The scripture calleth the name of the Messias “Jehovah our righteousness, and Midrash “Tillim, on Ps. xxi. God calleth the Messias

* Here Mr. Taylor inserts the following note in French, but I shall give it in English; Calmet, on the word Metatron, says, “The Hebrews give this name to the first of the angels, him who conducted them in the wilderness, and of whom it is said, in Moses, I shall send my angel to go before you. He acted towards the Israelites the part of the officer whom the Romans called Metator. He marked out the encampments, traced the form of them, the dimensions, extent, &c. He is thought to be the archangel Michael, who was at the head of the people in the wilderness, that it was he who wrestled with Jacob, who is called the face of God, in Exod. xxxiv. 14; and who is the mediator between God and man; that he writes down good actions, and keeps a register of them.”

“by

“by his own name, and his name is Jehovah, “as it is, Ex: xv. 3. The Lord is a man of “war, Jehovah is his name. And it is writ“ten of the Messias, Jer. xxiii. 6. And this “is the name which they shall call him, Jeho- “vah our righteousness. Thus Echa Rab-“biti, Lam. i. 6. What is the name of the “Messias? Rabba said, Jehovah is his “name, as it is said, Jer. xxiii. 6. The “same he reports of Rabbi Levi; and the “Bishop concludes, that the Rabbins then “did acknowledge, that the name Jehovah “did belong to the Messias.”

Consulting Dr. Allix's own work on the subject, I find the following reference to authorities for what he advances: “See “Reuchlin, L. i. De Cabala, p. 651. where “he proves Metatron to be the Messiah “from their writings; or, in short, take “the confession of Manasseh Ben Israel, “Q. 6. In Gen. f. 2.” The former of these authors I have not, and in the latter I find no such passage as Dr. Allix quotes. But as there is abundant evidence that the Jews in general, and in

in all ages, from the time of our Saviour to the present, considered their Messiah as a mere man, and a proper descendant of David, I own that I am disposed to examine, with some rigour, any pretended evidence to the contrary; though the speculative opinions of some of the Cabbalists among them is a thing of little consequence, when they can be proved to be different from those that were entertained by the nation in general.

What Calmet says concerning the angel Metatron in Ben Mordecai's note, has no relation to the Messiah; so that the most that I should be disposed to infer from what the Jewish Cabbalists may have said on the subject would be, that this Metatron was something similar to what Philo represents the logos as being, namely an efflux of the divinity, but no being, or person, permanently distinguished from him. And it is highly improbable, that any Jew should have supposed that their Messiah, a man descended from David, would have no proper human soul, besides this Metatron, or logos, supplying the place of it; though they might suppose the Messiah

Messiah to be distinguished by the presence and influence of this divine efflux.

The Jewish Cabbalists might easily admit even that the Messiah might be called Jehovah, without supposing that he was any thing more than a man, who had no existence before his birth. That it must have been the mere name, and not the nature of God, that the Jews supposed their Messiah to partake of, is all that can be admitted in the case. Several things in the scriptures are called by the name of Jehovah, as Jerusalem, in the passage above quoted, is called Jehovah our righteousness; but this never led the Jews to suppose, that there were two Jehovahs, a greater and a less. Nothing can be more expressly declared, than that there is but one Jehovah; and in the passages quoted by Bishop Pearson, there is no intimation of there being two Jehovahs; so that if the Messiah be Jehovah, there must have been no other Being above him, which Mr. Taylor would not suppose.

From reading the above quoted passage from Mr. Taylor, the reader would conclude, that it was the universal opinion of the Jewish Cabbalists, if not of the Jews in general, that this great angel Metatron was the soul of the Messiah. But this would be a mistake; for Beaufobre quotes some of them, who said, that the soul of the Messiah was the same that had been the soul of Adam, and likewise that of David. The Cabbalistic proof of this mystery, he says, is the letter A in Adam, meaning Adam, the D David, and the M the Messiah. Histoire de Manicheisme, vol. 2. p. 492. So little dependence is there on the whimsical and uncertain notions of these Jewish Cabbalists. However, when they are quoted, they ought to be quoted fairly. Mr. Taylor probably saw nothing of them, but what he found in Dr. Allix.
the

Basnage gives a large account of the Jewish angel Metatron, shewing that he is the same with the angel Michael, concerning whom the Jews had many absurd fancies. He particularly shews, that the name of God being in this angel, means nothing more than that the letters of the words Metatron, מטטרון, and those of Shadai, שדאי, considered as numerals express the same number

ber

ber, viz. 314. lib. 4. cap. 19. vol. 3. p. 137.

Many mistakes on this subject have been occasioned by its being taken for granted, that what is said of the logos may be applied to the Messiah, because the generality of christians have supposed them to be synonymous. But this was not the case with the Jews; and there is a passage quoted by Basnage, in his History of the Jews, L. IV. c. xxiv. f. 9. which shews, that some of their writers considered them as quite distinct from each other. “Jonathan says, that the Messiah “and Moses will appear at the end of the “world, the one in the desert, and the other “at Rome, and that the word, or the logos,
“will march between them.”

Till I see much more evidence than I have yet met with (and I have not spared any pains to come at it) I cannot admit that any Jew ever supposed that their Messiah either pre-existed, or was, properly speaking, God.

With respect to all these pretences to make the Jews favourable to the doctrine of the trinity, Mr. Basnage says, “They “cannot

“ cannot be advanced without the authors “ of them deceiving themselves. The “ Jews will never,” he says, “ be con“ vinced by endeavouring to persuade them “ that they believe what they do not believe,
 “ and that they do not oppose the doctrine “ of the trinity, which is the principal ob“ ject of their blasphemies.”

He mentions a Jewish writer, Jacob, the son of Amrām, who laughs at the pretensions of christians to bring proofs of the trinity from the cabbala. “ The cabbalists,” says he, “ under several of the letters conceal “ mysteries which the vulgar cannot dis“ cover, they only meant to teach the unity “ of God, and to explain his attributes, and “ they were very ignorant who looked into “ their writings for the trinity*.”

* Mais peut-on avancer, cela sans vouloir se tromper, puis que l'unité d'un dieu le dogme capital de Juifs, et que la pluralité des personnes fait le plus grand obstacle à leur conversion.—On ne convaincra jamais les Juifs, lors qu'on s'entêtera de leur persuader qu'ils ont cru ce qu'ils ne croient pas, et qu'ils ne s'opposent point au dogme de la trinité, qui est le principal objet de leurs blasphemes.—Jacob, fils d'Amram, dans un ouvrage manuscrit qu'il intitule la porte de la vérité, se moque des chrétiens qui tirent de la cabbale des preuves pour la trinitaté. Car, dit

How far Manassch Ben Israel was from supposing that there was any trinity in the divine nature, appears from the very section that Dr. Allix has quoted, which contains his interpretation of Gen. i. 26. And God said, Let us make man. After reciting a variety of interpretations, he concludes as follows, “ Or shall we say that, what seems “ to be of greater consequence, we gene“ rally undertake with more study and de“ liberation, and therefore that the scrip“ ture, in describing the creation of man, “ makes use of the plural number, Let us “ make, which is the language of a person “ commanding and exciting himself to un“ dertake and do any thing; so that God “ would shew that all other creatures were “ made for the use of man. But whether “ God be supposed to speak to all second “ causes, or to intelligencies only, or to the “ elements, or to souls, or to use the stile “ of a king, or lastly, whether he be sup-dit il, les cabbalistes enferment sous l’ecorce de la lettre des mysteres que le vulgaire ne decouvre pas. Les theologiens n’ont dessein que d’enseigner, l’unité de dieu, et d’expliquer ses attributes; et il faut être ignorant pour chercher chez eux la trinité. L.7. c.31. vol. 4. p.2159. &c.
 “ posed

“ posed to excite or command himself, all “ ground of controversy is removed. For “ it does not follow, that there is any mul“ tiplication of the first cause, which is “ most simple, and one, because the phrase, “ let us make, is used. For Moses might “ very safely make use of this language, “ since he every where most clearly teaches,
 “ that there is but one God; and, there“ fore, he only will defend his error by “ these words, who knowingly and wil-“ ingly errs *.”

* Aut dicemus, plerumque id, quod majoris momenti videtur, majori quoque studio et deliberatione nos aggredi: ideoque scripturam in creatione hominis peculiari modo loqui in plurali, faciamus: quod verbum videtur imperantis sibi ipsi, et ad suscipiendum ac faciendum aliquid incitantis: eaque re ostendere dominus vult, omnes reliquas creaturas suo beneficio creatas. Sed siue cum omnibus secundis, causis loquatur deus, siue cum intelligentiis tantum, siue cum elementis, siue cum animis, siue regio more hæc dicat, seu denique incitet semetipsum, sibi que imperet, conciliatione ejusmodi tota tollitur controversia. Etenim non quia faciamus dicitur, inde sequitur multiplicatio aliqua primæ causæ, quæ simplissima est et unica. Moses vero causam cur ita scriberet, justam habuit, quia clarissime passim docet unicum numen esse; eoque solus is, qui sciens volens errat, his verbis errorem suam defensurus est. Conciliator, p. 12.

CHAPTER II.

General Considerations relating to the supposed Conduct of Christ and the Apostles, with Respect to the Doctrines of his Pre-existence and Divinity.

THE whole nation of the Jews having been so well grounded in the great doctrine of the divine unity, ever since their return from the Babylonish captivity, and their attachment to it having strengthened continually, as the whole of their history shews, especially in consequence of their persecution by Antiochus Epiphanes, and during their subjection to the Romans (in which their utter abhorrence of every thing that had the appearance of idolatry, is seen upon all occasions) and this being well-known to, and allowed by all the christian Fathers; it could not but, even in their idea, require the greatest caution and address to teach them any doctrine that could be construed into an infringement of it.

That

That the doctrine of the divinity of Christ had this appearance, those Fathers acknowledged; when they supposed that Moses and the prophets could not teach it, lest it should have given the Jews a pretence for relapsing into the worship of many Gods.

They could not imagine that this difficulty would be at all removed by the christian doctrine of Jesus being the Messiah. Because it was well known to them that the Jews expected nothing more than a man for their Messiah; and even a man born in the usual way, a proper descendant of David. Their highest expectation concerning the Messiah was, that he would be a great prince, a conqueror, and a legislator, and perhaps that he would not die. The probability is, that they imagined that the race of their kings descended from David would be revived in him, and continue to the end of time. But all this is far short of the deification of the Messiah, or the idea of his being a great pre-existent spirit, the maker of the world under God, and who, in the name of God, had intercourse with the patriarchs. Such notions as these do not appear ever to have entered into the head of any Jew, extravagant as their expectations were concerning the dignity and power of their Messiah.

Here then was a great dilemma in which the christian Fathers, advocates for the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, found themselves. They were under the necessity of maintaining that they were doctrines taught either by Christ or the apostles, or they must have abandoned them themselves. Doctrines of this great extent and magnitude, and so revolting to the minds of all Jews, they could not but suppose would alarm them very much ; and therefore, that it was necessary to introduce them with the greatest caution. Still, however, they must have been taught them fully and explicitly at one time or other.

Accordingly, we find, in their accounts of the preaching of our Saviour and his apostles, that they did suppose that the greatest possible caution was used, and that this cautious proceeding was continued even till after the death of most of the apostles ; so that the doctrines of the pre-existence and I divinity

divinity of Christ were not fully discovered till the publication of the gospel of John, which was one of the last of all the books of the New Testament. But at that time they thought it to be absolutely necessary ; as otherwise there would hardly have been any besides unitarians in the church ; the knowledge of those great doctrines having, in their opinion, been confined to the apostles and the leading christians only.

A more improbable hypothesis was perhaps never formed by man, to account for any fact whatever ; and yet I do not know that the christian Fathers could have done any better. Let their successors, who are equally interested in the solution of the problem, do better if they can. But certainly they who were nearer to the times of the apostles, were in a situation to form a better judgment in this case than any persons at this day can pretend to be ; and therefore, I cannot help concluding, that they were well aware, that the supposition of this discovery having been made at an earlier period in the gospel history would have been liable to still greater objections than the hypothesis which they did adopt. It is most probable that the state of opinions in their own time made it absolutely necessary for them to have recourse to this hypothesis, lame and wretched as it is.

The primitive Fathers were not prevented by the supposition above-mentioned, from attempting to prove the pre-existence and divinity of Christ from those books of the New Testament which were published before the gospel of John; but neither were they prevented from attempting to prove the same doctrines, as we have seen, from the books of the Old Testament, though they acknowledged that the body of the Jewish nation never learned them from those books. In like manner though they supposed that the apostles left sufficient traces of these sublime doctrines in their writings, they thought that the common christians, for whose use they were written, did not perceive them, or make the proper inferences from them. That they should not have done this will not be thought extraordinary, if we consider the extreme caution with which, according to the account of these

these

these Fathers themselves, those doctrines were taught in these books.

Such a revolution has time made in our apprehensions of things, that the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ are now taught to children, as some of the first elements of christianity; but formerly the case was very different. They were considered as most sublime and difficult doctrines, and therefore, not to be taught till after every thing else relating to the gospel had been admitted and well understood. That these doctrines were actually considered in this light, appears from a great number of passages in the writings of the Fathers, many of which I shall introduce in other parts of this work, and especially some very striking ones from Origen. But not to advance a thing of this consequence without some evidence, in a place where it will be particularly wanted, I shall produce a few passages of this kind here.

Eusebius, after demonstrating the divine mission of Christ as a prophet, introduces his discourse concerning his pre-existence and divinity as a “mysterious and recondite doctrine*.”

Austin compares the doctrine of the humanity of Christ to milk, and the doctrine of the divinity to strong meat, fit for men †.

“The doctrine of the incarnation,” Chrysostom says, “was very difficult to be received ‡;” and then describing the great condescension of the maker of all things in submitting to be carried nine months in the womb of a woman, he says, that on this account the prophets announced it very obscurely. Again, observing that it was necessary to preach the humanity before the divinity of Christ, he says, “this was the order respecting his deity

* Καιρος ἤδη ἔχει ἀπορησίων ἐφαλάσθαι λόγων, τῶν περὶ τῆς καὶ αὐτοῦ μυστικώτερης θεολογίας. Demonstratio, lib. 4. cap. 1. p. 144.

† Ut nutritus atque roboratus perveniat ad manducandum cibum, quod est in principio erat verbum, et verbum erat apud deum, et deus erat verbum. Lac nostrum, Christus humilis est: cibus noster, idem ipse Christus æqualis patri. In 1 John. Opera, vol. 9. p. 594.

‡ Πάλιν δυσπαραδέκτος ἦν ὁ τῆς σαρκώσεως λόγος. Serm. 8. Opera, vol. 5. p. 131, 132.

“and

“ and incarnation, though it is introduced “ by John in a different manner from the “ rest, but in perfect agreement with them.
 “ But how? I say, that the doctrine not “ being taught at first, it was proper to “ dwell upon the incarnation, and to exer“ cise them in the doctrine of the flesh; “ teaching them, from things gross and “ sensible; but when the doctrine was fix“ ed, and the preaching received, it was “ then proper to ascend higher*.”

Cyril of Alexandria, explaining a passage in Isaiah, says, “ here he mixes a great and “ profound mystery, which required a mys“ tical initiation; for so it was revealed to
 “ the divine Peter †.”

* Οὕτω δὴ καὶ ἡ ταῖς αὐτῆς ἡ περὶ τῆς θεοῦ καὶ περὶ τῆς οἰκονομίας, εἰ καὶ ἀπεναντίας τοῖς ἄλλοις γέγονε παρὰ Ἰωάννη, ἀλλ' ὁμοίως σφοδρὰ συμφωνῶν αὐτοῖς. καὶ πῶς; ἐγὼ λέγω· ὅτι παρὰ μὲν τὴν ἀρχὴν εἶδον τὰ λόγια σπαρτέλιος, ἀκολούθῳ ἢ τῷ τῆς οἰκονομίας ἐνδιαφερόμενον λέγω, καὶ περὶ τῆς σαρκὸς γυμναζέειν διδασκαλίαν ἀπὸ τῶν παχυτέρων καὶ αἰσθητῶν προομιμαζόμενος. ἐπειδὴ δὲ ἐπαγγέλλεται τὰ τῆς γνώσεως, καὶ εἰδέξασθαι τὸ κηρύγμα, λοιπὸν εὐκαιρὸν ἦν ἀνωθεν ἀρχεσθαι. In Ps. 44. Opera, vol. 3. p. 223.

† Immiscet autem hic mysterium profundum et magnum, et quod superna quadam myftagogia opus habet. Revelatum est enim sic divino Petro. In Is. cap. 49. Opera, vol. 1. p. 472.

Agobard

Agobard considered what John taught concerning the divinity of Christ as being so difficult to be understood, that, in order to it, the same inspiration was necessary that he himself had*.

“Perfection,” says Œcumenious, “is the doctrine concerning the divinity of Christ, as far as the human understanding can comprehend it †.” Again, he says, “by first elements the apostle means the incarnation. For, as with respect to letters, so in the divine oracles, what relates to the incarnation must be learned in the first place; for these were capable of being received by unbelievers and children; but to philosophize concerning the divinity of Christ, is left to grown men. Do you see why he rests so long in these low things? It is on

* Inde qui hæc dixit accepit Johannes ille, qui discumbat super pectus domini, et de pectore domini bibebat quod nobis propinaret. Sed propinavit verba. Intellectum autem debes capere unde et ipse biberat qui tibi propinavit. De Imaginibus, p. 231.

† Τελειότης δὲ ἡ ἀνωτάτω ἢ περὶ τῆς θεολογίας χριστοῦ. καθόσον ἐστὶν ἀνθρώπων δύνατον, ἀκριβῆς καὶ ἀληθής. In Heb. Opera, vol. 2. p. 351.

“account

“ account of the weakness of his hearers, “ who were not able to receive the perfect “ doctrine. For which reason, having in “ the beginning of the epistle philosophized “ but a little concerning the divinity of “ Christ, he presently changed his dis“ course, and the epistle is full of low “ things*.” This he gives from Photius.
 Again, after having observed that the author of the epistle to the Hebrews had spoken of the naked word of God, he says, that “ he “ returned to the incarnation, lest he should “ confound his reader with the sublimity
 “ of his doctrine †.”

We see then, that, in the opinion of these Fathers (and some of them who write in this manner lived pretty early, though others of them wrote in a later period) there were very mysterious and difficult doctrines to be revealed, of which no person to whom christianity was preached had the least conception, and to which it was apprehended they must be exceedingly averse. Let us now see in what manner they supposed that our Saviour and the apostles conducted themselves in this nice circumstance, and what period it was that they thought to be the most proper for making the great discovery.

* Στοιχεια αρχης, την ενανθρωπησιν λεγει. ωσπερ γαρ επι των γραμματων πρωτον τα στοιχεια μηχανομεν. εως κη επι των θειων λογικων εδει πρωτον τα περι της ενανθρωπησεως διδασκεισθαι. ταυτα γαρ ταις απιστοις ελι κη νηπιαις ακοαις χωρητα. ως το γε περι της θεοτητος τε χριστου φιλοσοφειν, τελειων ην λοιπον. ορας την αιλιαν δι ην τοις ταπεινοις επιλογαζει; δια την των ακουσιων ασθενειαν. εκ ισχυουσιων τα τελεια δεξασθαι. διο κη παρα τας αρχας της επισολης βραχεια φιλοσοφησας περι της θεοτητος τε χριστου, ευδως κατεπαυσε τον λογον. των μεντοι ταπεινων η επισολη γεμει. Ibid. p. 352.

† Ερηκως περι γυμνη τε θεω λογω, ηλθεν εις την ενανθρωπησιν, ινα μη τω υψει των ειρημειων ιλιγγιαστωσι. In Heb. cap. i. vol. 2. p. 320.

To give some idea of the nature of this question, I would observe, that, if it should appear that a discovery of so great magnitude, as the Fathers represent this to have been, made no noise at all at the time fixed for the discovery, if it excited no particular attention; neither occasioning any doubt or controversy among christians themselves, nor bringing any objection to their doctrine from their enemies, it will afford a strong reason to suppose that no such discovery was made at that particular time. The Jews, to whom the gospel was first preached, as the Fathers admitted, expected nothing thing more than a man for their Messiah. They were fully sensible that no Jew had any idea of his having pre-existed at all, and much less of his having held any office of importance before he came into the world. When was it, then, that the Jews, to whom the gospel was preached, were taught that Christ had pre-existed, that he was the logos of God, the maker of the world under God, or properly God himself? Was it in our Saviour's own life-time? Was it at the descent of the Spirit at Pentecost? Or was it in a later period of the gospel history? If no traces can be perceived of any such discovery, in any period of the gospel history, an argument may be drawn from the consideration of it, highly unfavourable to the doctrine of Christ having any nature superior to that of man; and when this circumstance shall be sufficiently attended to (as I suspect it never has been yet) the Arian hypothesis must be greatly shaken, but especially that of the perfect equality of the Son to the Father.

Considerations of this kind, if they occur to him, no person, who thinks at all, can absolutely

absolutely neglect, so as to satisfy himself with having no hypothesis on the subject. We certainly find the apostles, as well as the rest of the Jews, without any knowledge of the divinity of Christ, with whom they lived and conversed as a man; and if they ever became acquainted with it, there must have been a time when it was either discovered by them, or made known to them; and the effects of the acquisition, or the communication of extraordinary knowledge, are, in general, proportionably conspicuous.

Had we no written history of our Saviour's life, or of the preaching of the apostles, or only some very concise one; still so very extraordinary an article as this would hardly have been unknown, much less when the history is so full and circumstantial as it is.

Had there been any pretence for imagining, that the Jews, in our Saviour's time, had any knowledge of the doctrine of the trinity, and that they expected the second person in it in the character of their Messiah, the question I propose would have been needless. But nothing can be more evident

evident than that, whatever some may fancy with respect to more ancient times, every notion of a trinity was obliterated from the minds of the Jews in our Saviour's time: It is therefore not only a curious, but a serious and important question, When was it introduced, and by what steps? I have answered it on my hypothesis, of its being an innovation and a corruption of the christian doctrine; let others do the same, on the idea of its being an essential part of it. Let us then see, what it is that the christian Fathers, who themselves believed the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, and who were much nearer than we are to the time when the gospel was promulgated, have said on this subject.

CHAPTER III.

Of the Conduct of our Saviour himself, with respect to his own supposed Pre-existence and Divinity.

IF we look into the gospel history, we shall find, that all that our Saviour himself taught, or insinuated, were his divine mission in general, or his being the Messiah in particular; with the doctrine of the resurrection, and that of himself coming again to raise the dead and judge the world. These doctrines, accompanied with moral instructions, and reproofs of the Pharisees, for corrupting the law of God, made up the whole of his preaching. He never told his disciples that he had pre-existed, or that he had had any thing to do before he came into the world; much less that he had made the world, and governed it; and there is abundant dant evidence that this was admitted by the christian Fathers.

Athanasius expresses his sense of the difficulty with which the Jews admitted that Christ was any thing more than a man very strongly in the following passage: “ He calls his humanity the son of “ man; for the Jews, always opposing God, “ held a twofold blasphemy with respect to “ Christ; for some of them being offended “ at his flesh, viz. the son of man, thought “ him to be a prophet, but not God, and “ called him a glutton and a wine-bibber; “ who were forgiven, for it was then the “ beginning of the preaching, and the world “ could not yet believe him to be God, “ who was made man; wherefore Christ “ says, Whosoever shall speak a word against “ the son of man, viz. his body, it shall be “ forgiven him. For I will venture to say, “ that not even the blessed disciples them- “ selves were fully persuaded concerning his “ divinity, till the holy spirit came upon them “ at the day of Pentecost. For when they “ saw him after his resurrection, some wor-

“ shipped, but others doubted, yet they “ were not on that account condemned *.”

The Fathers say, that whenever our Saviour said any thing that might lead his disciples to think that he was of a nature superior to that of man, they were offended, and that he conciliated their esteem whenever he represented himself as a mere man, such as they expected a prophet, and the Messiah to be. Chrysostom represents John the Baptist likewise as gaining profelytes to Christ, when he spake of him in low terms, but as deterring them when he seemed to speak of him in a higher capacity.

* Την δε ανθρωπολητα αυτε υιον ανθρωπου. νυν γαρ φησιν εδιδασθη ο υιος τε ανθρωπου. οι εν αει τω θεω προσκεκυιτες Ιουδαιοι. διττην προς χριστον την βλασφημιαν εκεληνηο. οι μεν γαρ τη σαρκι αυτε, ηγεν τω υιω τε ανθρωπε προσκοπιουτες, προσφητην αυτον, αλλ' ο θεον ειναι ειομιζον, η φαγον αυτον η οينوποτην εκαλεν, οισ η συγγνωμην εδωκεν. αρχη γαρ ην τε κηρυγματος, η εγω εχωρει ο κοσμος θεον πιστευειν γενομενοι ανθρωπον. διο φησιν ο χριστος οτι, ος αν ειπη λογον κατα τε υιου τε ανθρωπου, ηγουν τε σωματος αυτε, αφεδησεσθαι αυτω τολμα γαρ λεγειν οτι εδε αυτοι οι μακαριοι μαθηται το τελειον περι της αυτε θεοτητος ειχον φρονημα, εως το πνευμα το αγιον αυτοις τη πενητικω επιφοιτησεν. επει η μετα την αναστασιν ιδοντες αυτον, οι μεν προσεκυνησαν, οι δε εδιδασαν. αλλ' εκ εκ τετε κατεκριθησαν. Sermo major de fide, in Montfaucon's Collection, vol. 2. p. 39.

Observe,

“ Observe,” says he, “ how, when he said,
 “ He that cometh after me was before me,
 “ and I am not worthy to loose his shoe “ latchet; he took nobody. But when he “ spake of his humanity, and used a lower “ style, then the disciples followed him.
 “ Nor is this the only case of the kind, for “ the multitude were never brought to him “ when any thing high and lofty, as of a God, “ was said of him, so much as when they “ heard something mild and humble, and “ more adapted to the salvation of men*.”

Accordingly Chrysostom speaks of our Lord’s disciples as having regarded him as a man in their intercourse with him. Nathaniel, he says, “ confessed Christ as a man, “ when he addressed himself to him, by the “ title of Son of God. John, i. 49. as ap“ pears by his adding, thou art the king of * Θεα δε μοι κακεινο πως οτι μεν ελεγεν, ο οπισω με ερχομεν<sup>Θ</sup> εμπροσθεν με γεγνε, κη οτι εκ ειμι ικαν<sup>Θ</sup> λυσαι

 τον ιμανητα υποδηματ<sup>Θ</sup> αυτη, κδενα ειλεν. οτι δε περι της οικονομιας διελεχθη, κη επι το ταπεινοτερον τον λογον ηγαγε, τοτε ηκολυθησαν οι μαθηται. κ τετο δε μονον εσικατιδειν, αλλ’ οτι εκ ετως οι πολλοι προσαχονται οτ αν τι μεγα κη υψιλον περι δεκ λεγεται, ως οτ αν χρησον κη φιλανθρωπον κη εις την των ακουοντων σωτηριαν ηκον. In John i.
 Hom. 17. Opera, vol. 8. p. 93.

“Israel.” Ibid. p. 106. He says, that when Nathaniel was introduced to Jesus, his miraculous conception was not known*. As Chrysostom has written the most largely on this subject, I shall quote from him a passage or two of some extent, that we may more clearly perceive how he, and (as he was by no means singular in his ideas) how the christian Fathers in general thought with respect to this question.

“ Another reason,” he says, “ why Christ “ represented himself so much as a man, was “ the weakness of his hearers; and because “ they who first saw and heard him were “ not able to receive more sublime dis“ courses. And that this is no mere “ conjecture, I will endeavour to shew “ from the scriptures themselves. If he “ delivered any thing great, sublime, and “ worthy of his glory; but why do I “ say, great, sublime, and worthy of his “ glory; if he said any thing above “ human nature” (something is here omit“ ted in the Greek, but supplied in the “ Latin version) “ they were thrown into

* Τι δὲ υἱὸν Ἰησοῦ αὐτὸν λέγει, μὴ θορυβηθῆς. ἐτι γὰρ ἴτετε πᾶσι ἐνομίετο εἶναι. In John, Hom. 18. Op. vol. 8. p. 103.

“ tumult

“ tumult, and took offence; but if he said “ any thing low, and becoming a man, they “ ran to him, and received his doctrine.
 “ And where do we see this? In John “ chiefly. For when he said, Abraham, our “ father rejoiced to see my day, and he saw it,
 “ and was glad, they say, Thou art not yet “ forty years old, and hast thou seen Abra- “ ham. You see how they were affected to“ wards him as to a common man. What “ then did he reply? Before Abraham was “ I am; and they took up stones to stone “ him. He spake more distinctly, saying,
 “ The bread which I shall give for the life of “ the world is my flesh. They said, this is a “ hard saying, who can bear it; and many of “ his disciples went backward, and walked no “ more with him.

“ Tell me, then, what must he do? Must “ he always dwell upon these lofty topics, “ so as to drive away his prey, and deter all “ from his doctrine? But this did not be“ come his divine philanthropy. Again, “ when he said, He that heareth my words “ shall never taste of death, they said, Do we “ not say well, that thou hast a demon.—

“ Abraham is dead, and the prophets are dead,
 “ and thou sayest, he that heareth my words “ shall not taste of death. And is it to be “ wondered at, that the common people “ were thus affected towards him, when “ their rulers had the same opinion.” He then proceeds to instance in Nicodemus.— “ How then must he discourse with persons “ who would hear nothing sublime. Is it “ to be wondered at that he said nothing “ great or sublime concerning himself, to “ men creeping on the ground, and so “ meanly affected. What he said is suffi“ cient to shew this was the reason, and the “ excuse for such mean discourses.

“ On the other hand, as you see men “ scandalized, thrown into confusion, flying “ back from him, railing at him, and de“ serting him, if he said any thing great
 “ and lofty; so will I endeavour to shew
 “ you that they ran to him, and received “ his doctrine, if he said any thing low “ and mean. For the very same persons who “ had fled from him, immediately ran to “ him, when he said, I can do nothing of my- “ self but as the Father has taught me, so I “ speak.

“ Speak. And the evangelists, designing to “ shew us that they believed on account of “ the meanness of his discourse, said, When “ he spake these things many believed on him.
 “ You will, on many occasions, find the “ same thing happening. On this account “ he spake in many things as a man, but “ sometimes not as a man, but as became “ a god*.” He adds more to the same purpose.

* Εστι κ' ἕτερα μὲν ταύτην αἰτία, ἡ ἀσθενία τῶν ἀκουσίων, κ' τὸ μὴ δύνασθαι τοῖς πρῶτον αὐτοῦ ἰδοῦντας, κ' τοῖς πρῶτον ἀκουoύσας τῆς ὑψηλότερας τῶν δογματίων δεξασθαι λόγους. κ' οἷς ἡ σοχασμὸς το λεγομενον, ἀπ' αὐτῶν σοι παραστήσῃ τὸ πείρασμομαι τῶν γραφῶν, κ' δεῖξαι. εἰποῖτε τι μεγα κ' ὑψηλον κ' τῆς αὐτῆς δόξης ἀξίον ἐφ' ἡγεῖσθαι. τι λεγῶ μεγα κ' ὑψηλον, κ' τῆς αὐτῆς δόξης ἀξίον; εἰ ποτε τι [ὑπερ] τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης φυ-σεως εἶπε, πλεον ἐδορυβενίῳ κ' ἐσκανδαλιζόνῳ. εἰ δὲ ποτε τι ταπεινὸν κ' ἀνθρωπίνον, προσεῖρεχον, κ' τὸν λόγον ἐδεχόντο. κ' πᾶς τῶν ἐστὶν ἰδεῖν φησι; παρα τῷ Ἰωάννῃ μαρισά. εἰποῖτος γὰρ αὐτῆς. Ἀβρααμ ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν ἠγαλιασάτο, ἵνα ἰδῇ τὴν ἡμέραν τὴν ἐμὴν, κ' ἰδῆ, κ' ἐχαρῆ, λεγῶσι· τεσσαρακοντα εἴη ἔτι ἔχεις, κ' Ἀβρααμ εὐρακίας; οὐκ οἶς ὡς περὶ ἀνθρώπου φίλῃ διεκείντο; τι ἐν αὐτῆς. πρὸ τῆς τῶν Ἀβρααμ γίνεσθαι φησιν, ἐγὼ εἰμι. κ' ἦραν λίθους, ἵνα βαλλῶσιν αὐτόν. κ' τῶν μυστηρίων μακρῶς ἐπέειπε λόγους, λεγῶν. κ' ὁ ἀρὸς δὲ οὐκ ἐγὼ δώσω ὑπερ τῆς τῆς κοσμικῆς ζωῆς, Καρὲ μὲ ἐστὶν, ἐλεγεν σκληρῶς ἐστὶ ὁ λόγος οὗτος, τῆς δυνατῆς αὐτῆς ἀκρῆν; κ' πολλοὶ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτῆς ἀπηλθον εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, κ' ἐκέλι μὲν αὐτῆς περιπατεῖν, τι ἐν ἐδῆ ποιεῖν, εἶπε μοι: τοῖς ὑψηλοτέροις ἐνδίαρῆσθαι ῥημασι διηνηκῶς, ὥστε ἀποσοῦσθαι τὴν θῆραν, κ' παντῶν ἀποκρῆσασθαι τῆς διδασκαλίας; ἀλλ' ἐκ τῆς τῆς τῆς δεξ φιλανθρωπίας

Again, he says, "if they took up stones
 " to stone him, because he said that he was " before Abraham, what would they have " done if he had told them that he gave " the law to Moses. Wherefore, when he " said, it was said to the ancients, he did not " say by whom it had been said *."

ἄρωπιαις. ἡ γὰρ πάλιν ἐπειδὴ εἶπεν ὁ τὸν λόγον μὲ ἀκκῶν, θανάτῃ ἔ μὴ γευτέλαι εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα ἐλέγον. ἔ καλῶς ἐλεγόμεν. οἱ δαίμονιον ἔχεις; Ἀβραάμ ἀπέθανε, ἔ οἱ προφήται ἀπέθανον. ἔ σὺ λέγεις, οἱ ὁ τὸν λόγον μὲ ἀκκῶν ἔ μὴ γευτέλαι θανάτῃ; ἔ τι θάυμαστον εἰ τὸ πῶλος εἶω διέκειλο, ὅπῃ γε ἔ αὐτοὶ οἱ ἀρχόντες ταύτην ἔχον τὴν γνώμη.
 Πῶς ἐν τέλοισι διαλεγέσθαι ἔδει, τοῖς ἔδεν τῶν ὑψηλῶν φερῶσιν; οἱ γὰρ ὁλως ἐκ εἶπε τι μέγα ἔ ὑψηλὸν περὶ αὐτῆς, ἔ θάυμαστον ἀνθρώποις χαμαὶ ἔσυρομένοις, ἔ εἶως ἀσθηνῶς ἔχῶσιν. ἢ κεί μὲν ἐν καὶ τὰ εἰρημένα δείξαι, οἱ αὐτῆ ἢ αἰτία, καὶ ἢ προφασίς ἢν τῆς τῶν τότε λεγομένων εὐλείας.
 ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ ἀπὸ θάλαρᾶς μερῶς τῆ το πειρασμοὶ ποιῆσαι φανερον. ὡσ-περ γὰρ αὐτῆς ἰδέει ἀκατάλιζόμενες, θορυβομένες, ἀποπηδῶνας. λοιδο-ρημένες. φευγόντας εἶπὸ τι μέγα καὶ ὑψηλὸν ἐφθελῆλο ὁ χριστός, εἶως ὑμῖν αὐτῆς δείξαι πειρασμοὶ προσερχόντας, καλαδεχομένες τὴν διδασκα-λῖαν, εἰ πῶλο τι ταπεινὸν καὶ εὐλεές εἶπεν. αὐτοὶ γὰρ αὐτοὶ οἱ ἀποπηδῶνες, εἰπόντος αὐτῆ πάλιν οἱ ἀπ ἐμαυτῆς ποιῶ ἔδεν, ἀλλὰ καθῶς ἐδίδαξε μὲ ὁ πῶλος μὲ λαλῶ, εὐθὺς προσεδραμον. καὶ βελομένος ἡμῖν εἰδείξα-σθῆαι ὁ εὐαγγελιστῆς, οἱ διὰ τὴν ταπεινότητά τῶν ῥημάτων ἐπίστευσαν, ἐπιστήμαινῆται λέγων. ταῦτα αὐτῆ λαλῆσαντος πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτὸν ἔ ἀλλάχε πολλὰχῶ τέλο ευροὶ τῆς ἀν εἶω συμβαίνον. διὰ τέλο πολλὰ καὶ πολλὰμῖς ἀνθρώπων εἶφθελῆλο, ἔ πάλιν ἐκ ἀνθρώπων, ἀλλὰ ἔ θεοπρεπῶς. Or. 32. Opera, vol. I. p. 409, 410.

* Εἰ γὰρ, ἐπεὶ εἶπε, πρὸ τῆς Ἀβραάμ γεγεσθαι ἐγὼ εἰμι, μάταια αὐτὸν ἐπεχείρησαν, εἰ προσέθηκεν οἱ ἔ Μωσῆ αὐτὸς τὸν νομὸν ἐδώκε, τῆ ἐκ αἰν ἐποίησαν. Ser. 51. Opera, vol. 5. p. 696, 697.

“ Οὐγ

“Our Saviour,” he says, “did not always teach his own divinity in express words, leaving the fuller explication of it to his disciples. If,” says he, “they (meaning the Jews) were so much offended at the addition of another law to their former, much more must they have been with the doctrine of his divinity †.”

Chrysoftom frequently observes that Christ only intimated his divinity obscurely, and left the full discovery of it to his apostles. Thus he says, that “he himself never said plainly that he made the heavens and the earth, and the sea and all things visible and invisible. And why,” says he, “do you wonder that others should have said greater things of him than he said of himself, when he explained many things by actions, but never clearly in words. That he made man, he shewed clearly

* Δια δε τειλο κδε περι της θεοτης της εαυτης πανταχρη φαινεται σαφως παιδευων. Ει γορ η τε νομος προσθηκη τοςελον αυτης εδορυβει, πολλω μαλλον το θεον εαυτου αποφανειν. In Matt. v. Hom. 16. vol. 7. p. 154.

“enough,

“ enough, as by the blind man ; but when “ he was discoursing about the formation of “ the first man, he did not say I made “ them, but, he that made them, made them “ male and female. And that he made the “ world, he signified by the fishes, by the “ wine, by the loaves, &c. but never clearly “ in words*.” He even says, “ that the “ high dignity of Christ was more neces“ sary to be concealed from his disciples, “ because they would immediately have told “ every thing through an excess of joy †.”

“ Christ,” he says, “ did not reveal “ his divinity immediately, but was first “ thought to be a prophet, and the Christ,

* Και τι θαυμάζεις ει έλεροι μείζονα περι αυτς ειρηκασιν ων αυτς ειρημεν . οπε γε πολλα δια των πραγμων επιδεικνυμεν δια των ρηματων σαφως εκ ελεγεν ; οτι γαρ τον ανθρωπον αυτς εποιησεν εδειξε σαφως κ' δια τε τυφλς . ηνικα δε περι της εν αρχη πλατews ο λογς ην αυτω , εκ ειπεν οτι εγω εποιησα , αλλ' ο ποιησας αρσεν και θηλυ εποιησεν αυτες . Παλιν οτι τον κοσμον εδημιουργησεν και τα εν αυτω δια των ιχθων δια τε σις δια των αρτων — ρημασι εδαμς τετο σαφως ειπεν . In Matt. v. Opera, vol. 7. p. 154.

† Εδει γαρ τews λαυθανειν , και μαλιστα επι των μαθητων . και γαρ εκ πολλης ηδους παντα εκηριξαν . In Matt. cap. 8. Opera, vol. 7. p. 274.

“ simply “ simply a man, and it afterwards appeared “ by his works and his sayings what he “ really was *.”

Basil of Seleucia says, that “ during the “ storm, the disciples of Christ, judging by “ appearances, did not know that the deity “ was concealed in him ; for they would not “ have been terrified, if they had known “ that the author of the creation was giving “ orders to the work of his hands.” He adds, that “ the apostles themselves were as “ ignorant of his being God as the rest of “ the Jews, when some said that he was “ Elias, or Jeremias, or some of the pro“ phets ;” and that Christ, “ knowing the “ ignorance of Peter, suggested to him the “ answer that he made †.”

* Ου γὰρ εὐθὺς ἦμιν ἐαυτὴν τὴν θεοῦ εἰδὴ ἐξεκαλύπτει, ἀλλὰ πρῶτον μὲν ἐνομιζέτω εἶναι προφήτης, καὶ χριστός, ἀπλῶς ἀνθρώπος, ὑστερον δὲ ἐφανη, διὰ τῶν ἔργων καὶ τῶν ρημάτων, τὸ οὖρον ἦν. In Johan. Hom.
 2. Opera, vol. 8. p. 20.

† Τῷ γὰρ φαινόμενῳ προσπλάκοντες, τὴν κεκρυμμένην ἠγνοῦν θεο-
 ῦσα. ἅ γὰρ ἂν ἐξεπλάγησαν, κελουσία τῆ κίσει θεωρεῖντες οἱ δημιουργοὶ εἶναι τῆς κίσεως ἐπίσταμενοι.—Τοσαύτης ἐν ἀγνοίας τὰς τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ψυχῆς περὶ αὐτῆς βουκαμένης, εἰς τῶν ἀποστολῶν ὁ χορὸς ἀγνοίας ἐλευθερος ἐμμενεν.—Εἰδὼς δὲ τὴν ἀγνοίαν, υποβάλλει τῷ Πέτρῳ θεικῶς τὴν ἀποκρίσιν. Or. 25. p. 138, 139. 141.

Job

Job the monk observes, that “ Christ “ said, thy sins are forgiven thee, without “ intimating that he himself forgave them,
 “ by his own authority *.”

Photius says, “ when our Lord said,
 “ My Father is greater than I, the disciples “ were still imperfect, and thought the “ Father much greater. This they had “ learned from the Mosaic law, which “ taught the Father rather than the Son.
 “ This also our Saviour himself had perpe“ tually inculcated. This, therefore, being “ their fixed opinion, they said, Shew us
 “ the Father, and it sufficeth us †.” Af“ terwards, he says, “ they knew him to be “ God, after his sufferings and resurrec“ tion ‡.”

* ΟΤΙ ΤΟ ΜΕΝ ΑΦΕΩΝΤΑΙ ΕΝ ΕΧΕΙ ΤΩΝ ΡΗΜΑΤΩΝ ΠΡΟΦΟΡΑΝ, ΩΣ ΕΞ ΙΔΙΑΣ ΕΞΕΣΤΙΑΣ ΠΡΟΦΕΡΟΜΕΝΗΝ ΚΑΙ ΠΡΟΣΑΓΜΑΙΘΙ. Photii. Bib. sect. 222.
 p. 622.

† ΕΠΕΙ ΓΑΡ ΕΙΙ ΑΙΕΛΩΣ ΞΙΟΙ ΔΙΕΚΕΙΝΟ ΠΕΡΙ ΤΟΝ ΘΕΟΝ ΚΑΙ ΔΙΔΑΣΚΑΛΟΝ, ΜΕΙ-ΞΟΝΑ ΤΕ ΠΟΛΛΩ ΤΟΝ ΠΑΤΕΡΑ ΕΝΟΜΙΖΟΝ. ΤΕΙΟ ΜΕΝ ΤΩΝ ΜΩΣΑΙΩΝ ΝΟΜΩΝ ΕΜ-ΦΑΝΕΣΤΕΡΟΝ, ΑΥΤΟΙΣ ΤΟΝ ΠΑΤΕΡΑ Η ΤΟΝ ΥΙΟΝ ΚΑΙ ΑΝΑΓΓΕΛΛΟΝΤΩΝ. ΤΕΙΟ ΔΕ ΤΕ
 ΣΩΤΗΡΟΣ ΑΝΩ ΚΑΙ ΚΑΛΩ ΠΕΡΙΣΤΡΕΦΟΝΤΟΣ ΑΥΤΟΙΣ ΤΟΝ ΠΑΤΕΡΑ. ΕΠΕΙ ΕΝ ΤΟΙΑΥΤΗ ΤΙΣ ΑΥΤΟΙΣ ΕΝΕΣΤΗΡΙΝΟ Η ΔΟΞΑ, ΔΙΑ ΓΑΡ ΤΕΙΟ ΚΑΙ ΕΛΕΓΟΝ, ΔΕΙΞΟΝ ΗΜΙΝ ΤΟΝ ΠΑ-ΤΕΡΑ, ΚΑΙ ΑΡΧΕΙ ΗΜΙΝ. Epist. 176. p. 263.

‡ Ibid. p. 270.

Theodore†

Theodoret says, that “ before his suffer“ ings all persons held such an opinion “ concerning him,” viz. that he was a mere man, “ but after his resurrection and ascen“ sion, the descent of the Spirit, and the “ various miracles which they performed “ by invoking his name, all the believers “ knew that he was God, and the only be“ gotten Son of God*.” This is expressed in general terms, but it will appear hereafter, that it is to be understood with great limitations ; the knowledge of the divinity of Christ being, according to Theodoret himself, far from universal among the christians, long after the death of Christ.

Sometimes the Fathers speak of Peter as knowing that Christ was God before his death; by immediate revelation from the Father. Chrysofom also says, that before our Lord’s resurrection, the apostles had learned that God had a Son equal to the * Προ μεν εν τῃ παλαιοις τοιαυτας ειχον δοξας περι αυτου . μετα δε την αναστασιν, κη την εις ορανους ανωθασιν, κη την τε παναγια πνευματος επι φοιτησιν, κη τας παντοδαπας θαυματουργιας ας επετελεσεν, καλουντες αυτου το σεβασμιον ονομα, εγνωσαν απαντες οι πιστευοντες, οτι κη θεος εστι, κη τε θεος μονογενης υιος. Ad Rom. i. 4. Opera, vol. 3.

 p. 11.

Father.

Father*. But, in general, it was their opinion, that even Peter, as well as the other apostles, was ignorant of this great truth, till the descent of the Spirit at Pentecost; and they thought that this was one of the great truths alluded to, when our Lord said, that he had many things to teach his disciples, of which he could not inform them before his death.

Cyril of Alexandria, descanting on this text, says, they who were not renewed by the new rule of living, and the new doctrine of the Spirit, to them the recent preaching of the gospel, and the sublime mystery of the trinity, was not to be delivered. Justly, therefore, was the interpretation of higher things reserved to the future renovation of the Spirit. That before the resurrection of the Saviour, and the coming of the Spirit, the disciples were as Jews, is easy to prove †. Austin, however, * Εμαδου οτι υιος τε θεσ εστι, κ) υιον εχει ο θεος ομοτιμον.

In Acta, vol. 8. p. 459.

† Qui enim nondum nova vivendi norma, novaque doctrina per spiritum reformati sunt, iis prædicatio evangelii recens, et mysterium trinitatis sublime tradendum non est. Jure igitur renovationi per spiritum futuræ, altiorum says, that “the doctrine of the divinity of Christ could not be one of the things that Christ would not reveal, because they were not able to bear it, though some had said so*.” And yet this writer himself, as we shall see, acknowledges that the divinity of Christ was not taught with clearness, till it was done by the apostle John. Origen supposed that the things which our Saviour referred to were what related to the abolishing of the Jewish law †. But he thought that John was the person who first taught the doctrine of Christ’s pre-existence and divinity.

rerum interpretatio reservatur. Quod autem ante resurrectionem salvatoris, et ante spiritus adventum, Judaice discipuli vivebant, facillimum est probare. In John, lib. 11. cap. 41. Opera, vol. 1. p. 963.

* In principio erat verbum, et verbum erat apud deum, et deus erat verbum, hoc erat in principio apud deum, et alia quæ sequuntur, quoniam postea scripta sunt, nec ea dominum Jesu dixisse narratum est cum hic esset in carne, sed hæc unus ex apostolis ejus ipso ac spiritu ejus sibi revelante conscripsit: ex his esse quæ noluit tunc dominus dicere, quia ea discipuli portare non poterant, quis me audiat tam temere ista dicentem. In John, Tr. 96. cap. 16. Opera, vol. 9. p. 478.

† Ad Celsum, lib. 2. p. 57.

Before

Before I proceed to consider what the Fathers thought of the apostles' sentiments and conduct on the day of Pentecost, I shall take notice of another reason which they give for the care that was taken to conceal the knowledge of our Lord's divinity, which was to deceive the devil, lest he, knowing him to be the Messiah, should not have ventured to encounter him, and so, not being conquered by him, and especially by means of his death, the great object of his mission would not have been gained.

This thought first occurs in epistles ascribed to Ignatius, who says, “ the virginity of Mary, her delivery, and his death, were concealed from the prince of this world*.” Jerom says, that both the demons and the devil, rather suspected, than knew the Son of God †. Chrysostom, speaking of the mystery of the incarnation being

* Και ελαθε τον αρχοντα τε αιωνος τετε η παρθενια Μαρίας, κ' ο τοκετος αυτης, ομοιως κ' ο θανατος τε κυρις, τρια μυστηρια κραυγής, ατινα εν ψυχια θες επραχθη. Ad. Eph. S. 19. p. 16.

† Jam dæmones quam diaboli suspicari magis filium dei, quam nosse intelligendi sunt. In Matt. cap. 8. Opera, vol. 6. p. 12.

concealed

concealed from many, says, “Why do I say “many? Mary herself, when she carried him “in her womb, did not know the secret. And “why do I say men? The devil himself did “not know it, for if he had known it, he “would not afterwards have asked him upon “the mount, saying, If thou art the Son of “God; and he did this once, twice, and three “times. On this account he said to John,
 “who was beginning to reveal him, hold now;
 “that is, be silent now. It is not yet time “to reveal the secret of the incarnation; I “must yet deceive the devil; keep silence “now, for thus it becomes us*.” Again, he says, “the devil was at a loss to know “whether Christ was God or not. †.”

* Και τι λεγω τες πολλας, οτι γε εδε αυτη η κυφορησα παρθενος ηδει το απορηθιον. Και τι λεγω ανθρωπος, κη αυτον τον διαβολον ελανθανεν. εδε γαρ αν, ειπερ ηδει, ηρωλα αυτον μελα τοσατον χρονον επι τε ορες, ει υιος ει τε θεος, κη απαξ, κη δις κη τριτον τελο εποκει. διο κη τω Ιωαννη ελεγεν αρξαμενω αυτον εκκαληπειν: αφες περι τελεσι, σιγα νυν, εδεπω καιρος τε γαρ εκαλυφθεναι το απορηθιον της οικονομιας. ει λανθανειν τον διαβολον βελομαι. σιγα τοιουν φησι. ετω γαρ ωρεπον εστι ημιν. In Pf. 49. Opera, vol. 3. p. 289.

† Εν αμυχαια λοιπον ην, κη ελε ολι ανθρωπος ην ψιλος πιτευσαι ηδυνατο, δια τα περι αυτις λεχθεναι: εδε αυ παλιν παραδεξασθαι, ολι, υιος ην τε θεου, δια το βλεπειν αυτον πεινωγία. In Matt. Opera, vol. 7. p. 119.

There is something pleasant in the manner in which the Fathers sometimes speak of the devil being deceived by the humanity of Christ. Cyril of Jerusalem says, “it was necessary that Christ should suffer for us, but the devil would not have come near him, if he had known this; for if they had known, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. 1 Cor. ii. 8. The body, therefore, was the bait of death, that the dragon, thinking to swallow it down, might vomit up all that he had swallowed*.”

Ruffinus also represents the divinity of Christ as concealed within his humanity, to catch the devil as with a bait; and to prove this, he adduces many passages of the Old Testament, especially that of Ezek. I will draw thee out with my hook, &c †.

* Εδει παθειν υπερ ημων τον κυριον, αλλ' οτι αν ελομησε προσελθειν ο διαβολος, ει ηδει τελον. ει γαρ εγνωσαν, οτι αν τον κυριον της δοξης εσανρωσαν. δελεαρ τονν, τε θανατε γεγνε το σωμα, να ελπισας καταπιειν ο δρακων, εξεμεση η, της ηδη καταποθεντας... 1f. 25. 8. Cat. 12. Opera; p. 155.

† Ita et is qui habet mortis imperium rapuit quidem in morte corpus Jesu, non sentiens in eo hamum divinitatis inclusum; sed ubi devoravit, hæsit ipse continuo, et diruptis

Theodoret says, that Christ concealed his divinity in his temptation by the devil; and says, that when the devil heard him speak as a man, he was encouraged to proceed with the temptation. He represents him as saying, “ I heard the voice that came down “ from heaven, calling you the Son of God, “ but I shall not believe it till it appear by “ facts* .”

Job the monk also says, “ it was necessary that the mystery of the incarnation of “ the logos should be concealed, both to “ make it more acceptable to the hearers,
“ and also to deceive the devil †.”

Basil of Seleucia says, that, “ though the “ demons called Christ the Son of God, “ they did not know that he was God, be-tis inferni claustris, velut de profundo extractus, trahitur ut esca cæteris fiat. -In Symb. Opera, p. 179.

* Κρυπτεῖ μὲν τὴν θεότητα — ἐκ ἀπηγορεύσεως τὴν νικην ἀκρίβως ὡς ἀνθρώπου εἶναι. Τῆς μὲν γὰρ ἀνωθεν ἐλθεῖσθαι φωνῆς ἠέκουσα, φησι, τὸ ἴσοσέ καλεσθῆσθαι. ἀπίστῳ δὲ, εὖς ἀνελθεῖν τὴν πειρᾶν διδασκαλῶν. Opera, vol. 5. p. 46.

† Αναγκαιὸν δὲ ἦν τὸ ἐπισμιαζεσθαι τὸ μητρικὸν τῆς τε λογικῆς σαρκώσεως διὰ δὲ τὸ γενεσθαι τοῖς ἀκροῦμενοις εὐπαράδεικτον, καὶ ἵνα τὰ σκοτεινὰ τῶν ἀρχόντων λάθῃ. Photii. Bib. S. 222. p. 622.

G 2

“ cause

“ cause all very good men are called sons of God, and Israel is called his first born *.”

It was objected, that it was wrong in God to conquer the devil by deceiving him, the divinity of Christ being concealed under his human nature ; but Gregory Nyssen replies, that “ it was fair enough to deceive the de“ ceiver †.”

If it was imagined to be necessary that the devil, whose cunning and penetration was never thought very lightly of, should remain ignorant of our Lord's divinity, he must, no doubt, have concealed it with the greatest care, and have conducted himself in the most cautious manner. If the devil was not able to discover any thing of the matter, how could men find it out, and especially Jews, whose most sanguine expectations from the Messiah went no farther than to a man, born like other men ? Certainly they * ΥΙΟΥ ΜΕΝ ΘΕΟΥ ΚΑΛΩΣΙ, ΘΕΟΥ ΔΕ ΤΕΩΣ ΤΟΥ ΥΙΟΥ ΉΚ ΕΠΙΣΤΑΝΤΑΙ. ΥΙΟΥ ΓΑΡ ΘΕΟΥ ΚΕΚΛΗΝΤΑΙ, Κ' ΟΙ ΔΙΑΡΕΤΗΣ ΑΚΡΟΤΗΤΑ ΤΗΝ ΠΡΟΣ ΘΕΟΝ ΕΧΟΝΤΕΣ ΟΙΚΕΙΟΤΗΤΑ. ΠΡΩΤΟ ΤΟ ΠΡΩΤΟΤΟΜΟΣ ΥΙΟΣ ΜΕΣ ΙΣΡΑΗΛ. Or. 23. p. 128.

† Η ΜΕΝ ΓΑΡ ΜΑΙ' ΑΞΙΑΝ ΑΝΗΘΟΣΙΣ, ΔΙ' ΗΣ Ο ΑΠΑΛΕΩΝ ΑΝΙΘΑΤΑΙ ΔΙΚΑΙΟΝ ΔΕΙΜΝΥΣΙΝ. Or. 2. Opera, vol. 2. p. 515.

who

who thought that the devil continued ignorant of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ till after his death, must have thought that all the Jews, and our Lord's disciples, were ignorant of those doctrines. If, as Chrysofom says, it was particularly necessary to conceal this great secret from our Lord's disciples, lest they should have published it through joy, and also from his enemies, and the devil, lest they should have counteracted the design of his coming, we may take it for granted, that, in the opinion of the writers who have given us these representations, it was no more suspected at the time of Christ's death, that he had even pre-existed, or that he had had any thing to do in the making or governing the world, than that he was to be so great a personage before he was born.

Let us now see in what manner the apostles were supposed to have conducted themselves in this respect after our Lord's ascension; and after the descent of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost.

CHAPTER IV.

Of the Testimony of Athanasius to the Caution with which the Apostles divulged the Doctrines of the Pre-existence and Divinity of Christ.

AS the Testimony of Athanasius, on account of his known orthodoxy, and of course his unwillingness to make any needless concessions to his adversaries, may be thought to have more weight than any other, I shall, in the first place, produce it; and as exceptions have been made to it, I shall shew that, independent of any concurrent testimony of others of the Fathers, who have mentioned the subject, and which I shall produce hereafter, it clearly proves that, in his idea, the apostles thought it necessary to use great caution in divulging to the Jews so offensive a doctrine as that of the divinity of Christ; though, in consequence of their caution on this head, the Jewish christians did in their age continue unitarians, unitarians, believing Christ to be nothing more than a mere man, and also propagated the same doctrine among the Gentile converts. The passage itself is as follows :

“ Will they affirm,” says he, “ that the “ apostles held the doctrine of Arius, because “ they say that Christ was a man of Nazareth, “ and suffered on the cross ? or because they “ used these words, were the apostles of “ opinion that Christ was only a man, and “ nothing else ? By no means : this is “ not to be imagined. But this they did “ as wise master-builders, and stewards of “ the mysteries of God ; and they had this “ good reason for it. For the Jews of that “ age, being deceived themselves, and hav“ ing deceived the Gentiles, thought that “ Christ was a mere man, only that he came
“ of the seed of David, resembling other “ descendants of David, and did not be“ lieve either that he was God, or that the “ word was made flesh. On this account
“ the blessed apostles, with great prudence, “ in the first place, taught what related to “ the humanity of our Saviour to the Jews, “ that having fully persuaded them, from his “ miraculous works, that Christ was come,

 “ they might afterwards bring them to the “ belief of his divinity, shewing that his “ works were not those of a man, but of “ God. For example, Peter having said “ that Christ was a man who had suffered, “ immediately added, he is the prince of “ life. In the gospel he confesses, thou “ art the Christ, the Son of the living God ;
 “ and in his epistle, he calls him the bishop “ of souls *,”

* Ουδεν γαρ αυλοις αλολησον, οτι και αυλοι αποστολοι τα Αρειν εφρουν. ανθρωπον γαρ αυτον απο Ναζαρετ, και πατριον τον Χριστον απαγγελουσιν, εκεινων τοιουτω φανταζομεσιν, αρ επειδη τοις ρημασι τελεις εχρησαντο, μονον ανθρωπον ηλειςαν τον Χριστον οι αποστολοι, η πλεον εδεν ; μη γενειτο· εκ εσιν εδε εις νυν ποτε τετο λαβειν· αλλα η τετο ως αρχιτεκτονες σωφοι, η οικοδομοι μυστηριων θεσπεστικασι. η την αιτιαν εχουσιν ευλογον· επειδη γαρ οι ποτε Ιουδαιοι πλανηθεντες, η πλανησαντες Ελληνας, ενομιζον τον Χριστον ψιλον ανθρωπον, μονον εκ σπερματος Δαβιδ αρχεσαι, καθ ομοιοτητα των εκ του Δαβιδ αλλων γενομενων τεκνων· ετε δε θεον αυτον, εδε οτι λογος σαρξ εγενετο επι εεσον. τετε ενεκα, μετα πολλης της συνεσεως οι μακαριοι αποστολοι τα ανθρωπινα τε σωτηρις εξηγαλιδ πρωτον τοις Ιουδαιις, ινα ολωσ πεισαντες αυτες, εκ των φανομενων η γενομενων σημειων, εληλυθησαι τον Χριστον, λοιπον η εις τα περι της θεοτητος αυτε πεισαν αυτες αναγαγασε, δεικνυντες οτι τα γενομενα εργα εκ εσιν ανθρωπις, αλλα θεσ. αμελει Πετρος ο λεγων ανδρα παθητον τον Χριστον, ευδης συνηπτεν· τοσ αρχηγος της ζωης εσιν, &c. &c. De Sententia Dionysii, Opera, vol. 1. p. 553, 554.

There

There is a passage in the Sermo Major de fide of this writer, published in Montfaucon's Collectio Patrum, which bears some resemblance to this. Speaking of Peter preaching Christ as Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God, he says, "He calls him a man, and not God, with respect to the Jews, and others, who, like them, considered things according to the flesh, from that time to the present. And the apostles of our Lord, and our Lord himself, answered concerning himself as a man. Ye seek to kill me, a man who has told you the truth*.

It has been said, that Athanasius is here speaking of the unbelieving Jews. The expression is, οι τότε Ιουδαιοι the Jews of that age; which includes both the believing and unbelieving Jews. Had he been speaking of the Jews of his own time, it would, I own, have been probable that he meant the unbelieving Jews; but speaking as he does of the Jews at the very first promulgation of christianity among them, it is most natural to suppose that he meant all the Jews. Paul, long after his conversion to christianity, called himself a Jew. However, it will be sufficiently evident from the whole tenor of the passage, that he must have meant the believing Jews principally, and in some respects, the believing Jews only, exclusive of the unbelieving ones. And in this construction of the passage, I am by no means singular, but have the sanction of trinitarians themselves, as that of the Latin translator and Beaufobre.

* Ανδρα τε αυτον φησι, και ε θεοι, προς τες Ιουδαιους και τες ομοιως αυτοις κατα σαρκα φρονεοντας εκ τοτε και νυν. και οι αποστολοι και αυτος ο κυριος περι εαυτε ανθρωπινως απεκρινατο λεγων. τι με ζητειτε αποκτειναι, ανθρωπον ος την αληθειαν υμιν λελαληκα. Vol. 2. p. 16.

The Latin translator of Athanasius, a catholic, and certainly no unitarian, had so little suspicion of any other meaning, that he renders Χριστων in this place by Jesum. The learned Beaufobre, a trinitarian, and therefore, an unexceptionable judge in this case, quoting this very passage, does not hesitate to pronounce that they were believing Jews who were intended by the writer, "Ces Juifs," he says, "ne sont pas les Juifs incrédules, mais ceux qui faisoient profession du christianisme. But admitting admitting that the Jews here meant were unbelieving Jews, they were such as the apostles wished to convert to christianity, and many of them soon became christians.

But the circumstance which decisively proves that the Jews Athanasius is speaking of were christian Jews, is their drawing the Gentiles into the belief of the simple humanity of Christ. For certainly the gospel was preached to the Gentiles by the believing, and not by the unbelieving Jews. If it be supposed that the doctrine Athanasius speaks of was not concerning Jesus, but the Messiah in general, how could it interest the Gentiles? The doctrine, therefore, must have been that concerning Jesus, and consequently, the preachers must have been christian Jews, and their proselytes christian Gentiles. It is ridiculous to suppose that the question could be interesting to any others.

Supposing, however, the whole body of the Gentiles (little as they were concerned in the question) to have been previously taught by the Jews, that their Messiah, whenever he should come, would be nothing

thing more than a man; if this was an opinion that they were as fully persuaded of as Athanasius represents the Jews, their teachers, to have been, the same caution must have been as necessary with respect to them, as with respect to the Jews themselves, and for the same reason.

It has been said, that Athanasius says nothing about the caution of the apostles, but only speaks of their prudence, in teaching what was more easy and necessary, before that which was more difficult and less necessary. But the term συνεσις, in the connexion in which it stands, can bear no other sense than caution, and great caution, μετὰ πολλῆς τῆς συνεσεως, and it appears from the whole tenor of the discourse, that Athanasius could have intended nothing else than to describe the prudence, or extreme caution of the apostles, and to account for it. He evidently does not represent them as deferring the communication of the doctrine of the divinity of Christ, on account of its being more conveniently taught afterwards, as part of a system of faith; but only lest it should have given offence to the Jews.

If

If skill, or prudence, in these circumstances, be not the same thing with caution, I do not know what is meant by caution.

It has been said that Athanasius speaks of the rapidity with which Peter proceeded to teach the doctrine of the divinity of Christ. On the other hand, I find no trace of rapidity in this account of the apostles conduct. All that approaches to it is that, immediately after any mention of the humanity of Christ (which he speaks of as necessary on account of the Jewish prejudices) he says the apostles subjoin some expressions which might have led their hearers to the knowledge of his divinity; but the instances he produces are such as plainly confute any pretensions to their being a distinct and full declaration of that doctrine.

The first instance he gives us is from the speech of Peter to the Jews on the day of Pentecost, in which he says (Acts ii. 22.) “ Ye men of Israel, hear these words, Jesus
 “ of Nazareth, a man approved of God “ among you, by miracles and wonders, and “ signs, which God did by him in the midst
 “ of

“ of you, as ye yourselves also know.” In this Athanasius acknowledges, that Peter preached the proper humanity of Christ, but says that, immediately afterwards (referring to his discourse on the cure of the lame man in the temple) he called him the prince of life (Acts iii. 10.) “ and killed the “ prince of life whom God hath raised from “ the dead.”

Had the apostle meant that his audience should have understood him as referring to the divinity of Christ by that expression, his prudence must have lasted but a very short time indeed ; probably not many days. If, therefore, his intention was, as Athanasius represents it, to preach the doctrine of the humanity of Christ in the first place, and not to divulge the doctrine of his divinity till they were firmly persuaded of his messiahship, he could not mean to allude to his divinity in this speech, which was addressed not to the believing, but to the unbelieving Jews. At least, he could only have thought of doing it in such a manner as that his hearers might afterwards infer the doctrine from it; and it must have required great ingenuity, ingenuity, and even a strong prepossession in favour of the divinity of Christ (the reverse of which this writer acknowledges) to imagine that this expression of prince of life, which so easily admits of another interpretation, had any such referencé. Moreover, in all the instances which Athanasius produces concerning the conduct of the apostles in this respect, from the book of Acts, he does not pretend to find one in which the divinity of Christ is distinctly preached, though he quotes four passages in which his humanity is plainly spoken of.

Besides, had Athanasius thought that the apostle had preached the doctrine of the divinity of Christ with much effect, it is probable that he would have added this circumstance to his narrative; as, from the object of the work in which the passage is introduced, it may be inferred, that he could not but have thought that it would have been sufficiently to his purpose. For, certainly, if he could have added that, notwithstanding their caution in preaching this extraordinary doctrine (against which he acknowledges the Jews had the strongest prejudices) judices) the apostles nevertheless did preach it with effect, and that it was the general belief of the Jewish christians in their time, he would have done it. It would certainly have favoured his great object in writing the piece, viz. the vindication of Dionysius, in using a like caution with respect to the Sabellians, to have added, that this prudence, or caution, was not, in either of the two cases, finally detrimental to the cause of truth. I therefore consider the silence of Athanasius on this head as a negative argument of some weight; and, upon the whole, I think that Athanasius must have supposed that both the Jewish and Gentile churches were unitarian in the time of the apostles. At least, he enables us to infer that it must have been so, which is quite sufficient for my argument.

Now if this caution was requisite in the first instance, and with respect to the first converts that the apostles made, it was equally requisite with respect to the rest, at least for the sake of others who were not yet converted, unless the first should have been enjoined secrecy on that head. For whenever it had been known that the apostles were preaching not such a messiah as they expected, viz. a man like themselves, but the eternal God, the difference was so great, that a general alarm would have been spread, and the conversion of the rest of the Jews (to a doctrine which must have appeared so highly improbable to them) would have been impeded. We may therefore presume that the apostles must have connived at this state of ignorance concerning the divinity of Christ, in the Jewish christians, till there was little hope of making any farther converts among the Jews, and till the gospel began to be preached to the Gentiles.

Indeed, this must have been the case according to Athanasius's own account; for he says, that these Jews, being in an error themselves, led the Gentiles into the same error. He must, therefore, be understood to say, that the Jewish converts, while (through the caution of the apostles) they were ignorant of the divinity of Christ, preached the gospel in that state to the Gentiles. And as he speaks of Gentiles in general, and without any respect to time, and also of their being actually brought over to that belief, it is impossible not to understand him of this caution, being continued till the gospel had been fully preached to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews. Besides, one of the instances that Athanasius here gives of the preaching of the simple humanity of Christ is taken from the discourse of the apostle Paul at Athens, which was about the year 53 after Christ; and, indeed, at this time the gospel had not been preached to any great extent among the Gentiles. For it was on this very journey that this apostle first preached the gospel in Macedonia and Greece.

If, according to Athanasius, the apostolical reserve with respect to the doctrine of the divinity of Christ continued till this time (and he says nothing concerning the termination of it) we may presume that this great doctrine, supposing it to have been known to the apostles, had not been publicly taught by them, till very near the time of their dispersion and death; and then I think it must have come too late, even from them.

For

For it appears from the book of Acts, that their mere authority was not sufficient to overbear the prejudices of their countrymen. At least, the communication of a doctrine of so extraordinary a nature, of which they had no conception, must have occasioned such an alarm and consternation, as we must have found some traces of in the history of the Acts of the apostles. It could not have been received without hesitation and debate.

If we can suppose that the apostles, some time before their death, did communicate this great and unexpected doctrine, the effects of such communication must have been very transient. For presently after the death of the apostles, we find all the Jewish christians distinguished by the name of Nazarenes, or Ebionites, and no trace of the doctrine of the divinity of Christ among them.

When all these things are considered, viz. that Athanasius acknowledged that it required great caution in the apostles to divulge the doctrine of the divinity of Christ, and that the gospel was preached with success among the Gentiles, while the Jews were ignorant of it, it can hardly be doubted, but that he must himself have considered the christian church in general as unitarian in the time of the apostles, at least till near the time of their dispersion and death.

According to Athanasius, the Jews were to be well grounded in the belief of Jesus being the Christ, before they could be taught the doctrine of his divinity. Now, if we look into the book of Acts, we shall clearly see, that they had not got beyond the first lesson in the apostolic age, the great burden of the preaching of the apostles being to persuade the Jews that Jesus was the Christ. That he was likewise God, they evidently left to their successors, who, indeed, did it most effectually, though it required a long course of time to succeed in it.

C H A P-

C H A P T E R V.

Of the concurrent Testimony of other Fathers to the caution of the Apostles, in teaching the Doctrines of the Pre-existence and Divinity of Christ.

I Have no great occasion to lay much stress on the testimony of Athanasius, as there is that of others of the Fathers sufficiently full and clear to the same purpose.

Chrysofom having said, that Christ taught his divinity by his works only, says, that “ Peter also, in the beginning, “ used the same method. For that, in his “ first discourse to the Jews, he taught no- “ thing clearly concerning his divinity ; “ and because they were then incapable of “ learning any thing clearly concerning it, “ he dwelt upon his humanity ; that, being “ accustomed to this, they might be pre- “ pared for what they were to be taught “ afterwards. And if any person,” he says, “ will attend to the whole of their preach-
 H 3’ “ ing,

“ing, he will see what I say very clearly,
 “For he calls him a man, and dwells upon “his suffering and resurrection, and things “belonging to the flesh. And Paul, when “he speaks of his being the Son of David “according to the flesh, teaches us nothing “farther, that what belonged to the huma“nity might be acknowledged. But the “son of thunder discourses concerning his “mysterious and eternal existence; so that, “omitting what he did, he relates what he “was *.”

The same writer says, that the apostles concealed the doctrine of the miraculous conception on account of the incredulity of * Δια τὸ τοῦ Πέτρος ἐν ἀρχῇ τῆς κηρυχτικῆς τῶν τρωπῶν· καὶ γὰρ τὴν αὐτὴν [πρωτὴν] πρὸς Ἰουδαίους ἐδημογόρει δὲ δημογορίαν· καὶ ἐπειδὴ ἔθεν περὶ τῆς θεοῦ αὐτῆς τῶς σαφῆς μαθεῖν ἰσχυρῶν, διὰ τὸ τοῖς περὶ τῆς οἰκονομίας ἐνδιαίρει λόγους· ἵνα τῶν ἡ ἀκοῆ γυμνασθεῖσα τῆ λοιπῆ προδοστικῆ διδασκαλίᾳ· καὶ εἰ βεβαίως τις τὴν δημογορίαν πασαν ἀνωθεν διελθεῖν, εὐρησῆι τὸ λεγόμενον Ἐφροδρα διαλαμπόν· καὶ γὰρ ἀνδρῶν αὐτῶν καλεῖ καὶ αὐτῶν, καὶ τοῖς τῶν πατρῶν καὶ τῆς ἀναστάσεως καὶ τῆς κατὰ σάρκα γεννήσεως ἐνδιαίρει λόγους· καὶ Παῦλος δὲ, εἰ ἂν λεγῆι, τῶν γενομένων ἐκ σπερματός Δαβὶδ κατὰ σάρκα, ἔθεν ἕτερον ἡμᾶς παιδεύει, ἀλλ’ ὅτι τοῦ ἐποίησεν ἐπὶ τῆς οἰκονομίας παρεληπταί· ὁ καὶ ἡμεῖς ὁμολογούμεν· ἀλλ’ ὁ τῆς βροντῆς υἱὸς περὶ τῆς ἀρετῆς καὶ προαιωνίου ἡμῶν υπαρέξεως διαλεγεῖται τῶν· διὰ τῆς τοῦ ἐποίησεν ἀφείας, τὸ ἦν ἐθήκεν. In John, Hom. 2. Opera, vol. 8. p. 20:

the

the Jews with respect to it, and that when they began to preach the gospel, they insisted chiefly on the resurrection of Christ. With respect to the former (and the same may, no doubt, be applied to the latter) he says, “ he did not give his own opinion “ only, but that which came by tradition “ from the Fathers and eminent men. He, “ therefore, would not have his hearers to “ be alarmed, or think his account of it “ extraordinary*.”

Thus, he says, that “ it was not to give “ offence to the Jews, that Peter, in his “ first speech to them, did not say that “ Christ did the wonderful works of which “ he spake, but that God did them by him ; “ that by speaking more modestly he might “ conciliate them to himself †.” The same caution he attributes to him in “ not saying “ that Christ, but that God spake by the * Αλλα μη θαυβεισθε προς το παραδοξον τας λεγομεναι : ε δε γαρ εμος ο λογος αλλα πατερων ημετερων θαυματων η επιστημων ανδρων :

In cap. Matt. 1. Hom. 3. vol. 7. p. 20.

† Ουκειν λεγει οτι αυτη, αλλ οτι δι αυτης ο θεος, ινα μαλλον τω μετρηαξεν εφελευσηται. In Acta Apostolorum, cap. 2. Hom. 6. vol. 8. p. 491.

“ mouth of his holy prophets, that by these “ means he might bring them gradually to “ the faith *.”

After treating pretty largely of the conduct of the apostles, with respect to their insisting on the doctrine of the resurrection of Christ, rather than that of his divinity, immediately after the descent of the Holy Spirit, he says, “ As to the Jews who had “ daily heard and been taught out of the “ law, Hear, O Israel, the Lord thy God is “ one Lord, and besides him there is no other,
 “ having seen him (Jesus) nailed to a cross, “ yea, having killed and buried him them“ selves, and not having seen him risen “ again; if they had heard that this person
 “ was God equal to the Father, would not “ they have rejected and spurned at it.” I want words in English to express the force of the Greek in this place. The latin translator renders it, nonne maxime omnes ab his verbis abhoruissent, ac resiliissent et oblatrassent. “ On this account,” he adds, “ they (the * Ου λεγει ων ειπεν ο χριστος, αλλ' ων ελαλησεν ο θεος, ει τι τω συσμιαζειν μαλλον αυτες επαγομενεις εις τωσιν ηρεμα. In Acta Apostolorum, Hom. 9. vol. 8. p. 511.

“apostles) brought them forwards gently
 “and by slow degrees, and used great art in “condescending to their weakneſs*.”

Chryſoſtom repreſents the apoſtle as beginning his epiſtle to the Hebrews with ſaying, that “it was God who ſpoke
 “by the prophets, and not that Chriſt “himſelf had ſpoken by them, becauſe “their minds were weak, and they were “not able to bear the doctrine concern“ing Chriſt †. He even ſays, that when * Πως δε αν Ιεβουαιοι οι καθ εκαστην ημεραν, μειθανοντες υπο τε νομα, Ανε Ισραηλ, κυριος ο θεος σε κυριος εις εσιν, κη πολλη αυτη εκ εσιν αλλος, επι ξυλας γαυρα ιδοντες προσηλωμενον αυτον, μαλλον δε κη γαυρωσαντες κη θαυσαντες, η εδε αναστανα θεασαμενοι. ακωντες οτι θεος εσιν αυτος εις, κη τω πατρι ισος, εκ αν μαλιτα παντων απεπηδησαν κη απεργαγησαν. Διατι τελο ηρεμα, κη καλα μικρον. αυτες προσεβλαξασι, κη πολλη μεν κεχηρηλαι τη της συγκαταβασεως οικονομια.

In Acta Hom. i. Opera, vol. 8. p. 447.

† Και θεα τι συνελως αυτο ειρηκε. η γαρ ειπεν ο θεος ελαλησεν μειθιοιγε αυτος ην ο λαλησας. αλλ επειδη ασθενεις αυτων ησαν αι ψυχαι, κη εδεπω ακουειν ηδυναντο τα περι τε χριστα, φησιν ο θεος δι αυτης ελαλησεν. In Heb. cap. i. Opera, vol. 10. p. 1756. i. e.

“See how prudently he spoke: for he said God spoke “though it was himself that spoke; but because their “minds were weak and they were not able to bear the “things concerning Chriſt, he ſays God ſpoke by him.”

N. B. The (ε) in the second clause of this passage must be

“ he there speaks of Christ as above the “ angels,” he still spake of his humanity. “ See,” says he, “ his great caution, ορα την συνεσιν την πολλην * , the very expression used by Athanasius on a similar occasion.

But we find no trace of either Jews or Gentiles having received these sublime doctrines that Chrysostom alludes to in the age of the apostles. Nay we see that he himself represents the apostle Paul as obliged to use the same caution with respect to the Jews, when he wrote the epistle to the Hebrews, which was so late as A. D. 62. about two years before his death.

Theodoret observes, that “ in the genealogy of Christ given by Matthew, this “ writer did not add according to the flesh, “ because the men of that time would not “ bear it;” evidently meaning, that they would thereby have been led into a suspi-be inserted by mistake for ( $\psi$ ) or some other particle, as it contradicts what is said in the close of the sentence, and the obvious sense of the whole. Or perhaps, the first  $\alpha\epsilon$  should have been  $\chi\psi$ .

* In Heb. cap. I. Opera, vol. 10. p. 1755.

cion that, in the idea of the writer, he had some higher origin, and that they would have been offended at it. “But the apostle Paul,” he says, “could not avoid that expression in his epistle to the Romans.” He adds that, “before his death, not only to the other Jews, but to the apostles themselves, he did not appear as a God, nor did his miracles lead them to form that opinion of him†.” This writer also says, that the apostles in mentioning the subjection of Christ to the Father (1 Cor. xv.) spake of him more lowly than was necessary for their advantage*.”

† Η γὰρ τὴ κατὰ σὰρκα προσθήκη, ἀντιτίθει ὡς τὴ θεὸς καὶ πατὴρ υἱὸς ἐστὶν ἀληθῶς κατὰ τὴν θεολογίαν. εἶδε γὰρ ἐπὶ τῶν τρεῶν μόνον οὐκ ὡς ὁμοιωτά, ἐστὶν εὐρεῖν τὸ κατὰ σὰρκα προσκειμένον. καὶ μαρτυροῦν ὁ μακάριος Ματθαῖος ὁ εὐαγγελιστὴς· εἰρηκῶς γὰρ Ἀβραὰμ ἐγεννήσθη τὸν Ἰσαακ, Ἰσαακ δὲ ἐγεννήσθη τὸν Ἰακώβ, Ἰακώβ δὲ ἐγεννήσθη τὸν Ἰσραὴλ, καὶ πᾶσαν ἐφεξῆς τὴν γενεαλογίαν διεξελθὼν, εἶδεν τὸ κατὰ σὰρκα προσκειμένον. οὐκ ἠμῶς γὰρ αὐτοῖς ἀνθρώποις ἐστὶν ἡ τοιαύτη προσθήκη. εὐλαβῶν δὲ, ἐπειδὴ ἐκ ἀνθρώπων μόνον ἐστὶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ θεὸς προαιωνίως ὁ ἐνανθρωπήσας θεὸς λόγος, τὴν σπερματικὴν τὴν Δαβὶδ μνημονεύσας ὁ θεὸς ἀποστόλος, ἀναγκαιῶς τὸ κατὰ σὰρκα προσέθηκε, σαφῶς ἡμᾶς διδάξας, πῶς μὲν υἱὸς ἐστὶ τὴν θεὸν, πῶς δὲ τὴν Δαβὶδ ἐχρημάτισε.— Πρὸς μὲν τὴν γαλιλαίαν καὶ τὴν παλαιστίνην, ὁ δεσπότης χριστὸς ἐμῶν τοῖς ἀλλοῖς Ἰσραηλῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτοῖς τοῖς ἀποστόλοις ἐκ ἐδοκίμασε εἶναι θεὸς. προσετίθει γὰρ τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, ἐσθιονίαν τε καὶ πινονίαν, καὶ καθενδονίαν, καὶ κοπιωνίαν θεωρούμενοι, καὶ εἶδε τὰ θαυμάσια αὐτῶν πρὸς ταύτην ἐποδηγεῖν τὴν δόξαν. αὐτῶν τοίνυν τὸ κατὰ τὴν θαλάτταν θεωρούμενοι θαύματα ἐλεγον πᾶσι ἐστὶν υἱὸς ὁ ἀνθρώπος, οὗ καὶ ἡ θαλάσσα καὶ οἱ ἀνεμοὶ ὑποκύνθουσιν αὐτῷ; διὰ τοῦ τρεῶν καὶ ὁ κύριος ἐλέγετο πρὸς αὐτοὺς. πολλὰ ἐχῶ λέγειν ὑμῖν, ἀλλ’ οὐ δύνασθε βαστάζειν αὐτῶν.— Ἡρῶ μὲν ἐν τῇ παλαιστίνῃ τοιαύτως

Œcumenius also says, that “ Peter in his first speech, though by saying that Christ rose according to the flesh, he intimated that he was God, yet refers all to the Father, that they might receive his sayings †.” He makes the same observation on Peter’s saying, the promise of the Spirit was from the Father. “ He refers things to the Father, ειχον δοξας περι αυτου . μελα δε την αναστασιν , κη την εις υρανους ανηβασιν , κη τε παναγια πνευματος επιφοιτησιν , κη τας παντοδαπως θαυματουργιας ας επελελθεν , καλεντες αυτου το σεβασμιον ονομα , εγνωσαν απαντες οι πιστευουσιτες , οτι κη θεος εστι , κη τε θεος μονογενης υιος . In Rom. cap. 1. Opera, vol. 3. p. 15. Ed. Halæ.

* Ο μεν εν θειος αποτολος την εκ της ελληνικης μυθολογιας φουομενην υφορωμενος βλαβην , ταυτα προσηδεικε , ταπεινοτεροις χρησαμενος λογους δια την εκεινων ωφελειαν . In 1 Cor. xv. Opera, vol. 3. p. 273.

† Και εδε εβλεψεν ηλθεν εις τον χριστον , αλλα παλιν εγκωμιαζειται ο Δαυιδ , δια τε , προρηθης εν υπαρχον , ινα δια την προς τιμην κη το γενος το απ εκεινου , τε χριστου δεξωνται τον περι της αναστασεως λογον . κη εκ ειπεν , οτι επηρησει αλο αυτω ο θεος αλλ’ ο μειζον κη απαρβαλον εν , το ωμοσε το δε κηλα σαρκα κηρυτλοητος εστιν , ως κη θεος χριστος , κη συνεστιν εν τω πατρι . παντα δε τω πατρι αναλιθησιν , ινα τωως παραδεξωνται τα λεγομενα . Opera, vol. 1. p. 21.

“ that

“ that he might draw his hearers *.” Again, he observes, that he said “ the Father, and not “ Christ, promised that appearance by Joel †.” On another part of his speech, in which mention is made of God glorifying his Son Jesus, he says, “ he spake humbly concern- “ ing him ‡.”

Quoting Theodoret, he “ calls low dif- “ courses concerning Christ the first ele- “ ments. To those who were not capable “ of a perfect faith, the preachers of the “ gospel offered what relates to the huma- “ nity of Christ. Thus the blessed Peter “ preaching to the Jews, measures his doc- “ trine by the weakness of his hearers. “ For he says, Jesus of Nazareth, a man “ approved of God among you. And ye “ have need, he says, from negligence, “ not being such (i. e. perfect) of milk, “ not of strong meat. He calls low dif-

* Και παλινω πατρι ανατιθησι το γεγονος. οιδε γαρ ετω τις ακροατας επισπωμενος. Oecumen, vol. 1. p. 21.

† Κατ αρχας μεν γαρ τον πρωτα [πα]ριεσα] ελεγεν ε των χειρων απαγγελιαδαι τετο δια Ιωηλ τε προφητε. Vol. 1. p. 21.

‡ Εη των ταπεινοτερων εχειται — δια τε ειπειν εκ ιδια δυναμει θαυμαλεργησαι — τω προσθειναι τον παιδα. ε γαρ το αυλοδοξασον εν προσθηκην δοξης λαβειν. Ibid. p. 28.

“ courses concerning Christ, those that re“ late to the flesh, milk, and strong meat “ for the perfect, discourses concerning the “ divinity of Christ. For those, there“ fore, who were babes in faith, there was “ need of low discourses, as milk is fit “ for babes; but for the perfect in faith;
 “ there was need of strong meat, the sublime “ philosophy concerning Christ. Every “ one, he says, who partakes of milk, that “ is, every one, who wants these low “ discourses concerning the humanity of “ Christ (for they are milk) is unskilful, “ and not a partaker of the word of righte“ ousness. By the word of righteousness, “ he means the doctrine of the divinity of “ Christ, &c.*”

* ΑΛΛΟ. τοιχεία της αρχης των λογικων τε δεξ, της ταπεινοτερης περι χριστου λογης εκαλεσε. τοις γαρ μηδε πω την ψισιν εσχηκοσι τελειαν, τα περι της ανθρωποληθως προσεφερον μονα, της αληθειας οι κηρικες. εως ο μακαριος Πιερρος Ιουδαϊοις δημηγορων εμελεση την δι-δασκαλιαν τη ασθενεια των ακουσιων. Ιησεν γαρ, εφη, τον Ναζωραιον, ανδρα απο της δεξ αποδειγμενον εις υμας. Και γεγονατε χρεϊαν εχουτες. Αυτιοι γεγονατε, φησιν, εκ ραθυμιας, εκ ουλις τοικιοι, γαλακτιος κ' ε γερεας τροφειας. γαλα λεγει της ταπεινης περι χριστου λογης, της περι της σαρκος: γερεαν δε τροφην, της τελειας της περι της θεοθλης αυλι.
 τοις εν ελι ιηπτοις την ψισιν, εδει λογων ταπεινων (καλαλληλον γαρ τοις ιηπτοις το γαλα) τοις δε τελειοις την ψισιν, της γερεας τροφης κ' της υψηλης

“ Having called discourses concerning
 “ the humanity of Christ, the first principles,
 “ and those concerning his divinity perfection, “ lest they should despond, as not “ being worthy of the most perfect dis“ courses, he endeavours to give them those “ that were perfect. And he says so, but “ not in the same sense in which he had “ used the word perfect before, for they “ were not able to bear it. But he disposes
 “ his discourse in another manner, calling “ first principles, baptism, the imposition of “ hands, and the sign;” perhaps that of the cross, “ and perfection, the philosophy of “ works *”

υψηλης περι χριστη φιλοσοφιας . πας γαρ ο μελεχων γαλακτος, πας γαρ φησιν, ο μελεχων λογων ταπεινων, των περι της ανθρωπινης τε κυριε (εισι γαρ το γαλα) απειρος εστι κη αμελοχος λογε δικαιοσυνης . λογον δεδικαιοσυνης λεγει, του περι της δευτηρας τε κυριε η σερεα τροφη .
 ο υψηλος λογος, κη τα υψηλα περι χριστη δογματα. In Heb. Opera,
 vol. 2. p. 353.

* Ανω ειπων αρχην τους περι ανθρωπινης τε κυριε λογους, τελειο-τητα δε τους περι δευτηρας . ινα μη αδημονωσιν εισι, ως μη αξιμμοι των τελειοτερων λογων λεγειν της τελειης πειραται . λεγει δε, εχ ως ανω τελειης εκαλεσε, (ε γαρ ισχυον ακουσαι .) αλλ' ελεως μεθοδευει τον λογον, αρχην μεν το βαπτισμα καλων, κη την εν αυτω των χειρων επιθεσις κη σφραγιδα, τελειοτητα δε, την δι εργα φιλοσοφιαν, Photius in Ecumen. in Heb. vol. 2 p. 354.

Commenting

Commenting on Heb. v. 7. he was heard, in that he feared, Œcumenius says, “ this he said on account of the weakness of his hearers *.” And again, speaking of God having raised up Christ, he says, “ the divine Paul often speaks in a low style ; saying, That the Father raised up Christ †.”

Theophylact, commenting on Heb. i. says, “ Why did he not say that Christ spake to us? It was both because they were weak, and not yet able to hear concerning Christ, and to shew, that the Old and the New Testament have the same author ‡.”

I shall now proceed to shew, that, in the opinion of the same Fathers, the apostles thought it necessary to observe the same caution in teaching the doctrine of the divinity of Christ to the Gentiles, that had been requisite with respect to the Jews.

* Και εισακουσθεις . Τοσβιον, φησιν, εσηκουσθη, ολι κη ανεση . τεισθς ειπε δια την ασθενειαν των ακουων, εγω μεγαλας εχωνων περι χρισυ δοξας . των δε ταπεινων τετων ρημων δυο αιτια, ητε καρς, κη η ασθενια των ακουων . In Heb. vol. 2. p. 349.

† Πολλαχθ γαρ ταπεινοτερα ο θειος Παυλος φθειγομενος, τον πατερα φησιν ανασησαι τον χρισον . Ibid. p. 310.

‡ Δια τι δε ακ ειπεν, ελαλησεν ημιν ο χριστος ; Αμα μεν, δια τδ ασθενεις ειναι αυτες, κη μηπω δυνασθαι ακουσαι περι τθ χρισυ . αμα δε κη δεινυων, ελι η παλαια κη η καινη, ενος εστι κη τθ αυτη . Vol. 2. p. 876.

CHAPTER VI.

Of the Caution observed by the Apostles in teaching the Doctrines of the Pre-existence and Divinity of Christ to the Gentile Converts.

THE apostles found the Jews fully persuaded concerning the doctrine of the divine unity, and on that account they are represented by the Fathers as cautious how they taught the doctrine of the divinity of Christ, lest their hearers should have been staggered at it, as if they had preached two Gods. The Gentiles were in a quite different situation, believing in a multiplicity of Gods; on which account it might be thought to require less caution to teach this favourite doctrine to them. But then, for the same reason for which it was thought improper for Moses and the prophets to teach it to the Jews, in the former periods of their history, when they were in danger of falling into idolatry, it was equally improper to insist upon it with the Gentiles, lest they should have been encouraged to persevere in the same system. Also, after they were brought to the worship of one God, they would have been no less averse to such a doctrine as the trinity than the Jews. On this account it was not less hazardous, according to Chrysoftom, to teach the doctrine of the divinity of Christ to the Gentiles than it had been to the Jews.

In the passage, part of which I have quoted above, after observing, that if the apostles had not conducted themselves in this cautious manner with respect to the Jews, their whole doctrine would have appeared incredible to them, he adds, “ and at Athens Paul calls “ him” (Jesus) “ simply a man, and nothing “ farther, and for a good reason. For if “ they often attempted to stone Christ him- “ self, when he spake of his equality with “ the Father, and called him on that account “ a blasphemer, they would hardly have re- “ ceived this doctrine from fishermen, espe- “ cially after speaking of him as crucified. “ And why do I speak of the Jews? when “ at that time even the disciples of Christ “ himself were often disturbed and scanda- “ lized at him, when they heard sublime “ doctrines

“doctrines; on which account he said, I “have many things to say to you, but ye are “not yet able to bear them. And if they “could not bear these things, who had liv“ed so long with him, and had received so “many mysteries, and seen so many mira“cles, how could men, who were then first “taken from their altars, idols, and sacri“fices, and cats, and crocodiles (for such “was the worship of the heathens) and “being then first brought off from these “abominations, readily receive sublime doc“trines * ?”

Theodoret, commenting on 1 Cor. viii.
 6. To us there is one God the Father, and one

* Εν δε Αθηναίς κ' ανθρωπον αυτον απλωσ καλει ο Παυλος, εδε πλεον ειπων. εικοσις. ει γαρ αυτον τον χριστον διαλεγομενον περι της εις τον πατερα ισότητος, λιθασαιπολλακις επιχειρησαν, κ' βλασφημον δια τειλο εκαλεν, σχολη γαρ παρα των αλιων τειλον τον λογον εδεξαυτο, κ' τειλο του γαιρου προχωρησαντες. Και τι δει λεγειν τες Ιεραεις. οτι γε κ' αυτοι τοτε πολλακις οι μαθηται των υφιλοπερων ακροντες εδορυθεντο κ' εσκανδαλιζοντο. δια τειλο κ' ελεγε πολλα εχω λεγειν υμιν αλλ ε δυνασθε βαταζειν αρι. ει δε εκεινοι εκ εδυναυτο οι συγγενομενοι χρονου τοσειλον, κ' τοσειλων κοινοησαντες απορητων, κ' τοσαυτα θεασαμενοι θαυμαα, πως ανθρωποι απο βαιμων, κ' ειδωλων, κ' θυσιων, κ' αιλζρων, κ' προκοδειλων, τοιαυτα γαρ ην των ελληνων σεβασμαα; κ' των αλλων των κακων τοτε παυτον αποσπασθεντες, αδρον τες υψηλης των δογματων εδεξαυτο λογες. In Acta, Hom. 1. Opera, vol. 8. p. 447.

Lord Jesus Christ, says, “ Here he calls the “ one God, and the other Lord, lest he “ should give those who were just freed “ from heathenism, and had learned the “ truth, a pretence for returning to their “ heathenism and idolatry *.”

Œcumenius, on the same place, says,
 “ The apostle speaks cautiously concerning “ the Father and the Son, calling the Father
 “ the one God, lest they should think there “ were two Gods; and the Son the one “ Lord, lest they should think there were “ two Lords. For if he had said God and “ God, the Greeks, from their ignorance, “ would have thought it had been poly“ theism; or if he had said Lord and Lord, “ they would have thought there were many “ Lords. This is the reason why he now “ says, that the Father was God, and the “ Son Lord. For he had premised that with “ us there was but one God. Had he called “ both the Father and the Son God, and * Εἰλαυθα μένοι τον μὲν θεον προσηγορευσε, τον δε κυριον ἵνα μη τοις ενάλχοις της Ελληνικης πλανης απαλλαγῆισι, χ' την αληθειαν μέλαμαθῆισι, παρασχη προφασιν εις την πολυθεον εξαπατην παλινδρομησαι.

 In Loc. Opera, vol. 3. p. 158.

“ Lord

“ Lord, he would have been found acting “ contrary to his own affirmation to the “ Greeks, and would have appeared to have “ introduced many Gods; and many Lords.
 “ Therefore he calls the Father God, and “ the Son Lord ; condescending to the state “ of novices in the Greeks*.” Again, speaking of God having raised Christ from the dead, he says, “ the apostle herein con“ descends to them as children, not that “ Christ was not able to raise himself †;”
 Theodoret also, in his exposition of 1 Cor.
 15. in which the apostle says, that the Son
 “ was subject to the Father, says, “ the divine “ apostle, fearing the evil that might arise

* Διο και βίως ασφαλως τε πατερος και τε υιου εμνησθη τον μεν πατερα ειπων ενα θεον, ινα μη δυο θεος νομισωσι, τον και υιον ενα κυ-ριον, ινα μη δυο κυριος νομισωσιν . ει γαρ ειπε θεον και θεον, πολυθειαν αν εξ απειριας ενομισαν Ελληνες, η κυριον και κυριον, πολυκυριότητα αν ενομισαν . ωτε και τε νυν ειπειν θεον πατερα και κυριον τον υιον αυτη η αιτια . ην γαρ υποσχομενος παρ ημιν ενα θεον εινα . ει εν ειπεν και τον πατερα και τον υιον, θεον η κυριον, παλιν ευρισκετο τη οικεια υπο-σχεται οσον προς Ελληνας εναλιεμενος, και πολυθειαν η πολυκυριότητα καλα το φαινομενον εισαγων . διο θεον ειπων τον πατερα, κυριον ειπε τον υιον, τη νηπιότητα συγκαταβαινων των Ελληνων. Opera, vol. i.
 p. 492.

† Ο δε θεος η τον κυριον ηγειρεν. Ετι νηπιος εστιν, εδει συγκαταβαινειν, και προς την νηπιότητα αυτων λαλειν . μη δορυβηθης ακεσας οτι ο θεος τον χριστον ηγειρεν . ε γαρ επει εκ ισχυρευ εαυτου εγειραι, τεισ-φησιν. Ibid. p. 469.

“ from

“ from the Grecian mythology, added these “ things, speaking in low terms for their “ advantage*.”

According to Œcumenius, those whom John, in his first epistle, addresses as children, were those who were acquainted with the humanity of Christ only, as the grown men were those who knew his divinity. Of the latter he says, that “ they knew him “ that was from the beginning. But who “ is from the beginning, but God the logos,
 “ who was in the beginning with God?” He represents him as explaining his own meaning in the following manner: “ Since “ I knew that you will receive my writings “ according to the difference in your ages, I “ must measure my doctrine according to your “ ages, and discourse with some as children “ who know the Father,” he means God the Father only; “ but to others as fathers, who “ know more than the children, and not as “ the father only, but as without origin and “ unsearchable, for he was in the begin“ ning. To these I must address more per-

* Ο μὲν ἐν θεῖος ἀποστόλος τὴν ἐκ τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς μυθολογίας φουρῆσιν ὑφορωμένος βλαβὴν, ταῦτα προσηδεῖκε, ταπεινοῦς χρισταμένος λόγοις διὰ τὴν ἐκείνων ὠφελίαν. Opera, vol. 3. p. 201.

“fect discourses*.” Inconsistently, however, with this, he says, that “by those who deny the Son, in this epistle, are meant they who say that Christ was a mere man;” and yet he says, that “by those who denied that Jesus was the Christ, were meant the Gnostics.”

Theophylact, commenting on 1 Cor. i. 8. says, “Since Paul was writing to the Greeks, who worshipped many Gods, and many Lords, on this account he does not call the Son God, lest they should think there were two Gods, as being accustomed to polytheism. Nor did he call the Father Lord, lest they should think there were many Lords. For the same reason he made no mention * Οἱς καὶ εἶναι τὴν γνῶσιν τῆς ἀρχῆς μαρτυρεῖ. τίς δὲ ὁ ἀρχῆς; εἰ μὴ ὁ θεὸς λόγος, ὅς ἦν ἐν ἀρχῇ πρὸς τὸν θεόν. Ἐπεὶ βούληται εὐφραίνει ὑμᾶς οὐδὲ κατὰ τὰς τῶν ἡλικίων διαφορὰς δεξιόθεν τὰ παρ’ ἐμῶν γραφομένα, ἀνάγκη καὶ μετὰ παραμέτρους τῆς διαδοχῆς τῆς ἡλικίας ὑμῶν τὴν διδασκαλίαν, καὶ τοῖς μὲν ὡς παιδίοις ἐπεγκωμοῦσι τὸν πατέρα (λέγει δὲ τὸν θεόν) διαλεχθῆναι. τοῖς δὲ ὡς πατράσιν, οἱ πολλοὶ εἶχον τῶν παιδίων κατὰ τὴν γνῶσιν, τὸ μὴ ὡς πατέρα μόνον ἐπεγκωμοῦναι, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὡς ἀναρχὸς καὶ ἀδιεξίτητος. ἦν γὰρ ἐν ἀρχῇ. τῆσιν δὲ καὶ τελευτήτων ἀξίον παραδεσθῆναι λόγῳ. In John, Opera, vol. 2. p. 570.

“ of the Holy Spirit, sparing the weakness “ of his hearers ; as the prophets do not “ mention the Son clearly, on account of “ the Jews, lest they should think of a “ generation with passion*.” In his Commentary on 1 Col. i. 12. he observes, that “ Paul mentions giving thanks to the Fa“ ther only. He does the same,” he says,
 “ in the epistle to the Corinthians, bring“ ing them gradually to the doctrine con“ cerning the Son †.”

The same writer, in his Commentary on 1 Tim. ii. 5. There is one God, and one mediator between God and Man, the man Christ Jesus, says, “ he does not speak plainly “ concerning the deity of Christ, because “ polytheism then abounded, and lest he

* Αλλ' επειδὴ πρὸς ἑλληνας ἦν ὁ λόγος αὐτῶ, πολυθεϊαν πρεσβευσίας καὶ πολυκυριοῦσιν· δια τούτο, εἶπε καὶ τὸν υἱὸν θεοῦ εἶπεν, ἵνα μὴ δύο θεοὺς νομισώσιν, ἀλλ' πολυθεΐα ἐνεπίδομενοι· εἶπε καὶ τὸν πατέρα κυρίον, ἵνα μὴ πολλοὺς κυρίους καὶ παῆμιν εἶναι δοξώσιν. Δια ταύτην δὲ τὴν αἰτίαν, εἶδε τε πνευματος ἐμνησθῆναι ἐνλαύδα, φειδομένους τῆς ἀδυναμίας τῶν ἀκουῶν· ὡσπερ καὶ οἱ προφῆται τε οὐκ ἠτόλμασαν καὶ μεμνηταί, δια τῆς Ἰουδαίας, ἵνα μὴ ἐμπαθῆναι νομισώσιν τὴν γεννησιν. Opera,
 vol. 2. p. 226.

† Οὕτω καὶ ἐν τῇ πρὸς Κορινθίους ποιεῖ. Ἡρεμα δὲ ἐμβιβάζει αὐτὸς εἰς τὸν πατέρα υἱὸν λόγον, Vol. 2. p. 631.

“ should

“ should be thought to introduce many “ gods; where, though he says, one and “ one, he does not put them together, and “ say two, but only one and one. Such is “ the caution of the scriptures. On this “ account he makes no mention of the “ Spirit, lest he should seem to be a poly“ theist*.”

Such abundant evidence as this, when there is nothing to oppose to it (and many more passages to the same purpose might, I doubt not, be collected, if it could be thought that they were at all wanting) must surely satisfy all the impartial, that, in the opinion of the christian Fathers, the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ were considered as being of such a nature, as that it would not have been prudent to risk the communication of them either with Jews or Gentiles, on their first conversion to christianity. And the plain inference from this is, that the orthodox Fathers must necessarily have supposed, that the christian church, in general, was at first unitarian, and that it continued to be so a considerable time. For none of them say, or hint, when this caution on the part of the apostles ceased; and they represent them as using it in the very latest of their writings, as in those from Paul after his confinement at Rome, and therefore not long before the destruction of Jerusalem. At that time, therefore, they must have thought that the great body of christians were unitarians, and without being considered as heretics on that account.

* Ουκ ειπε δε φανερωσ κη περι της θεοτητος τε χριστου, επισημη πολυθεια τοτε εκρατει, κη ινα μη νομισθη κη αυτος πολλος θεος παρεισαγειν. οπεγε εδε το, εις κη εις, οταν λεγεται, περιηκει συντιθεναι, κη λεγειν δυο, αλλα εις κη εις. τσαυτη γαρ η ευλαβεια της γραφης. δια τωτο εκ εμνησθη εδε τε πνευματος, ινα μη δοξη πολυθεος ειναι. Vol. 2.

But the most decisive proof of this is their universally concluding, that the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ were never taught clearly and explicitly till it was done by John, in the introduction to his gospel, which they supposed to have been published among the last of the books of the New Testament, and after the death of the other apostles.

appellation is given to him in the title to the book of Revelation. It is mentioned by Athanasius in his Sermo Major de Fide*, and also by Cyril of Alexandria†. For a similar reason Isaiah is stiled Theologus by Eusebius, in Is. xxiv. 10.‡

I shall also remind my reader in this place, that this hypothesis of John having taught the doctrine of the divinity of Christ in the introduction of his gospel, does not occur in the earliest writers. These being nearer to the source of information, say that John had a view to the Gnostics only, both in his epistles, and the introduction to his gospel. This was the opinion of Irenæus, who wrote about the year 170; for which see this work, vol. I. p. 253. The first writer who says that John meant the unitarians, I believe, was Origen.

* Montfaucon's Collectio, vol. 2. p. 13.

† Hom. Opera, vol. 2. p. 75.

‡ Montfaucon's Collectio, vol. 2. p. 450.

S E C T I O N I.

The Acknowledgments of the Christian Fathers that John was the first who taught the doctrines above-mentioned.

ORIGEN, though a zealous defender of the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, yet, as will appear in its proper place, only considered them as more sublime doctrines, fit for the more perfect christians. He says, that “ John alone introduced the knowledge of the eternity of Christ to the minds of the Fathers*.” “ John himself was transformed into God, and so became partaker of the truth, and then pronounced that the word of God was in God from the beginning †.”

* Joannes sola ejus æterna in notitiam fidelium animarum introducit. Opera, vol. 2. p. 428.

† Sanctus itaque theologus in deum transmutatus, veritatis particeps, domini verbum subsistere in deo principio, hoc est deum filium in deo patre, pronunciat. Ibid.

“ No one,” says this writer, “ taught the “ divinity of Christ so clearly as John, who “ presents him to us, saying, I am the light “ of the world, I am the way, the truth, and “ the life, I am the resurrection, I am the “ gate, I am the good shepherd, and in the “ Revelation, I am the alpha and the omega,
 “ the beginning and the end, the first and the “ last. We may therefore boldly say, that,
 “ as the gospels are the first fruits” (or the “ most excellent part) “ of the scriptures, “ so the gospel of John is the first fruits of “ the gospels; the sense of which no per“ son can conceive, except he who reclines “ on the breast of Jesus, and who receives “ from Jesus his mother Mary, and makes “ her his own. He must be another John,
 “ who was shewn by Jesus as another Jesus.
 “ For he who is perfect does not himself “ live, but Christ lives in him. And since “ Christ lives in him, he says to Mary con“ cerning him, Behold thy Son, Christ “ himself*.”

* Ουδεις γαρ εκεινων ακρωτως εφανερωσεν αυτη την θεοτητα ως Ιωαννης, παρασησας αυτον λεγοντα, εγω ειμι το φως το του κοσμου, εγω ειμι η οδος, η η αληθεια, η η ζωη. εγω ειμι η αναστασις.

The meaning of this is, that, to have the knowledge of the sublime doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, as taught by John, a man must be a christian of the first class and rank, far above the ordinary sort. He must be a second John, and a second Jesus, imbibing their spirit, and entering into their most profound meaning.

Eusebius, says, that “ John began the doctrine of the divinity of Christ, that being reserved for him, as the most worthy*.”

But he who wrote the most largely, and the most eloquently on this subject is Chryανασασις . εγω ειμι η θυρα, εγω ειμι ο ποιμην ο καλος . και εν τη αποκαλυψει, εγω ειμι το α και το ω, η αρχη και το τελος, ο πρωτος και ο εσχατος . τολμητεον τοινυν ειπειν αταρχην μεν πασων γραφων ειναι τα ευαγγελια, των δε ευαγγελιων απαρχην το κατα Ιωαννην, ε τον νεν κθεις δυναται λαβειν μη αναπεσων επι το σηδθ Ιησε, μηδε λαβων απο Ιησε την Μαρριαν γενομενην και αυτη μητερα; και τηλικετον δε γενεσθαι δει τον εσομενον αλλον Ιωαννην, ως τε οιονει τον Ιωαννην δειχθηναι οντα Ιησεν απο Ιησε—και γαρ πας ο τετελειωμενος ζη εκετι, αλλ' εν αυτω ζη χρισος, και επει ζη εν αυτω χρισος, λεγεται περι αυτη τη Μαρρια, ιδε ουι σε ο χρισος.

 Comment. in Johan. vol. 2. p. 5.

* Της δε θεολογιας απαρξασθαι, ως αν αυτα προσετε δεικω πνευματος οια κρειττοσι παραπεφυλαγμενης . ταυτα μεν εν ημιν περι της τε κατα Ιωαννην ευαγγελικης γραφης ειρησθαι.
 Hist. lib. 3. cap. 24. p. 117.

fofom. And it will be seen that the greatness of the mystery, its alarming appearance to the Jews, and the extreme caution of the evangelists and apostles in divulging it, gave him great scope for magnifying the courage of John, in teaching what the other apostles had only ventured to hint at, and which was reserved for him, as the son of thunder, and whose emblem was the eagle, to express his soaring higher than any other that had gone before him.

“ John,” he says, “ alone taught the eternal and super-celestial wisdom*.” “ John first lighted up the lamp of theology; and all the most distant churches running to it, lighted up their lamps of theology, and returned rejoicing, saying, In the beginning was the logos†.”

Chrysofom represents all the preceding writers of the New Testament as children, who heard, but did not understand things, “ and who were busy about cheese-cakes * Μονος την αιωνιον κ̅ υπερκοσμιον φιλοσοφιαν κηρυξας. In John i. Opera, vol. 6. p. 235.

† Πρωτη αναφασα τον της θεολογιας λυχνον, πασαι των περιων αι εκκλησιαι προς σε δραμβσαι, εκαση την εαυτης λαμπαδα την θεολογιαν ανηψε, κ̅ υπερεψε χαιρσαι, εν αρχη ην ο λογος. Ibid. p. 604.

“ and

“last, advanced to the doctrine of the logos,” or the divinity of Christ*.

“In the beginning was the word. This doctrine was not published at first, for the world would not receive it. Wherefore Matthew, Mark, and Luke” (John is here added, but it must be an interpolation) “began at a distance. When they began the preaching, they did not immediately say what was becoming his dignity, but what would suit the hearers. Matthew, beginning his gospel, says, The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham. Why does he not say the son of God?”

* Πάντες εν εχωρησαν εις την της σαρκος οικονομίαν, κ̅ η̅ η̅ρεμα π̅ως, δια των θαυμαίων, ενωριζον την αξίαν. Εκρυπτελο δε ελι τε δεε λογε αξιωμα, Εκρυπτελο δε τα καλα των αιρετικων βελη, κ̅ το της ορθης δοξης επιειχισμα εδεποδε τω κηρυγματι της ευσεβειας εηγχερο. Ιωαννης τοιουν, ο υι̅ος της βρονης, τελευταιος, παρηλθεν επι την θεολογίαν. De Sigillis, Op. vol. 6. p 173. N. B. The sense of the passage absolutely requires εκρυπτελο and not εκρηπτελο in both the clauses, and in the latter it is so rendered by the Latin translator, though not in the former. The observation, that the first verses in the gospel of John are a refutation of all heresies is common with the Fathers. No person, except one who is pretty well conversant with them, can imagine how often those verses occur in their writings.

“ Why

“ Why does he conceal his dignity by poor “ language? Why does he conceal from “ men the things relating to his deity?
 “ He answers, I am preaching to the Jews, “ who do not even believe him to be “ a good man. They would not believe “ Christ to be the son of Abraham, and “ will they believe his being called the son “ of God?—The blessed Mark, also, when “ he applied himself to writing a gospel, “ taking courage from what had been done “ before” (meaning perhaps, by Matthew) “ calls him the Son of God; but he imme“ diately contracts his discourse, and cuts “ short what he had intended to say, that “ he might sooth his hearers. He there“ fore, introduces what he had to say, con“ cerning the Baptist, saying, The begin“ ning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, as it is “ written in Isaiab the prophet, &c.”

“ Luke follows in the third place, and “ goes a middle way. He touches upon “ the doctrine of the logos, but does not ex“ plain, or unfold his dignity; but says, “ Since many have undertaken to give an ac“ count of what has come to pass among us, it “seemed good to me also, who have attended “to every thing from the beginning, to write “in order as has been delivered to us, by those “who were eye-witnesses and ministers of the “logos. But though he mentions the lo“gos, he did not say that the logos was “God. What then does he do? Touch“ing upon the subject, and considering that “he was speaking in the ears of the dead, “he conceals his dignity, and brings on “the œconomy,” i. e. the doctrine of the incarnation or humanity of Christ. “There “was a priest Zacharias, &c.”

“John, therefore, the son of thunder, “last of all advanced to the doctrine of his “divinity, after those three heralds; and “with great propriety he followed them,
 “and they went before, lightening a little,
 “as the lightning precedes the thunder, lest “bursting from the clouds at once it should “stun the hearer.—They therefore lighten“ed the œconomy, or the humanity of Christ, “but he thundered out the theology,” that is, the doctrine of Christ’s divinity*.

* Εν αρχη ην ο λογος . ην ευθως τειλο εκηρυχθη . Ου γαρ εχωρει ο κοσμος . μακραν ημιν αι ευαγγελισται Ματθαιος, Μαρκος, Λουκας, εβ Ιωαννης.

Again, he introduces John as holding a soliloquy with himself, and saying, after Ιωαννης. Οτε ηρξαντο τε κηρυγματος, εκ ευδης ελαλησαν τα πρεποιλα τη αξια, αλλα τα αρμοζοντα τοις ακρωμενοις. ο Μωυσις, αρχην ποιησαμενος των ευαγγελιων, λεγει. βιβλος γενεσεως Ιησου χριστου υιου Δαβιδ, υιου Αβρααμ. διαλι, μη υιου θεου; διαλι πωληχη λεξει κρυπτεν την αξιαν; διαλι τοις ανθρωποις τα δεια κλυπτεν; παρα Ιωδαιου φησι κηρυτω, τοις μη ανθρωπον δικαιον ειναι πισευουσι. Τον χριστον υιον Αβρααμ επω εδεξαντο, κη υιον θεου κηλυγελλομενου ανεξονται.— Πάλιν ο μακαριος Μαρκος καθεις εαυτον εις το ευαγγελιον, κη θαρσησας τοις προγεγενησμενοις, λεγει μεν υιον θεου, αλλ ευδως συνστειλε τον λογον, κη εκλοθεωτε την εννοιαν, ινα μαλαξη τον ακροατην. Επαγει εν ευδως τα καλα τον βαπτιστην λεγων, αρχη τε ευαγγελιου Ιησου χριστη, καθως γεγραπται εν Ησαια τω προφητη.—Ο Λευκις απολαθει τριπλοσ, κη μεσοσ χωρει μελα τελων, κη απιλει μεν τε θεου λογον, κ μην ερμηνευει κη αναπλυσει την αξιαν. αλλα φησιν, επειδηπερ πολλοι επεχειρησαν αναλαξασθαι διηγησιν περι των απεληροφορημενων εν ημιν πραγμων, εδοξε καμοι παρακολεθησαι τοις πασιν απαρχης γραφαι, καθως παρεδωκαν ημιν οι απ αρχης αυλοπται, κη υπηρεται γενομενοι τε λογον. αλλα λογον μεν ειπεν, εκ ειπε δε ολι κη θεου ην ο λογον. τι εν κη αυλοσ ποιει; αφαιμενοσ το ειναι, κη εννοησας, ολι νεκραισ ανοαισ ενηχει, κρυπτεν την αξιαν, κη προφερει την σιμονομιαν. εγενετο ιερειου Ζαχαριασ. κη τα εξησ τε ευαγγελια. Ιωαννης τοιουν ο υιοσ της βρονησ τελευταιοσ παρηλθεν επι την θεολογιαν, μελα τωσ τρεισ κειμενσ κηρυκασ, κη ειολωσ ο μεν ηκολαθησεν, οι δε προελαθον, τα μικρα τωσ αστραπτονλεσ, ωσπερ γαρ της βρονησ προηγεται αστραπη, ινα μη αδρουν κειμνη εν των νεφων ραγεισα πληξη τον ακροατα. Ουλωσ επειδη εμελλε βρονταν ο Ιωαννης, προελαθον οι τρεισ ευαγγελιται δινη αστραπων, κη οι μεν ηγραφαν την σιμονομιαν, ο δε βροντα την θεολογιαν. De Sigillis, Opera, vol. 6. p. 171, &c.

K 3 “ considering considering the progress of heresy, “ Why “ do I delay? Why have I any longer pa“ tience? Why do I not bring forth the “ mystery hid from ages? Why do I hide

“ in myself, the wisdom which was before “ the ages, which I derive from the im“ mortal fountain on which I lean? Why “ do I not publish what angels are ignorant “ of? Why do I hide from the ends of “ the earth what no one knows, except the “ Father? Why do I not write what Mat“ thew, and Mark, and Luke, through a “ wife and praise-worthy fear, passed in “ silence, according to the orders that were “ given them. How shall I speak what “ was given me freely from above? Mat“ thew, according to what was granted to “ him, wrote according to his ability.
“ Mark, and Luke, in like manner, accord“ ing to the supply of the Spirit, have writ“ ten their books in a becoming manner.
“ I also will write, and add to those before,
“ the fourth fountain of life. For there “ remains to the divine voice the discourses “ of the divinity, and the world is in dan“ ger

“ger on this quarter. I will write a book “which will stop the mouths of all, who “speak unjustly of God. I will write a “book which will hide all the wisdom of “the world. I will write a book which “shall not be confined to what concerns “man. For the church is provided with “what Moses wrote concerning these “things, about the heavens and the earth, “&c.

“But I, leaving all things which have “come to pass from time, and in time, “will speak of that which was without “time, and is uncreated, about the logos “of God, which was generated from the “Father in an ineffable manner, about “which Moses dared not to speak. But “I am able to do all things, through Christ “who strengthens me.”

“The apostle John having reasoned thus “within himself, and having the pen of a “writer in his hand, and considering how “to begin the theology, rejoicing in spirit, “but with a trembling hand, is carried up“wards, being in the body at Ephesus, but “with a pure heart and holy spirit leaves

“the earth,” &c. Then representing himself as carried up into heaven, he says, that “fishing out of the Father’s bosom the doctrine of the divinity, he wrote in his body on earth, *In the beginning was the logos, &c.**”

* Ελογιζέτο εν εαυτώ λεγων, τι αναβαλλομαι; τι φησι μακροθυμω ει; τι ε προσφερω εις μεσον το απο των αιωνων κεκρυμμενον μυστηριον; τι αποκρυβω εαυτώ την απο των αιωνων σοφιαν, ην εκ της αδανατις πηγης επιπεσον ειληβσα; τι ε δημοσιευω, ου αγγελιοι αγνοουσι; τι εκ αποκαλυπτω τοις περασι, ου υδεις επιγινοσκει, ει μη ο πατήρ; τι ε γραφω, οπερ Μαΐθαιος κ̅ Μαρκος κ̅ Λευκας δι επαινευμενην δειλιαν παρασιωπησαντις παρεδραμον, τελεσαιτες τα προσελαγμενα αυτοις; ουδεν λαλησω καγω καλα την δοθεισαν μοι δωρεαν ανωθεν. Μαΐθαιος μεν οσον εχωρει, εγραφε καλα την ιδιαν δυναμιν, Μαρκος δε κ̅ Λευκας ομοιως καλα την τ̅ αγιω πνευματος χορηγιαν τας εαυτων βιβλους θεοπρεπως εδογματισαν. γραφω καγω κ̅ προσδεσω τοις εμπροσθεν την τελειωτην πηγην την ζωης. λειπει γαρ εις θεουσταλον φωνην ο περι θεολογιας λογος, κ̅ κινδυνευει ο κοσμος εν τω μερει τ̅ εγω. γραφω βιβλον, δι ης εμφραγη παντομοιου λαου καλα θεον αδικιαν. γραφω βιβλον, την καλυπτισαν πασαν εν κοσμω σοφιαν. γραφω βιβλον ε περι ανθρωπου διηγεμενην. ε γαρ λειπει τη εκκλησια, α περι τετων εγραφε Μωσης περι εραν̅ τε κ̅ γης κ̅ θαλασσων κ̅ ιχθυων κ̅ πετεινων κ̅ τετραποδων, κ̅ ερπειων κ̅ φυλων κ̅ σπερματων κ̅ φωτηρων κ̅ βρωματων κ̅ λοιπης κτισεως; εγω δε παντα τα απο χρον̅ κ̅ εν χρονω γινομενα καλαλειφας λαλησω περι τε αχρον̅ κ̅ ακλη̅, τε προ παντων των αιωνων εκ τε πατρο̅σ αρρητως γεννηθεις δεσ̅ λογος, περι ε Μωσης υλος ειπειν ενισχυσεν. εγω δε παντα ισχυω εν τω ενδυναμην̅ι με χρισω. ταυτα εν εαυτώ σκεπτομενος ο αποστολος Ιωαννης κ̅ τον γραφικον καλαμ̅ον εν τη χειρι καλεσων, κ̅ ενων̅ων πως της θεολογιας αρη̅ται, χαλων̅ μεν τη ψυχη, τρεμων δε τη χειρι

Chrysoſtom introduces Matthew alſo reaſoning on the ſubject of his ſaying ſo little, or rather nothing, of the divinity of Chriſt; and indeed, according to his account, it was a very dangerous and hazardous topic.—
 “ Now,” ſays he, “ let us awake, and ariſe, “ Behold the gates are open to us, but let us “ enter with great regularity, and with “ trembling; firſt paſſing the outer court.
 “ What is the outer court? The book of “ the generation of Jeſus Chriſt, the ſon of “ David, the ſon of Abraham. What is “ that you ſay?” (ſays the hearer) “ You “ promiſed to diſcourſe concerning the “ only begotten Son of God, and now you “ talk of David, a man who lived a thou“ ſand generations ago, and ſay, that he was “ his father and anceſtor? Hold” (ſays the evangeliſt) “ and do not expect to learn “ every thing immediately; but ſlowly, and “ by degrees: For you are yet in the outer “ court, and only near the gate; and why “ are you in haſte to get into the innermoſt χειρι, μείρασιος γινέσθαι, κὶ τῷ σωματι ἐν Ἐφεσῶν, τῇ καθάρᾳ καρδίᾳ τῷ πνευματικῷ μείζωνος υπηρχε, κὶ ἐκ τῆς παλιμῆς κολπῆς τὴν θεολογίαν ἀλευσας, τῷ σωματικῷ καὶ εὐγραφεν, ἐναρχῆν ἢ οὐ λογῶ. De Johanne, Opera, vol. 6. p. 606, &c.

“recess? You have not yet well examin“ed all that is without: For I do not as “yet relate to you the generation itself;
 “nor indeed shall I do it after this; for it “is inexplicable and ineffable.” Then reciting the dread that the prophet Isaiah had of the subject, which led him to exclaim,
Who shall declare his generation, he says, “it “is not my business to treat of this genera“tion, but of the earthly one, of which “there were ten thousand witnesses; and “concerning this I shall so discourse as the “gifts of the spirit shall enable me: for I “cannot even declare this with perfect clear“ness: for even this is very fearful. Do not, “therefore, think that you hear a small thing, “when you hear even this generation; but “raise your whole soul, and be full of hor“ror when you hear that God is come “upon earth;” and then he proceeds to describe at large all the awfulness of the incarnation, and the miraculous conception*.

* Διακαινωμεν τοιουν κη μη καθευδωμεν, ιδε γαρ ορω τας πωλας ημιν ανοιγομενας· αλλ' εισωμεν μελα ευλαξιας απασης κη τρομα, των προθυρων αυλων ευθεως επιβαινουτες. τινα δε εστι ταυτα τα προθυρα; βιβλ. γενεσεως Ιησφ χριστ υιου Δαβιδ υιου Αβρααμ. τι λεγεις; περι

But this was far short of the eternal generation from the Father.

“ Do not think,” says this writer, “ that “ you understand every thing, when you are “ informed that he was conceived by the “ Spirit; for there are many things of “ which we are yet ignorant, and which we “ have to learn; as how he who is infinite “ can be comprehended in a woman; how “ he who sustains all things can be carried τε μονογενες υις τε δεξ διαλεξασθαι επιησειλω, κ̅ τε Δαβιδ̅ μνημο-νευεις, ανδρωπ̅ε μετα μυριας γενεας γενομεν̅ε: κ̅ αυ̅λον̅ ει̅ναι̅ φ̅ης, και πα̅τερα και̅ προγον̅ον: επι̅σχε̅ς, και̅ μη̅ πα̅ντα̅ αν̅θρω̅ς̅ ξ̅η̅λει̅ μα̅θει̅ν, α̅λλ̅ η̅ρε̅μα̅ κ̅̅ κα̅λα̅ μικ̅ρον̅. εν̅ γα̅ρ̅ το̅ι̅ς̅ προ̅δυ̅ρ̅ει̅ς̅ ε̅τη̅κ̅ας̅ ε̅λι̅ πα̅ρ̅ αυ̅τα̅ τα̅ προ̅πυ̅λαι̅α̅. τι̅ το̅ι̅ν̅υ̅ν̅ σ̅πευ̅δει̅ς̅ π̅ρος̅ τα̅ αυ̅τα̅. ε̅πω̅ τα̅ ε̅ξ̅ω̅ κα̅λω̅ς̅ κα̅λω̅π̅λευ̅σ̅τας̅ απ̅α̅ν̅τα̅. ε̅δε̅ γα̅ρ̅ ε̅κει̅νη̅ν̅ σο̅ι̅ τ̅εω̅ς̅ δι̅η̅γη̅μα̅τι̅ την̅ γεν̅νη̅σιν̅.

 μα̅λλον̅ δε̅ ε̅δε̅ την̅ με̅λα̅ τα̅υ̅τα̅. ανε̅κ̅φ̅ρα̅τος̅ γα̅ρ̅ κ̅̅ απο̅ρ̅ρη̅τος̅. Την̅ γε̅νε̅αν̅ αυ̅τη̅ς̅ τις̅ δι̅η̅γη̅σει̅; ε̅ το̅ι̅ν̅υ̅ν̅ π̅ε̅ρι̅ ε̅κει̅νης̅ η̅μ̅ιν̅ ο̅ λο̅γος̅ ν̅υν̅, α̅λλα̅ π̅ε̅ρι̅ τα̅υ̅της̅ της̅ κα̅λω̅, της̅ εν̅ τη̅ γ̅η̅ γε̅νο̅με̅νης̅, της̅ με̅τα̅ μυ̅ρι̅ων̅ μα̅ρ̅τυ̅ρων̅, κ̅̅ π̅ε̅ρι̅ τα̅υ̅της̅ δε̅, ως̅ η̅μ̅ιν̅ δυνα̅τον̅ ει̅πει̅ν̅ δε̅ξα̅με̅νοι̅ς̅ την̅ τε̅ π̅νε̅υ̅μα̅τος̅ χα̅ριν̅, ε̅λω̅ δι̅η̅γη̅σο̅με̅θα̅. ε̅δε̅ γα̅ρ̅ τα̅υ̅τη̅ν̅ με̅λα̅ σα̅φ̅η̅ν̅ια̅ς̅ πα̅ρα̅- σ̅η̅σαι̅ εν̅ι̅· ε̅πει̅ κ̅̅ αυ̅τη̅ φ̅ρι̅κ̅ω̅δε̅σ̅α̅τη̅. μη̅ το̅ι̅ν̅υ̅ν̅ μι̅κ̅ρα̅ νο̅μι̅σ̅ης̅ ακ̅ρ̅ει̅ν̅, τα̅υ̅τη̅ν̅ ακ̅ρ̅ων̅ την̅ γεν̅νη̅σιν̅· α̅λλ̅̅ ανα̅σ̅η̅σ̅ον̅ σε̅ την̅̅ δι̅α̅νοι̅αν̅ κ̅̅ ευ̅θε̅ως̅ φ̅ρι̅ξ̅ον̅, ακ̅ρ̅ας̅ ο̅τι̅ θε̅ος̅ επι̅ γ̅ης̅ η̅λ̅θεν̅, ε̅λω̅ γα̅ρ̅ τ̅ε̅λο̅ θ̅α̅υ̅μα̅τον̅ κ̅̅ πα̅ρα̅- δε̅ξ̅ον̅ η̅ν̅, ως̅ κ̅̅ τ̅ε̅ς̅ α̅γγ̅ε̅λ̅ος̅ χο̅ρον̅ υπ̅ε̅ρ̅ τ̅ε̅λων̅ σ̅η̅σα̅ν̅ια̅ς̅ την̅ υπ̅ε̅ρ̅ της̅ οικ̅ο̅με̅νης̅ επι̅ τ̅ε̅λο̅ι̅ς̅ αν̅α̅φ̅ε̅ρει̅ν̅ ευ̅φ̅η̅μι̅αν̅. In Matt. 1. Opera,
 vol. 7. p. 12.

“ about

“ about by her; how a virgin can bring “ forth, and remain a virgin *.”

On this subject, which affords so much scope for eloquence, Epiphanius writes as follows: “ Wherefore the blessed John “ coming, and finding men employed about “ the humanity of Christ, and the Ebio-“ nites being in an error, about the earthly “ genealogy of Christ, deduced from Abra“ ham, carried by Luke as high as Adam,
 “ and finding the Cerinthians and Merin“ thians maintaining that he was a mere “ man, born by natural generation of both “ the sexes, and also the Nazarenes, and “ many other heresies; as coming last (for “ he was the fourth to write a gospel) be“ gan as it were to call back the wanderers, “ and those who were employed about the
 “ the humanity of Christ; and seeing some “ of them going into rough paths, leaving “ the strait and true path, cries, Whither “ are you going, whither are you walking,

* Μη δε νομισεις το παν μεμαθηκεναι, εκ πνευματου ακραν η γαρ πολλα αγνοουμεν εσι. Και τατο μανθανοντες, οιν πως ο πατερ εν μητρα εστιν; πως ο παντα συνεχων κοφορειται υπο γυναικος; πως τιχτει η παρθεν και μεγα παρθεν. In Matt. i. Opera, vol. 7. p. 31.

“ who

“ who tread a rough and dangerous path, “ leading to a precipice? It is not so. The “ God, the logos, which was begotten by “ the Father from all eternity, is not from “ Mary only. He is not from the time of “ Joseph, he is not from the time of Sala“ thiel, and Zorobabel, and David, and Abra“ ham, and Jacob, and Noah, and Adam;
 “ but in the beginning was the logos, and the “ logos was with God, and the logos was God.
 “ The was, and the was, and the was, do “ not admit of his having ever not been*.”

* Διο ἡ Ἰωάννης ελθὼν ὁ μακαρίθ, ἡ ἔυρον τὲς ἀνθρώπους ἠσχολλημένους περὶ τὴν καλῶ χριστὸ παρυσίαν, ἡ τῶν Ἑβραίων πλανηθέντων διὰ τὴν ἐσαρκον χριστὸ γενεαλογίαν, ἀπο Ἀβρααμ κατὰγομενήν, ἡ Λεκά αναγομενήν ἀχρὶ τοῦ Ἀδάμ, ἔυρον δε Κηρινθίαν, καὶ Μερνθίαν, ἐκ παραίρηθις αὐτὸν λέγοντας εἶναι ψιλον ἀνθρώπον, καὶ τὲς Ναζωραῖος, καὶ ἀλλὰς πῶτας αἰρεσεῖς, ὡς καλοπιν ελθὼν, τέλαρθ γὰρ ἔλος εὐαγγελιζέται, ἀρχέται ἀνακαλείθαι, ἀσειπεῖν, τὲς πλανηθείας, καὶ ἠσχολλημέους περὶ τὴν καλῶ χριστὸ παρυσίαν, καὶ λέγειν αὐτοῖς (ὡς καλοπιν βαιῶν, καὶ ὁρῶν τινὰς εἰς τραχείας ὁδὸς κεκλιέτας καὶ ἀρεθίας τὴν εὐθείαν καὶ ἀληθινὴν, ὡς εἰπειν) ποὶ φερεθε, ποὶ βαδιζέτε, οἱ τὴν τραχείαν ὁδὸν καὶ σκαρδαλωθὴ καὶ εἰς χασμα φερεσῶν βαδιζόντες; ἀνακάμψατε. Οὐκ εἰνεται, ἐκ εἰν ἀπο Μαρίας μόνον ὁ θεὸς λογθ, ὁ ἐκ πατρθ ἀνωθεν γε-γεννημένθ, ἐκ εἰν ἀπο τῶν χρόνων Ἰωσὴ τοῦ ταυτὸς ἑρμασε, ἐκ εἰν ἀπο τῶν χρόνων Σαλαθιηλ, καὶ Ζοροβαβηλ, καὶ Δαβὶθ, καὶ Ἀβρααμ, καὶ Ἰακώβ, καὶ Νῶε, καὶ Ἀδάμ, ἀλλ’ ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ λογος

Another passage in this writer, in nearly the same words, may be seen, p. 433, 434.

Jerom says, “ John the apostle, whom Jesus loved, the son of Zebedee, and brother of James, who was beheaded by Herod after the death of Christ, wrote his gospel the last of all, at the intreaty of the bishops of Asia, again Cerinthus, and other heretics, and especially the doctrine of the Ebionites, then gaining ground, who said that Christ had no being before he was born of Mary, whence he was compelled to declare his divine origin *.”

Ambrose says, “ If you enquire concerning his celestial generation, read the gos-ο λογος, και ο λογος ην προς τον θεον, και θεος ην ο λογος. τα δε ην, και ην, και ην εν υποδεχεται τε μη ειναι ποτε. HæT. 69. sect. 23. Opera, vol. 1. p. 747.

* Joannes Apostolus quem Jesus amavit plurimum, filius Zebedæi, frater Jacobi Apostoli, quem Herodes post passionem domini decollavit, novissimus omnium, scripsit evangelium, rogatus ab Asiæ episcopis, adversus Cerinthus, aliosque hæreticos et maxime tunc Ebionitarum dogma confurgens, qui asserunt Christum ante Mariam non fuisse, unde et compulsus est divinam ejus naturam edicere. Opera, vol. 1. p. 273.

“ pel

“ pel of John *.” “ If there be any other “ things,” says Auſtin, “ which intimate “ to the intelligent the divinity of Chriſt, “ in which he is equal to the Father, John “ almoſt alone has introduced them into “ his goſpel ; as having drank more fami“ liarly, and more copiouſly, the ſecret of “ his divinity, from the breaſt of our Lord,
 “ on which he was uſed to lean at meat †.”

On this account he compares John to an eagle †. “ The other evangelists,” he ſays, “ who treat of the humanity of Chriſt, were “ like animals that walk on the earth ; but “ John, contemplating the power of his “ divinity more ſublimely, flies to heaven

* At vero de cœleſta generatione ſi quæris lege evan-gelium ſancti Joannis. In Luc. cap. 2. Opera, vol. 2. p.
 26.

† Et ſi qua alia ſunt quæ Chriſti divinitatem in qua æqualis eſt patri, recte intelligentibus intiment, pene ſolus Johannes in evangelio ſuo poſuit : tanquam de pectore ipſius domini, ſuper quod diſcumbere in ejus convivio ſoli-tus erat, ſecretum divinitatis ejus uberius et quodammodo familiarius biberit. De Conſenſu Evangelistarum, lib. 1.
 cap. 5. Opera, vol. 4. p. 374.

† Ibid. p. 528, 529.

“ with

“ with the Lord *.” “ But now, with an open voice, he says, that he is God, and was always with God, laying open the mystery of God †.”

A very particular and copious account of the pre-eminence of John, in consequence of his teaching the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, which had been omitted by the other evangelists, may likewise be seen in the epistle of Paulinus, which I put in the notes ‡.

* Cæteri quippe evangelistæ, qui temporalem Christi nativitatem et temporalia ejus facta, quæ gessit in homine, sufficienter exponunt, et de divinitate pauca dixerunt, quasi animalia gressibilia cum domino ambulant in terra: hic autem pauca de temporalibus ejus gestis edifferens, sed divinitatis potentiam sublimius contemplans, cum domino ad cœlum volat. In John Pref. Opera, vol. 9. p. 5. 275.

† Nunc autem aperta voce dicit eum esse deum et semper fuisse apud deum, sacramentum patefaciens dei. Questions Mixtæ, vol. 4. p. 858.

‡ Idem ultra omnium tempora apostolorum ætate producta postremus evangelii scriptor fuisse memoratur, ut sicut de ipso vas electionis ait, quasi columna firmamentum adjiceret fundamentis ecclesiæ, prioris evangelii scriptores consona auctoritate confirmans, ultimus auctor, in libri tempore,

Cyril of Alexandria says, that “ John was the first who taught more sublime things*.” Marius Mercator says, that the three former evangelists, having spoken of Christ as a man, John shewed him to be God †.”

tempore, sed primus in capite sacramenti, quippe qui solus e quatuor fluminibus ex ipso summo divini capitis fonte decurrens, de nube sublimi tonat : in principio erat verbum, et verbum erat apud deum, et deus erat verbum : transcendit Moysen, qui usque ad caput mundi et visibilibus creaturarum exordia scientiæ terminos, et faciem mentis extendit. Iste et evangelistis cæteris, vel ab humano salvatoris ortu, vel a typico legis sacrificio, vel a prophetico præcursoris baptistæ præconio, resurrectionis evangelium exorsis, altius volans penetravit et coelos. Neque in angelis stetit, sed archangelos quoque et omnes desuper creaturas, virtutes, principatus, dominationes, thronos, supergressus, in ipsum se creatorem ardua mente direxit, et ab illa ineffabili generatione ordiens, et coeternum et consubstantialem, et co-omnipotentem, et co-opificem patri filium nunciavit. Ad Amandum, p. 213.

* Joannes theologus, tonitrui filius, cui divina dignatione concessum, ut supra dominicum pectus recubuerit, indeque nobis sublimiora ac divina hauserit dogmata : cum excellentem erga nos dei benignitatem commendare vellet, primumque quæ diviniora sunt dixisset, utpote ista, in principio erat verbum. Hom. Opera, vol. 2. p. 75.

† Post quam præfationem subdescendens, ut ostenderet quem illi tres evangelistæ hominem scripserant, esse etiam deum. Opera, p. 165.

Cosmas Indicopleustes, describing John as theologus, and the chief of the evangelists, says, that “ he wrote to supply the “ defects of the former evangelists, and “ especially in preaching clearly the divi- “ nity of Christ, making that the founda- “ tion of his work, all which had been “ omitted by the others. Wherefore, be- “ ginning at his divinity, he immediately “ passed to his humanity *.”

“ John,” says Nicephorus, “ did not give “ an account of the carnal generation of “ Jesus, but he first taught his divinity ; “ this being reserved for him, as the most “ worthy, by the Holy Spirit †.”

“ Wherefore, John,” says Theophylact, “ began with the divinity of Christ. For “ whereas others had made no mention of “ his existence before the ages, he taught * Εξ αίρετας δε ἡ περι της θεοτητος τε χρισου φανερας κηρυξας, θεμελιον της αυτη συγγραφης αυτω προταξας : απερ απαντα παραλειμμενα τοις αλλοις υν. αρχαιμος, τοιουν απο της θεοτητος, μετεληλυθεν ευδews ἡ επι την αιδραποτητα αυτη. De Mundo, lib. 5. Montfaucon's Col- lectio, vol. 2. p. 248.

† Της δε θεολογιας καταρχεται, οια τινος κρειττονος προς τε δεις πνευματος ταμieuθεισης αυτω. Hist. lib. 2. cap. 45. vol. 1. p. 214.

“ that

“ that doctrine, lest the logos of God “ should have been thought to be a mere “ man, without any divinity*.” “ Again,” he says, “ John wrote lest men should never “ think highly concerning Christ, and ima“ gine that he had no being before he was “ born of Mary, and that he was not gene“ rated from God the Father, which was the “ case with Paulus Samofatenis †.” “ As “ John,” he says, “ has more lofty things
 “ of Christ than any other of the evange“ lists, so he has recorded some of a lower “ nature ; to shew that, as he was God, so “ he was truly man ‡.”

Lastly, an account of John’s teaching the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, may * Επει γαρ οι αλλοι εκ εμνησθησαν περι της περι αιωνων υπαρξεως τε δεε λογω, αυθη εδεολογησε περι ταυτης, ινα μη νομισθει ο τε δεε λογω φιλος ανθρωπος ειναι. In Matt. Pref. vol. I. p. 1, 2.

† Δεος μεν ην μη ποτε τινες χαμαιπειεις κη μηδεν υψηλον νοησαι δυναμενοι, νομισωσι τον χριστον τοτε πρωτον εις υπαρξιν ελθειν ολι απο Μα-ριας εγεννηθη, κη εχι προ αιωνων εκ τε πατρος γεννηθηναι, ο παυλων απεπονθε Παυλο ο Σαμοσατεω. In John, cap. I. vol. I. p. 553:

‡ Επει γαρ παρα παντας της ευαγγελιας υψηλοτερα περι τε κυριε φθεγγεται, κη θεολογει μεγαλα τινα, δια τετο κη εν τοις σωματικοις πολυ ταπεινοτερα φθεγγεται. οθεν κη εν τω πε δεει πολυ το ανθρωπινον εχειν φησιν, απο τετε δεικνυων

be seen in the orations of Nicetas the Paphlagonian*.”

The late introduction of the doctrine of the divinity of Christ is observed by the emperor Julian. He says, that “none of Christ’s disciples, except John, said that he made the heavens and the earth, and that not clearly and plainly †.”

---

S E C T I O N II.

Reflections on the subject.

AFTER reading these testimonies, so copious, and so full to my purpose, and uncontradicted by any thing in antiquity, it is not possible to entertain a doubt with respect to the opinion of the christian Fathers on this subject. They must have δεικνυων της Σαρκος την αληθειαν ινα συ μαθης οτι ει θεος ην, αλλα κ̅ ανθρωπος ην. In John ii. vol. 1, p. 726.

* Combefis Auctuarium, vol. 1. p. 362.

† Ως δε υμεις θελετε, τον κρανον κ̅ την γην απεργασαμεν. κ̅ γαρ δη ταυτα τετολμηκε τις ειπειν περι αυτη των μαθητων, ει μη μον Ιωαννης, κ̅ δε αυτος σαφως, κ̅ δε τραως. Cyr. Con. Jul. lib. 6. Juliani, Opera, vol. 2. p. 213.

thought

thought that the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ had not been preached with any effect before the writing of John's gospel; and, consequently, that before that time the great body of christians must have been unitarians; and they are far from giving the least hint of any of them having been excommunicated on that account. On the other hand, the apprehension was, lest those who preached doctrines so new and offensive, as those of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, should have been rejected with abhorrence.

When we consider how late the three first gospels were written, the last of them not long before that of John, which was near, if not after, the destruction of Jerusalem, and that, in the opinion of the writers above-mentioned, all this caution and reserve had been necessary, till that late period, on the part of the christian teachers; how is it possible that, in their idea, the christian church in general should have been well established in the belief of our Lord's divinity? It could only have been great and open zeal on the part of the apostles, and not the timid caution and management which these writers ascribe to them, that could have effectually taught a doctrine which, according to them, the people were ill prepared to receive. And the history of both Peter and Paul sufficiently prove that the influence of mere apostolical authority was not so great at that time as many persons now take it to have been. Whatever power they had, they were not considered as lords over the faith of christians.

The christians of that age required something more than the private opinion of an apostle. They required some super-natural evidence that his doctrine was from God; and we have no account of the apostles proposing to them this additional article of faith, and alledging any such evidence for it. Chrysoptom says, "if the Jews were " so much offended at having a new law
" superadded to their former, how much " more would they have been offended, if " Christ had taught his own divinity."
May it not be supposed, therefore, that they would have required as particular evidence of a divine revelation in the one case as in the other? And what remarkably strong evidence was necessary to convince them that the obligation of their law did not extend to the Gentiles? Would they, then, have received what Chrysoſtom conſidered as the more offensive doctrine of the two, without any pretence to a particular revelation on the ſubject?
of

It may be ſaid, that all the caution of which we have been ſpeaking was neceſſary with reſpect to the unbelieving Jews only, into whoſe hands theſe gospels, and the other writings of the New Teſtament, might fall. But how impoſſible muſt it have been to conceal from the unbelieving Jews the doctrine of the divinity of Chriſt, if it had been a favourite article with the believing Jews. If this had been the caſe, it could not but have been known to all the world; and, therefore, all the offence that it could have given would have been unavoidable. So that this ſuppoſed caution of the evangelists, &c. would have come too late, and would have answered no purpoſe whatever.

This caution, therefore, must necessarily have respected those persons into whose hands the gospels, &c. were most likely to come, and who would give the most attention to them; and these were certainly the believing Jews, and the christian world at large, and not unbelievers of any nation. We are authorised to conclude, that in the opinion of the writers who have spoke of it, of whatever weight that opinion may be, this caution in divulging the doctrine of the divinity of Christ was necessary with respect to the great body of christians themselves, and especially the Jewish christians. Consequently, they must have supposed, that at the time of these publications, which was about A. D. 64, the doctrine of the divinity of Christ was not generally held by christians, and that there would have been danger of giving them great offence if at that time it had been plainly proposed to them by the apostles themselves. At this period, therefore, it may be inferred, that, in the opinion of these writers, the christian church was principally unitarian, believing only the simple

simple humanity of Christ, and knowing nothing of his divinity or pre-existence.

From the acknowledgment which these orthodox Fathers could not help making (for certainly they would not do it unnecessarily) that there were great numbers of proper unitarians in the age of the apostles, it seems not unreasonable to conclude, that there were great numbers of them in the age immediately following, and in their own. And their knowledge of this might be an additional reason for the opinion that they appear to have formed of that prevalence in the apostolic age. Would these Fathers have granted to their enemies spontaneously, and contrary to truth, that the Jews were strongly prepossessed against the doctrine of the divinity of Christ, and that the unitarians were a formidable body of christians while the apostles were living, if it had been in their power to have denied the facts? The consequence of making these acknowledgments is but too obvious, and must have appeared so to them, as well as it now does to others, which makes them so unwilling to make it after them.

I cannot

I cannot conclude this chapter without observing, in how unworthy a manner, and how unsuitably to their real character and conduct, these Fathers represent the apostles as acting. They were all plain men, far from being qualified, or disposed, to act so cunning a part, as is here ascribed to them. There is nothing like art or address in the conduct of any of them, as related in the scriptures, except that of Paul; and this was only with respect to his preaching the gospel to the uncircumcised Gentiles, before it was generally approved of at Jerusalem; on which account, he informed the chief of the apostles only with what he had done. But this was no secret long, and indeed a thing of that kind could not, in its own nature, have been much of a secret at any time. On all other occasions he failed not to inform those to whom he preached of the whole counsel of God; as he says that he had done with respect to the church of Ephesus, Acts xx. 27. Much less can it be supposed that he would have concealed a doctrine of so great magnitude and importance as that of the pre-existent dignity of his master ; and, communicating it only to a few, have left it to be taught after his death. For it is not to be supposed that the other apostles were in the secret of John's intending to do it after their deaths.
of

Besides, the instructions of the apostles enjoined them to teach all that they knew, even what their master had communicated to them in the greatest privacy. Whereas upon this scheme, they must have suffered great numbers to die in the utter ignorance of the most important truths of the gospel, lest, by divulging it too soon, the conversion of others should have been prevented.

To these observations I would add, that as among the twelve apostles, there must have been men of different tempers and abilities, it is not probable that they should all have agreed in conducting themselves upon this plan, viz. of not divulging the doctrine of the divinity of their master till their hearers should be sufficiently persuaded of his messiahship. Some of them would hardly have been capable of so much refinement, and would certainly have differed about the time when it was proper to divulge divulge so great a secret. Besides, the mother of Jesus, and many other persons of both sexes, must have been acquainted with it. For that this secret was strictly confined to the twelve apostles, will hardly be maintained. And yet we have no account either of their instructions to act in this manner, or of any difference of opinion, or of conduct, with respect to it.

Never, sure, was a more improbable hypothesis ever formed to account for any thing, than this of the christian Fathers to account for the late teaching of the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ. But their circumstances left them no alternative. They must have had some very cogent reason for admitting that the teaching of these doctrines was so late; and this could not have been any thing but the want of that general prevalence, which they would have had, if they had been taught with effect in the life-time of the apostles, and which would have continued to their own times. They must, therefore, have known that there were more unitarians in the church in the early ages than they could account for on any other hypothesis than that of the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, not having been taught till very late. At present, the facts which forced the Fathers upon this hypothesis are forgotten, and the orthodox themselves wonder that they should have adopted a scheme so absurd and improbable. But the different manner in which such an hypothesis is received, is a proof of a great difference in the circumstances and views of things in the different periods. We see nothing to make so strange an hypothesis necessary. They would not have had recourse to it, if it had not been necessary.
account

C H A P T E R VIII.

Of the Nazarenes and the Ebionites, shewing that they were the same People, and that none of them believed the Divinity or Pre-existence of Christ.

WE have seen that, according to the unanimous and very express testimony of the christian Fathers (a testimony which is greatly against their own cause, and therefore, the more to be depended upon) there could not have been many persons who believed the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ in the age of the apostles; one of the last books of the canon, viz. the gospel of John, being the first in which those doctrines were clearly published.

If we look into the gospels, and the book of Acts, we shall find that one part of their testimony is true, viz. that those sublime doctrines, as they call them, were not taught in an early period. For none of the three first gospels make the least mention of any thing thing in the person or nature of Christ superior to those of other men. In like manner, all the preaching of Christ, of which we have an account in the book of Acts, is that Jesus was the Messiah, whose divine mission was confirmed by miracles, especially that of his own resurrection, and by the gifts of the Spirit. And all the controversies of which we find any account, either in that book, or in the epistles, respected either the Jewish teachers, who would have imposed the observance of the law of Moses upon all the Gentile converts, or else those who held the principles of the Gnostics.

The erroneous doctrines of these persons are distinctly marked, so that no person can read the New Testament without perceiving that there were persons who held these doctrines, and that they were the cause of great uneasiness to the apostles. But there is no trace of any other opinions at which they took the least umbrage.

As to the effect of the publication of John's gospel, from which so much seems to have been expected by the christian Fathers, it is impossible that we should learn any

any thing concerning it in the New Testament, because that was one of the last of the books that was published. However, we have no account in ecclesiastical history that it produced any change at all in the sentiments of christians. Though it is said to have taught a new and a sublime doctrine, it does not appear to have been received with any degree of surprize. There are no marks of the publication having given any peculiar pleasure to some, or alarm to others; or that it occasioned the least division among christians on the subject.

We may, therefore, very safely conclude, that those christians for whose use this gospel was written, saw it in a very different light from those Fathers who gave the preceding account of it. We know, indeed, that to them it did not appear to teach any other doctrine than what was contained in the three former gospels. For by the logos of which John treats in this famous introduction, they never imagined to be meant Christ, and therefore they could see nothing of his personal pre-existence or divinity in it. In their opinion, the logos was that wisdom and power of God, by which all things were made.

Though this gospel was written in Greek, there were not wanting among the Jewish christians men of learning who would not have failed to give an account of it to their more ignorant countrymen, or to translate it for their use, if it had been thought necessary. Yet, notwithstanding this, all the Jewish christians continued in the very same state in which the christian Fathers represent them to have been before the publication of this gospel, viz. believers in the simple humanity of Christ only, and acknowledging nothing of his pre-existence or divinity. The same was, also the state of the Gentile christians in general, long after the publication of this gospel.

As no entire writings of any Jewish christians are come down to us, all that we know concerning them must be derived from the writings of the Gentile christians; and as these christians were trinitarians, and had very little communication with the Jewish christians, we cannot expect any favourable, or indeed any impartial accounts concerning them. If, however, we may depend upon the earliest accounts that we have of them, and those given by persons who were the best qualified to give us good information, they were all unitarians, and were distinguished from the Gentile christians by the name of Ebionites, or Nazarenes. But as it has been pretended by those who, being trinitarians themselves, were willing to believe that there must have been a body of ancient Jewish christians who thought as they do, and that the Ebionites or Nazarenes must have been sects who broke off from their communion; and as some of these persons have even said that these Ebionites, or Nazarenes, were subsequent to the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus; and others have fixed their origin so late as the desolation of Judea by Adrian, it may not be improper to shew that persons distinguished by the name of Ebionites and Nazarenes were supposed to have existed in the time of the apostles.

Irenæus,

Irenæus, who gives no other name to any Jewish christians besides that of Ebionites, whom he always speaks of as both denying the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, and likewise the miraculous conception, objects to the Gnostics, that they were of late date, but he says nothing of the Ebionites in that respect *. Eusebius says, that “the first heralds of our Saviour” (by whom he must have meant the apostles) “called those Ebionites, which in the Hebrew language signifies poor; who, not denying the body of Christ, shewed their folly in denying his divinity †.”

* Reliqui vero qui vocantur Gnostici, a Menandro Simonis discipulo, quemadmodum ostendimus, accipientes initia, unusquisque eorum, cujus participatus est sententiæ, ejus et pater, et antistes apparuit. Omnes autem hi multo posterioribus, mediântibus jam ecclesiæ temporibus, insurrexerunt in suam apostasiam. Lib. 3. cap. 4. p. 206.

† Και αυτου δε τε σωτηρος ημων, οι πρωτοκηρυκες Εβιωναιικων ονομαζον Εβραικη φωνη, πτωχους. την δε ανοιαν αποκαλευτες, τους ενα μιν θεον λεγοντας ειδεναι, κ̅ τε σωτηρος το σωμα μη αρνεμενες, την δε τε υιου θεοτητα μη ειδοντας. Ec. Theol. lib. 1. cap. 14. p. 75.

Epiphanius makes both Ebion (for in his time it was imagined, that the Ebionites were so called from some particular person of that name) and Cerinthus, cotemporary with the apostle John; and he could not tell which of them was the older*. He likewise makes the Ebionites cotemporary with the Nazarenes, at the same time that he says they held that Christ was the son of Joseph †. Also, in the passage before quoted from him, as well as in that from Jerom, we find the names of both the Ebionites and the Nazarenes among those who gave so much alarm to the apostle John. It must be owned, however, that, in no perfect consistence with this account, Epiphanius places the origin of the Nazarenes after the destruction of Jerusalem. After mentioning the places where they resided, viz. Peræa, Cœle-Syria, Pella, and Cocabe, he says, “there was their origin, after the destruction of Jerusalem, when all the disciples lived at Pella; Christ having warned them to leave Jerusalem, and retire at the approach of the siege; and on this account they lived, as I said, in Peræa. Thence the sect of the Nazarenes had its origin*.”

* Ναζωραιοι καθεξης τρισις επονται, αμα τε αυλοι οντες, η η προ αυτων, η συν αυτοις, η μελ αυτες ομως συγχρονοι. * γαρ ακριβεσερον δυναμαι εξειπειν τινες τινας διεδεξαντο. Hæc. 30. Opera, vol. i. p. 149. H. 29. p. 116.

† Ουτος γαρ ο Εβιων συγχρονος μιν τετων υπηρχεν, απ αυτων δε συν αυτοις ορμαται. τα πρωτα δε εκ παρατριβης η σπερματιος ανδρος, τετεςιν τε Ιωσηφ, τον χριστον γεγενησθαι, ελεγει, ως η ηδε ημιν προειρηται, οτι τα ισα τοις αλλοις εν απασι φρονων, εν τετω μονω διαφερετο, εν τω τω νομω τε Ιουδαισμου προσανεχειν, κατα σαβατισμον, η κατα την περιτομην, η κατα τα αλλα παντα οσα περ παρα της Ιουδαιας ομοιως τοις Σαμαρειταις διαπραττεται. Hæc. 30. p. 125, 126.

Sophronius, quoted by Theophylact, says, that “John, besides having a view to Cerenthus, and other heretics, wrote more especially against the heresy of the Ebionites, which was then very prevalent, who said that Christ had no being before * Εκειθεν μεν η αρχη γεγνε μετα την απο των Ιεροσολυμων μετασασιν, παντων των μαθητων των εν Πελλη οικηκοτων, χριστου φησαντος καταλειπει τα Ιεροσολυμα, κ̅ αναχωρησαι επειδη ημελλε πασχειν πολιορκιαν. κ̅ εκ της τοιαυτης υποθεσεως την Περαιαν οικησαντες, εκεισε ως εσην δις-τριβον. εντευθεν η κατα της Ναζωραιης αιρεσις ειχε την ερχην. Ηερ. 29. Opera, vol. 1. p. 123.

“ he was born of Mary; so that he was “ under a necessity of declaring his divine “ origin *.”

Cassian calls Hebion “ the first heretic, “ laying too much stress on the humanity
 “ of Christ, and stripping him of his di“ vinity †.”

There can be no doubt, therefore, but that both Ebionites and Nazarenes were existing in the time of the apostles; and that there was no real difference between these two sects. And that both of them were equally believers in the simple humanity of Christ, is no less evident.

The testimony of Origen is clear and decisive to this purpose. He says, that “ the word Ebion, in the Jewish language, “ signifies poor, and those of the Jews who “ believe Jesus to be the Christ are called

* Και μαλιστα τηνικαυτα τις των Εβιονιτων δογματος ανακηρυχθαι, των φασκουλων τον χριστον προ Μαρίας μη γεγενησθαι. οδε ηναγκασ-θη την θεϊαν γεννησιν αυτης ειπειν. In John, vol. 1. p. 548.

† Quorum primus Hebion, dum incarnationem domi-nicam nimis asserit, divinitatis eam conjunctione nudavit.
 De Incarnatione, lib. 1. cap. 2. p. 962.

“ Ebionites.”

“Ebionites*.” Here is no room left for any difference between the Ebionites and the Nazarenes; for the Ebionites comprehended all the Jewish christians; and, according to Origen, none of them were believers in the pre-existence or divinity of Christ. He says, there were two sorts of Ebionites, of whom one believed the miraculous conception, and the other disbelieved it, while both of them rejected the doctrine of his divinity. “And when you consider,” says he, “the faith concerning our Saviour of those of the Jews who believe in Christ, some thinking him to be the son of Joseph and Mary, and others of Mary only, and the divine Spirit, but not believing his divinity †.”

He mentions the two sects of Ebionites in the following passage. “There are some * Εβίων τε γὰρ ὁ πῶτος παρὰ Ἰουδαίους καλεῖται. Καὶ Εβίωνοι χρηματίζουσιν οἱ ἀπὸ Ἰουδαίων τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ὡς χριστὸν, παραδέξαμενοί.

In Celsum, lib. 2. p. 56.

† Καὶ ἐπὶ ἰδίᾳ τῶν ἀπὸ Ἰουδαίων πνευμονίων εἰς τὸν Ἰησοῦν τὴν περὶ τοῦ σωτήρος πίστιν, οἱ μὲν ἐκ μαρίας καὶ τὸ Ἰωσήφ οἰομένων αὐτοῦ εἶναι, οἱ μὲν ἐκ μαρίας μὲν μόνῃς καὶ τὸ θεοῦ πνευματίῳ, ἄ μὴν καὶ μέλα τῆς περὶ αὐτῆς θεολογίας, εἴη, &c. Comment. in Matt. Ed. Huetii, vol. 1. p. 427.

“ heretics who do not receive the epistles
 “ of Paul, as those who are called Ebionites,
 “ of both sorts *.”

Eusebius gives the very same account of the two sorts of Ebionites, and makes no mention of any Nazarenes, as differing from them. “ Others,” he says, “ whom a malignant demon was not able to turn aside entirely from the love of Christ, finding them weak in some respects, reduced into his power. These by the ancients were called Ebionites, as those who think meanly concerning Christ — For they think him to be merely a man, like other men, but approved on account of his virtue, being the son of Mary’s husband. Others called by the same name, leaving the absurd opinion of the former, do not deny that Christ was born of a virgin, but say, that he was of the Holy Spirit. However at the same time, they by no means allowing that Christ was God, the word, and wisdom, were drawn into the rest of their impiety.” He then says, † Εἰσι γὰρ τινες αἵρεσις τὰς Παυλοῦ ἐπιστολάς τῆ ἀποστόλου μὴ παρασπασίμεναι, ὡς περ Ἐβιωναῖοι ἀμφοτέρω. In Celsum, lib. 6. p. 274.

that

that “they maintained the observance of “the Jewish law, and that they used the “gospel according to the Hebrews.” He says also, “that beggars are called Ebio-“nites*.”

It may be clearly inferred, from a passage in a letter of Jerom to Austin, that though he was acquainted with the nominal distinc-

* Ἄλλως δὲ ὁ πονηρὸς δαίμων τῆς περὶ τὸν Χριστὸν τε θεῶν διαθεσεως ἀδυνατῶν ἐκσεῖσθαι, θαλεραληπίης εὐρων ἐσφείριξέη. Ἐβραῖους τῆς οἰκειῶς ἐπεφημίξον οἱ παῖδες, πτωχῶς καὶ ταπεινῶς τὰ περὶ τὸν Χριστὸν δοξαζούσας. λίον μὲν γὰρ αὐτὸν καὶ κοῖνον ἡγεῖτο κατὰ τὸν κοινὸν ἦν αὐτὸν μόνον ἀνδρῶπον δὲδικαιωμένον ἐξ ἀνδρῶς τε κοινῶνας καὶ τῆς Μαρίας γεγεννημένον· δεῖν δὲ πάντως αὐτοῖς τῆς νομικῆς ἄρσεως, ὡς μὴ ἀνὰ δια-μονῆς τῆς εἰς τὸν Χριστὸν πίστεως καὶ τὰ κατ’ αὐτὴν βίαι σῶθησομενοὶ.
ἀλλοὶ δὲ παρὰ τῆς αὐτῆς οὐκ ἀποσηγορίας, τὴν μὲν τῶν εἰρημένων ἐκδοτῶν διεδιδρασκόντων ἀποτῆσαι, ἐκ παρθένου καὶ τῆς ἁγίας πνεύματος μὴ ἀρνε-μένοι γεγονέναι τὸν κυρίον· καὶ μὴ ἐθ’ ὁμοίως καὶ εἶποι παρεπαρχεῖν αὐτὸν, θεὸν λόγον οὐκ καὶ σοφίαν ὁμολογούσας, τῆς τῶν προτέρων περιείρητο δυσσεβεία· μαλιστα δὲ καὶ τὴν σωματικὴν περὶ τὸν νόμον λαβραῖαν ὁμοίως ἐκεῖνοις περιεπέειν ἐσπεύδαζον. εἶποι δὲ τὴν μὲν ἀποστολὴν πάσας τὰς ἐπιστολάς, ἀρνηθείας ἡγεῖτο εἶναι δεῖν, ἀποσταλὴν ἀποκαταθέντες αὐτὸν τὴν νομῶν. εὐαγγελίῳ δὲ μόνῳ τῷ καθ’ Ἑβραῖους λεγομένῳ χρῶμενοι, τῶν λοιπῶν σμικρῶν ἐποιεῖτο λόγον. καὶ τὸ μὲν Σαββατὸν καὶ τὴν Ἰουδαϊκὴν ἀλλήν ἀγωγὴν ὁμοίως ἐκεῖνοις παραφυλάττον. ταῖς δ’ αὖ κυριακαῖς ἡμέραις, ἡμῶν τὰ παραπλήσια εἰς μνημὴν τῆς τῆς κυρίας ἀναστάσεως ἐπετέλουν. ὅθεν παρὰ τὴν τοιαύτην ἐγχείρησιν τῆς τοιαύτης λελογχασίης προ-σηγορίας, τὸ Ἑβραϊκὸν ὀνομασθῆναι τὴν τῆς διανοίας πτωχεῖαν αὐτῶν ὑποφαινοῦσας. ταύτην γὰρ ἐπικλήν ὁ πτωχὸς παρ’ Ἑβραίοις ὀνομαζέεται.
Hist. lib. 3. cap. 27. p. 121.

tion

tion between the Ebionites and Nazarenes, he did not consider them as really, or at least as materially, differing from each other. “ If this be true,” he says, “ we fall into “ the heresy of Cherintus and Ebion, who,
 “ believing in Christ, were anathematized “ by the Fathers on this account only, that “ they mixed the ceremonies of the law, “ with the gospel of Christ, and held to the “ new” (dispensation) “ in such a manner “ as not to lose the old. What shall I say “ concerning the Ebionites, who pretend “ that they are christians? It is to this very “ day in all the synagogues of the east, a “ heresy among the Jews, called that of the “ Minei, now condemned by the Pharisees, “ and commonly called Nazarenes, who be“ lieve in Christ the Son of God, born of “ the virgin Mary, and say, that it was he “ who suffered under Pontius Pilate, and “ rose again, in whom also we believe. But “ while they wish to be both Jews and “ christians, they are neither Jews nor “ christians*.”

*. Si hoc verum est; in Cherinti et Ebionis hæresim dilabimur, qui credentes in Christo, propter hoc solum a patribus

That this account of the Nazarenes is only explanatory of the Ebionites, is evident from his saying, "What shall I say concerning the Ebionites!" After such an expression as this, we naturally expect that he should proceed to say something concerning them, which this author most evidently does; observing, that the same people who were called Ebionites (by the Gentiles) were called Minei and Nazarenes by the Jews. Had he meant to describe any other class of people, he would naturally have begun his next sentence with Est et, or Est alia heresis, and not simply heresis est. As to his speaking of heresy in the second sentence, and not heretics, as in patribus anathematizati sunt; quod legis cærimonias Christi evangelio miscuerunt, et sic nova confessi sunt, ut vetera non amitterent. Quid dicam de Hebionitis, qui christianos esse se simulant? Usque hodie per totas orientis synagogas inter Judæos hæresis est, quæ dicitur mineorum, et a Pharisæis nunc usque damnatur, quos vulgo Nazaræos nuncupant, qui credunt in Christum, filium dei, natum de virgine Maria, et eum dicunt esse, qui sub Pontio Pilato passus est, et resurrexit, in quem et nos credimus: sed dum volunt et Judæi esse, et christiani, nec Judæi sunt nec christiani. Opera, vol. 1. p. 634.

the

the first, it is a most trifling inaccuracy in language, the easiest of all others to fall into, and of no consequence to the meaning at all. Besides, Jerom's account of these two denominations of men is exactly the same; the Ebionites being believers in Christ, but mixing the law and the gospel; and the Nazarenes wishing to be both Jews and christians, which certainly comes to the very same thing.

Stress has been laid on our author's saying, that the Ebionites pretended to be Christians; but Jerom calls them credentes in Christo, believers in Christ; and if they believed in Christ at all, they could not believe much less than he himself represents the Nazarenes to have done. It may be said, that they only pretended to be christians, but were not, because they had been excommunicated. But what had they been excommunicated for? Not for any proper imperfection of their faith in Christ, in which they were inferior to the Nazarenes, but only (solum) because they mixed the ceremonies of the law with the gospel of Christ; which, in other words, he asserts of the Nazarenes also, when he says, they wished to be both Jews and christians. And though he does not say that the Nazarenes were excommunicated, he says they were not christians, which is an expression of the same import.
of

Had there been any foreign reason why we should suppose that Jerom meant to distinguish between the Ebionites and the Nazarenes, we might have hesitated about the interpretation of his meaning, easy as it is. But certainly there can be no cause of hesitation, when it is considered that in this he agrees not with Epiphanius only, but with the whole strain of antiquity, as is allowed by Le Clerc, and all the ablest critics; and to interpret his meaning otherwise is to set him at variance with all other writers.

It is asked, “ Why were the Cerinthians “ omitted? Jerom places them with the “ Ebionites in the preceding sentence: and if “ the Nazarenes and the Ebionites were the “ same people, it may, with equal clearness of “ evidence, be inferred, that they were the “ same people with the Cerinthians likewise.”

2 I answer,

I answer, they were the same people, as far as Jerom then considered them, because they were equally zealous for the law of Moses.

It has been said, that Austin's answer to Jerom shews, that he considered them as different persons. But Austin only enumerates all the names that Jerom had mentioned, and whether the differences were real or nominal, great or little, it signified nothing to him. He himself, in his Catalogue of heresies, makes a difference between the Ebionites and Nazarenes, but by no means that which makes the latter to have been believers in the divinity of Christ, and the former not. And as it was a common opinion, especially in the West, that there was some difference between them (though the writers who speak of it could never be certain in what it consisted) it was very natural in Austin to mention them separately, whether Jerom had made them the same or not.

I find that Suicer, in his Tresaurus, under the article Ebion, makes the same use of this passage of Jerom that I have done, and considers the Nazarenes as a branch of the Ebionites. Sandius also draws the same inference from this passage. Hist. Eccles. p. 4.

That the unbelieving Jews should call the christian Jews Nazarenes, is natural; because that was the opprobrious appellation by which they had been distinguished from the beginning. According to Tertullian, they called them so in his time*. Agobard says they did the same when he wrote †. But it was not so natural that this should be adopted by the Gentile christians, because they had been used to regard that appellation with more respect. When, therefore, they came to distinguish themselves from the Jewish christians, and to dislike their tenets, it was natural for them to adopt some other appellation than that of Nazarenes; and the term Ebionites, given them likewise by their unbelieving brethren, equally answered their purpose.

* Unde et ipso nomine nos Judæi Nazarenos appellant per eum. Adv. Marcionem, lib. 4. sect. 8. p. 418.

† Quod autem dominum nostrum Jesum Christum et christianos in omnibus orationibus suis sub Nazarenorum nomine cotidie maledicant. De Insolentia Judæorum, Opera. p. 63.

The term minei is from the Hebrew מנים (minim) which signifies sectaries, and is that by which the Jews, in all their writings, distinguish the christians.

It is something remarkable, that Justin Martyr does not use the term Ebionite, or any other expressive of dislike. Irenæus is the first who uses it, or who speaks of the Jewish unitarians with the least disrespect.

It is an argument in favour of the identity of the Nazarenes and Ebionites, that the former are not mentioned by name by any writer who likewise speaks of the Ebionites before Epiphanius, who was fond of multiplying heresies, though the people so called were certainly known before his time. The term Ebionites only occurs in Irenæus, Tertullian, Origen, and Eusebius. None of them make any mention of Nazarenes; and yet it cannot be denied, that they must have been even more considerable in the time of those writers, than they were afterwards.

The conduct of all these writers is easily accounted for on the suppositions, that, in the time of Justin Martyr, the Jewish christians, tians, though all unitarians, and even disbelieving the miraculous conception, were not known by any opprobrious appellation at all; that afterwards they were first distinguished by that of Ebionites; and that it was not till the time of Epiphanius (when such writers as he, who wrote expressly on the subject of heresy, made a parade of their learning, by recounting a multiplicity of heresies) that the term Nazarenes, by which the unbelieving Jews still continued to call the christians among them, was laid hold of, as signifying a sect different from that of the Ebionites.

Mosheim makes a doubt whether there was such a person as Ebion, or not. I have seen no evidence at all that any person of that name ever existed. There is no founder of a sect, of whose history some particulars have not been handed down to posterity; but this is vox et præterea nihil. The term Ebionite, was also long prior to that of Ebion. They who first used this term, say nothing about the man from others, and they were too late to know any thing of him themselves.

It must be more particularly difficult to account for the conduct of Eusebius, on the supposition either of there having been such a person as Ebion, or of there having been any distinction between the Ebionites and Nazarenes, since it was his business, as an historian, to have noticed both.

The opinion that the Ebionites and Nazarenes were the same people, is maintained by Le Clerc, and the most eminent critics of the last age. What Mr. Jones (who is remarkable for his caution in giving an opinion) says on this subject, is well worth quoting.

“ It is plain, there was a very great “ agreement between these two ancient “ sects; and though they went under dif“ ferent names, yet they seem only to have “ differed in this, that the Ebionites had “ made some addition to the old Nazarene “ system. For Origen expressly tell us,

“ Και Εβιωναιοι χρηματιζουσι οι απο Ιουδαιων τον Ιησουν ως χριστον παρα“ δεξαμενοι. They are called Ebionites who

“ from among the Jews own Jesus to be the “ Christ. And though Epiphanius seems to “ make their gospels different, calling one

πληρες αλον,

“ πληρες αλον, more entire, yet this need not “ move us. For if the learned Casaubon’s “ conjecture should not be right, that we “ should read the same ε πληρες αλον, in both “ places (which yet is very probable for “ any thing that Father Simon has proved “ to the contrary) yet will the difficulty be “ all removed at once, by this single con“ sideration; that Epiphanius never saw any “ gospel of the Nazarenes. For though “ he calls it πληρες αλον, yet he himself says, “ εκ οιδα δε ει τας γενεαλογιας περιειλον, he did not know “ whether they had taken away the genealogy, “ as the Ebionites had done; i. e. having “ never seen the Nazarene gospel, for ought “ he knew, it might be the very same with “ that of the Ebionites, as indeed it most “ certainly was*.”

In my opinion, Jerom has sufficiently decided this last question. Could he have had any other idea than that these two sects (if they were two) used the same gospel, when he said, “ In the gospel used by the Na“ zarenes and Ebionites, which is com“ monly called the authentic gospel of

* On the Canon, vol. I. p. 386.

“ had the same origin with them ; and first he “ asserted that Christ was born of the com“ merce and seed of man, namely, Joseph, “ as we signified above,” referring to the first words of his first section, “ when we “ said that in other respects he agreed with “ them all, and differed from them only in “ this, viz. in his adherence to the laws of “ the Jews with respect to the sabbath, “ circumcision, and other things that were “ enjoined by the Jews and Samaritans.
 “ He moreover adopted many more things “ than the Jews, in imitation of the Sama“ ritans*,” the particulars of which he then proceeds to mention.

In the same section he speaks of the Ebionites as inhabiting the same country with the Nazarenes, and adds that, “ agree“ ing together, they communicated of their “ perverseness to each other †.” Then, in * See note, page 164, in this volume.

† Ενθεν αρχεται της κακης αυτης διδασκαλιας, οθεν δηθεν η Να-ζαρηνοι οι ανομοι προδεδηλωται. Συναφεις γαρ εις εκεινοισ, η εκεινοι τω, εκατερος απο της εαυτης μοχθηρίας τω ελερω μελεδωκε.
 Ηερ. 30. sect. 2. p. 125, 126.

the third section, he observes that, afterwards, some of the Ebionites entertained a different opinion concerning Christ, than that he was the son of Joseph; supposing that, after Elxæus joined them, they learned of him some fancy concerning Christ and the Holy Spirit*.

Concerning the Nazarenes, in the seventh section of his account of them, he says, that they were Jews in all respects, except that they “believed in Christ; but I do not “know whether they hold the miraculous “conception or not †.” This amounts to no more than a doubt, which he afterwards abandoned, by asserting that the Ebionites held the same opinion concerning Christ with the Nazarenes, which opinion he expressly states to be their belief, that Jesus was a mere man, and the son of Joseph.

* Φαλασσιαν τινὰ περὶ χριστοῦ διηγείλαι, καὶ περὶ πνεύματος ἁγίου, Ἡερ. 30. sect. 3. p. 127.

† Περὶ χριστοῦ δὲ ἐκ οὐδὰ εἰπεῖν εἰ καὶ αὐτοὶ τῆ τῶν πρόσειρημένων περὶ Κηρινθῶν καὶ Μηρινθῶν μοχθηρία ἀχθέντες, φίλον ἀνδρῶπον νομίζουσιν, ἢ καθὼς ἡ ἀληθεῖα ἔχει, διὰ πνευμάτων ἁγίων γεγενῆσθαι ἐκ Μαρίας, διαβεβαιῶνται. Ἡερ. 29. sect. 7. vol. 1. p. 123.

As to any properly orthodox Nazarenes, i. e. believers in the pre-existence or divinity of Christ, I find no traces of them any where. Austin says, that the Nazarenes were by some called Symmachians, from Symmachus, who is not only generally called an Ebionite, but who wrote expressly against the doctrine of the miraculous conception. How then could the Nazarenes be thought to be different from the Ebionites, or to believe any thing of the divinity of Christ, or even the miraculous conception, in the opinion of those who called them Symmachians? Austin who mentions this, does not say that they were miscalled.

Theodoret, who, living in Syria, had a good opportunity of being acquainted with the Nazarenes, describes them as follows: "The Nazarenes are Jews who honour Christ as a righteous man, and use the gospel according to Peter*." This account of the faith of the Nazarenes was evidently meant to represent them as differing from the orthodox with respect to the doctrine concerning Christ; and is to be understood as if he had said, "they believe him to have been nothing more than a righteous man, and a divine teacher" (for claiming to be such, he could not otherwise have been a righteous man) "but they do not believe in his pre-existence, or divinity." Orthodox persons, who believe these doctrines, are never described by any of the ancients as Theodoret has described the Nazarenes.

* Οἱ δὲ Ναζωραῖοι Ἰσραῖτιοι εἰσι, τὸν Χριστὸν τιμῶντες ὡς ἀνθρώπου δικαίου, καὶ τῷ καλεσμένῳ κατὰ Πέτρον εὐαγγελίῳ κεχρημένοι. Hær. Fql. lib. 2. cap. 2. Opera, vol. 4. p. 219.

In the passage quoted from Epiphanius, in which he gives an account of the motives for John's writing his gospel, it is evident, both that he considered the Nazarenes as existing at that time, and also that they stood in as much need of being taught the pre-existence and divinity of Christ as the Ebionites. In another place this writer compares the Nazarenes to persons who, seeing a fire at a distance, and not understanding the cause, or the use of it, run towards it, and burn themselves; "So these Jews,"

he

he says, “on hearing the name of Jesus only,
 “ and the miracles performed by the apof“ tles, believe on him; and knowing that his “ mother was with child of him at Nazareth, “ that he was brought up in the houfe of “ Joseph, and that, on that account, he was “ called a Nazarene (the apoftles ftiling him
 “ a man of Nazareth, approved by miracles, “ and mighty deeds) impofed that name “ upon themfelves*.” This can never agree with this writer fupposing that the Nazarenes believed in the divinity of Chrift, or indeed in the miraculous conception; much lefs with their having an origin fubfequent to the times of the apoftles. And he never mentions, or hints at, any change of opinion in the Nazarenes.

That Auftin did not confider the Nazarenes in any favourable light, is evident

* Λιξισάντες γαρ μονον ονομα τῆς Ἰησοῦ, καὶ θεασάμενοι τὰ θεοση-μεία τὰ δια χειρῶν τῶν ἀποστόλων γινόμενα, καὶ αὐτοὶ εἰς αὐτὸν πίστευσαι.
 γινόντες δὲ αὐτὸν ἐκ Ναζαρεθ εἰν γαστρὶ ἐγκυμονηθέντα, καὶ ἐν οἴκῳ Ἰωσήφ ἀνατραφέντα, καὶ δια τῆς ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ Ἰησοῦν Ναζωραίου καλεῖσθαι, ὡς καὶ οἱ ἀποστόλοι φασὶν Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραίου ἀνδρᾶ, ἀποδοδεύγμενον ἐν τοῖς σημείοις καὶ τερασί καὶ ταῖς ἐξῆς; τῆς τοῦ ονόματος ἐπιτίθεσθαι αὐτοῖς, τοῦ καλεῖσθαι Ναζωραίου. Hær. 29. sect. 5. Opera, vol. I. p. 120.

from

from his calling them, in his answer to Jerom, heretics, “As to the opinion of those heretics, who, while they would be both Jews and christians, can neither be Jews nor christians, &c.*” It is in these very words that Jerom had characterized those whom he had called Nazarenes. What more could Austin have said of the Ebionites? Can it be supposed that he would have spoken of the Nazarenes in this manner, if he had thought them orthodox with respect to the doctrine of the trinity; especially considering that it was in an age in which the greatest account was made of that doctrine; so that perfect soundness in that article might be supposed to have atoned for defects in other things. That Jerom did not consider the Nazarenes as orthodox, even if he did make them to be different from the Ebionites, is evident from his calling them not christians.

If we consider the general character of the Jewish christians in the time of the apostles, and particularly how apt they were to be alarmed at the introduction of any thing that was new to them, and had the least appearance of contrariety to the law of Moses, it will both supply a strong argument in favour of the truth of christianity, and against their receiving the doctrine of the divinity or pre-existence of Christ either then or afterwards. Their rooted prejudices against the apostle Paul (whose conversion to christianity must have given them great satisfaction) merely on account of his activity in preaching the gospel to the uncircumcised Gentiles (though with the approbation of the rest of the apostles) shows that they would not receive any novelty without the strongest evidence. Their dislike of the apostle Paul, we know from ecclesiastical history, continued to the latest period of their existence as a church, and they would never make use of his writings. But to the very last, their objections to him amounted to nothing more than his being no friend to the law of Moses.

* Quid putaverint hæretici, qui quæ volunt et Judæi esse et christiani, nec Judæi esse nec christiani esse poterunt, &c. Opera, vol. 2. p. 75.

The resemblance between the character of the Ebionites, as given by the early christian

tian

tian Fathers, and that of the Jewish christians at the time of Paul's last journey to Jerusalem, is very striking. After he had given an account of his conduct to the more intelligent of them, they were satisfied with it; but they thought there would be great difficulty in satisfying others. "Thou see'st brother," say they to him, Acts xxi. 20. "how many thousands of Jews there are who believe, and they are all zealous of the law. And they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews who are among the Gentiles, to forsake Moses; saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs. What is it therefore? The multitudes must needs come together, for they will hear that thou art come. Do therefore this that we say unto thee: We have four men who have a vow on them; them take, and purify thyself with them, and be at charges with them, that they may shave their heads, and all may know that those things whereof they were informed concerning thee are nothing, but that thou thyself

“ also walkest orderly and keepest the law.” So great a resemblance in some things, viz: their attachment to the law, and their prejudices against Paul, cannot but lead us to imagine, that they were the same in other respects also, both being equally zealous observers of the law, and equally strangers to the doctrine of the divinity of Christ. In that age all the Jews were equally zealous for the great doctrine of the unity of God, and their peculiar customs. Can it be supposed then that they would so obstinately retain the one, and so readily abandon the other ?

I have not met with any mention of more than one orthodox Jewish christian in the course of my reading, and that is one whose name was Joseph, whom Epiphanius says he met with at Scythopolis, when all the other inhabitants of the place were Arians. Har. 30. Opera, vol. 1. p. 129.

C H A P T E R IX.

Of the supposed Church of Orthodox Jews at Jerusalem, subsequent to the Time of Adrian.

MOSHEIM speaks of a church of trinitarian Jews, who had abandoned the law of Moses, and resided at Jerusalem, subsequent to the time of Adrian. Origen, who asserts that all the Jewish christians of his time conformed to the law of Moses, he says, must have known of this church; and therefore he does not hesitate to tax him with asserting a wilful falsehood. Error was often ascribed to this great man by the later Fathers, but never before, I believe, was his veracity called in question. And least of all can it be supposed, that he would have dared to assert a notorious untruth in a public controversy. He must have been a fool, as well as a knave, to have ventured upon it.

Bodies

Bodies of men do not suddenly change their opinions, and much less their customs and habits; least of all would an act of violence produce that effect; and of all mankind the experiment was the least likely to answer with the Jews. If it had produced any effect for a time, their old customs and habits would certainly have returned when the danger was over. It might just as well be supposed that all the Jews in Jerusalem began at that time to speak Greek, as well as that they abandoned their ancient customs. And this might have been alledged in favour of it, that from that time the bishops of Jerusalem were all Greeks, the public offices were no doubt performed in the Greek language, and the church of Jerusalem was indeed, in all respects, as much a Greek church as that of Antioch.

Mosheim produces no authority in his Dissertations for his assertion. He only says, that he cannot reconcile the fact that Origen mentions, with his seeming unwillingness to allow the Ebionites to be christians. But this is easily accounted for from the attachment which he himself had to the doctrine doctrine of the divinity of Christ, which they denied; and from their holding no communion with other christians.

All the appearance of authority that I can find in any ancient writer, of the Jewish christians deserting the law of their ancestors, is in Sulpicius Severus, to whom I am referred by Mosheim in his History. But what he says on the subject is only what follows: “ At this time Adrian, thinking “ that he should destroy christianity by “ destroying the place, erected the images of “ dæmons in the church, and in the place “ of our Lord’s sufferings; and because the “ christians were thought to consist chiefly “ of Jews (for then the church at Jerusalem “ had all its clergy of the circumcision) “ ordered a cohort of soldiers to keep con“ stant guard, and drive all Jews from any “ access to Jerusalem; which was of service “ to the christian faith. For at that time “ they almost all believed Christ to be God, “ but with the observance of the law; the “ Lord so disposing it, that the servitude “ of the law should be removed from the “ liberty of the faith and of the church.

Then

“ Then was Marc the first bishop of the “ Gentiles at Jerufalem*.” Here the historian fays, that the object of Adrian was to overturn christianity, and that the Jews were banished because the christians there were chiefly of that nation. According to this account, all the Jews, christians, as well as others, were driven out of Jerufalem, and nothing is said of any of them forsaking the law of Moses. Eusebius mentions the expulsion of the Jews from Jerufalem, but fays not a word of any of the christians there abandoning circumcission, and their other ceremonies, on that occasion. Indeed, such a thing was in the highest de-

* Qua tempestate Adrianus, existimans se christianam fidem loci injuria perempturum, et in templo ac loco do-minicæ passionis dæmonum simulachra constituit. Et quia christiani ex Judæis potissimum putabantur (namque tum Hierosolymæ non nisi ex circumcissione habebat ec-clesia Sacerdotem) militum cohortem custodias in perpe-tuum agitare jussit, quæ Judæos omnes Hierosolymæ aditus arceret. Quod quidem christianæ fidei proficiebat; quia tum pene omnes Christum Deum sub legis observa-tione credebant, Nimirum id dōmino ordinante dispositum, ut legis servitus a libertate fidei atque ecclesiæ tolleretur.
 Ita tum primum Marcus ex Gentibus apud Hierosolymani episcopus fuit. Hist. lib. 2. cap. 31. p. 215.

gree improbable. Speaking of the desolation mentioned, If. vi. he says, that “ it “ was fulfilled in the time of Adrian, when “ the Jews, undergoing a second siege, were “ reduced to such misery, that, by the im“ perial orders, they were not suffered even “ to see the desolation of their metropolis “ at a distance *.”

Independent of all natural probability, had Sulpitius Severus actually written all that Mosheim advances; whether is it from this writer, or from Origen, that we are more likely to gain true information on this subject. Origen, writing in controversy, and of course subject to correction, appeals to a fact as notorious in the country in which he himself resided, and in his own times, to which therefore he could not but have given particular attention. Whereas Sulpitius Severus lived in the remotest part of Gaul, several thousand miles from Palestine, and two hundred years after Origen, so that he could not have asserted the fact as from his own knowledge; and he quotes no other person for it. But, in reality, Sulpitius Severus is no more favourable to Mosheim's account of the matter than Origen himself; so that to the authority of both of them, of all ancient testimony, and natural probability, nothing can be opposed but a willingness to find orthodox Jewish christians somewhere.

* Επληρωθε δε καὶ αὐτὴ κατὰ τῆς Ἀδριανῆς χρόνος, καθ ἧς δευτέραν υπομειναντιες Ἰουδαῖοι πολιορκίαν, εἰς τέλος το κακὸν περιεστῆσαν, ὡς νόμοις καὶ διατάγμασιν αὐτοκρατορικοῖς, μὴδε εἰς ἀποπίε τὴν ἐρημίαν τῆς ἐαυτῶν μητροπόλεως θεωρεῖν ἐπιτρέπεσθαι. Montfaucon's Collectio, vol. 2. p. 379:

The passage of Origen, which is a full contradiction to all that Mosheim has advanced concerning this orthodox Jewish church, consisting of persons who abandoned the law of Moses, at the surrender of Jerusalem to Adrian, is as follows: "He who
" pretends to know every thing, does not " know what belongs to the prosopopeia.
" For what does he say to the Jewish be" lievers, that they have left the customs of " their ancestors, having been ridiculously
" deceived by Jesus, and have gone over to " another name, and another mode of life;
" not considering that those Jews who have " believed in Jesus have not deserted the O 2 " customs

“ customs of their ancestors ; for they live “ according to them, having a name agree“ ing with the poverty of their legal obser“ vances. For the word Ebion, in the “ Jewish language, signifies poor ; and those “ of the Jews who believe Jesus to be the “ Christ, are called Ebionites *.”

Can it be supposed that Origen would have ventured to write in this manner (even supposing that he had no principle of integrity to restrain him from telling a wilful lie) if he had known any such church of Jewish christians as Mosheim describes. Besides, Origen's account of things agrees with what all the ancients say on the subject. Eusebius says, that the bishops of Jerusalem were Jews till the time of Adrian †. The bishops

* Ἀλλὰ μὴ ποτε ὁ πάντ' ἐπαγγελλόμενος εἶδεναι, τὸ ἀκολουθῶν ἐκ οἷδε κατὰ τὸν τόπον τῆς προσωποποιίας ; τί γνὴ λέγει πρὸς τῆς ἀπὸ Ἰουδαίων πειθευόντας, κατανοήτεον. φησὶν αὐτῆς καταλιπόντας τὸν πατριῶν νόμον, τῷ εὐχαραγωγῆσαι ὑπὸ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, ἠπατηθῆσαι πάντ' γελοιῶς· ἢ ἀπηνυτομολήκειναι εἰς ἄλλο ὄνομα, ἢ εἰς ὄλλον βίον. Μὴδὲ τῆτο κατανοήσας, ὅτι δὲ ἀπὸ Ἰουδαίων εἰς τὸν Ἰησοῦν πειθευόντες ἔκαταλείπονται τὸν πατριῶν νόμον. Βίβισι γὰρ κατ' αὐτοῦ ἐπιωνυμοὶ τῆς κατὰ τὴν ἐκδοχὴν πτωχείας τῆς νόμου γεγεννημένοι. In Celsum,
 lib. 2. p. 56.

† Ὡς μεχρὶ τῆς κατὰ Ἀδριανὸν Ἰουδαίων πολιορκίας, πενήκτα ἑκατὸ τὸν ἀριθμὸν αὐλοδὴ γεγονασὶν ἐπισκοπῶν διαδοχῆαι· ἔς πάντας Ἑβραῖος φασὶν οὐκ ἄν, ἀνεκὰδεν τὴν γνῶσιν τῆς χριστῆς γνησίας καταδέξασθαι.
 Hist. lib. 4. cap. 5. p. 143.

were

were Jews, because the people were so. It is natural, therefore, to suppose, that when the bishops were Greeks, the people were Greeks also. And this is what Nicephorus expressly asserts to have been the case. For he says, that “Adrian caused Jerusalem to be inhabited by Greeks only, and permitted no others to live in it*.”

Origen is so far from saying, that any Jews abandoned circumcision, and the rites of their religion, that he says some of the Gentile christians conformed to them †.

Having consulted Eusebius, and other ancient writers to no purpose, for some account of these Jews who had deserted the religion of their ancestors, I looked into Tillemont, who is wonderfully careful and exact in bringing together every thing that relates to his subject; but his account * Ἐλάσθη δὲ μόνως τὴν πόλιν εἰδὼς, καὶ καλοῖκεν ἐπέστεπεν. Hist. lib. 3. cap. 24. vol. 1. p. 256.

† Quia non solum carnales Judæi de circumcissione carnis revincendi sunt nobis, sed nonnulli ex eis, qui Christi nomen videntur suscepisse, et tamen carnalem circumcissionem recipiendam putant: ut Ebionitæ, et si qui his simili paupertate sensus aberrant. In Gen. Hom. 3. Opera. vol. 1. p. 19.

of the matter differs widely indeed from that of Mosheim. He says (Hist. des Empereurs, tom. 2. part 2. p. 506) “ The “ Jews converted to the faith of Christ “ were not excepted by Adrian from the “ prohibition to continue at Jerusalem.
 “ They were obliged to go out with the “ rest. But the Jews being then obliged “ to abandon Jerusalem, that church began “ to be composed of Gentiles, and before “ the death of Adrian, in the middle of the “ year 138, Marc, who was of Gentile “ race, was established their bishop.” He does not say with Mosheim, that this Marc was chosen by the Jews who abandoned the Mosaic rites. Hist. vol. 1. p. 172.

Fleury, I find, had the same idea of that event. He says (Hist. vol. 1. p. 316.)
 “ From this time the Jews were forbidden “ to enter Jerusalem, or even to see it at “ a distance. The city being afterwards “ inhabited by Gentiles, had no other name “ than Ælia. Hitherto the church of Je“ rusalem had only been composed of Jew“ ish converts, who observed the ritual of “ the law under the liberty of the gospel;

“ but then, as the Jews were forbidden to “ remain there, and guards were placed to “ defend the entrance of it, there were no “ other christians there besides those who “ were of Gentile origin ; and thus the re“ mains of the servitude of the law were “ entirely abolished.”

I cannot help, in this place, taking some farther notice of what Mosheim says with respect to this charge of a wilful falshood on Origen. Jerom, in his epistle to Pam-machius (Opera, vol. 1. p. 496.) says, that Origen adopted the Platonic doctrine of the subserviency of truth to utility, as with respect to deceiving enemies, &c. the same that Mr. Hume, and other speculative moralists have done; considering the foundation of all social virtue to be the public good. But it by no means follows from this, that such persons will ever indulge themselves in any greater violations of truth, than those who hold other speculative opinions concerning the foundation of morals.

Jerom was far from saying, that “ Ori“ gen reduced his theory to practice.” He mentions no instance whatever of his having recourse to it, and is far, indeed, from vindicating any person in asserting, that to silence an adversary, he had recourse to the wilful and deliberate allegation of a notorious falshood.

Grotius also says, that it is well observed by Sulpitius Severus, that all the Jewish christians till the time of Adrian held that Christ was God, though they observed the law of Moses, in the passage which I have quoted from him. But the sense in which Grotius understood the term God in this place must be explained by his own sentiments concerning Christ. As to Sulpitius himself, he must be considered as having said nothing more than that, “almost all the Jews at Jerusalem were christians, though they observed the law of Moses.” This writer’s mere assertion, that the Jewish christians held Christ to be God, in the proper sense of the word, unsupported by any reasons for it, is not to be regarded.

CHAPTER X.

Of the supposed Heresy of the Ebionites and Nazarenes, and other particulars relating to them.

I Have observed that Tertullian is the first christian writer who expressly calls the Ebionites heretics. Irenæus, in his large treatise concerning heresy, expresses great dislike of their doctrine, always representing them as believing that Jesus was the son of Joseph; but he never confounds them with the heretics. Justin Martyr makes no mention of Ebionites, but he speaks of the Jewish christians, which has been proved to be a synonymous expression; and it is plain, that he did not consider all of them as heretics, but only those of them who refused to communicate with the Gentile christians. With respect to the rest, he says, that he should have no

no objection to hold in communion with them*. He describes them as persons who observed the law of Moses, but did not impose it upon others. Who could these be but Jewish unitarians? For according to the evidence of all antiquity, and what is supposed by Justin himself, all the Jewish christians were such. It is probable, therefore, that the Nazarenes, or Ebionites, were considered as in a state of excommunication, merely because they would have imposed the law of Moses upon the Gentiles, and refused to hold communion with any, besides those who were circumcised; so that, in fact, they excommunicated themselves.

This circumstance may throw some light on the passage in Jerom, in which he speaks of the Ebionites as anathematized solely on account of their adherence to the Jewish law. The Ebionites, at least many of them, would have imposed the yoke of the Jewish law upon the Gentile christians. They would not communicate with those who were not circumcised, and of course these could not communicate with them; so that they were necessarily in a state of ex-communication with respect to each other. This would also be the case with the Cerinthians, as well as the Ebionites; and therefore Jerom mentions them together; the separation of communion with respect to both arising, in a great measure, from the observance of the law of Moses; though Jerom might write unguardedly, as he often did, in confounding the case of the Cerinthians so much as he here does with that of the Ebionites.

Ruffinus makes the heresy of Ebion to consist in their enjoining the observance of the Jewish law*. The attachment of the Jews to their own law was certainly very great. Origen speaks of the Ebionites as * Consilium vanitatis est quod Ebion docet, ita Christo credi debere, ut circumcisio carnis, et observatio sabbathi, et sacrificiorum solemnitas, cæteræque omnes observantiæ secundum legis literam teneantur. In Symbol. p. 189.

thinking

thinking that Christ came chiefly for the sake of the Israelites*.

There is something very particular in the conduct of Tertullian with respect to the Ebionites. He speaks of the heresy of Ebion (of which he makes but the slightest mention in his Treatise against heresy in general) as consisting in the observance of the Jewish ceremonies †; and yet he says, that “ John in his epistle calls those chiefly “ antichrists, who denied that Christ came “ in the flesh, and who did not think that “ Jesus was the Son of God ;” meaning, probably, a disbelief of the miraculous conception. “ The former,” he says, “ Marcion held, the latter Ebion ‡.”

* Ουκ απεσαλην ει μη εις τα προβαλα τα απολωλοια οικια Ισραηλ .
 εκ ελαμβανομεν ταυτα ως οι πτωχοι τη διανδια Εβιωναιοι πτωχειας της διανοιας επαννυμοι (Εβιω γαρ ο πτωχος παρ Εβραιοις ονομαζειται) ωσε υπολαθειν επι της σαρκικης Ισραηλιταις προηγουμενωσ τον χριστον εκδεδημηκεται. Philocalia, p. 16.

† Ad Galatas scribens invehitur in observatores et defensores circumcisionis et legis. Hebionis hæresis est. De Præscrip. sect. 33. Opera, p. 214.

‡ At in epistola eos maxime antichristos vocat, qui Christum negarent in carne venisse, et qui non putarent
 Jesum

Upon the whole, the conduct of Tertullian very much resembles that of Irenæus, who, without classing the Ebionites with heretics, expresses great dislike of their doctrine.

It is certain, that the Ebionites were a very different set of persons from the Gnostics, and that they were utter strangers to the principles of that philosophy which were the cause of the prejudice that was entertained concerning matter and the body, and which led the Gnostics to recommend corporeal austerities, and abstinence from marriage. Epiphanius says, that “the Ebionites, and all such sects, were enemies to virginity and continence*.”

This writer’s hatred of the Ebionites, and of course his misrepresentation of them, are very conspicuous. But there is one thing which he lays to their charge, which, though absolutely incredible, it is not easy to account for. For he says, that “ the Ebionites revere water as a God*.” Damascenus says the same after him. De Hæresibus, Opera, p. 690.

Jesum esse filium dei. Illud Marcion, hoc Hebion vindicavit. De Præscrip. sect. 33. Opera, p. 214.

† Τα νυν δε απηγορευται πανταυτοι παρ αυτοις παρθενια τε κη εγκρατεια, ως κη παρα τοις αλλαις ομοιαις ταυτη αιρεσεται. Hær. 30. p. 526.

Another most extraordinary and highly improbable allegation of Epiphanius, with respect to the Ebionites, is his charging them with the peculiar doctrines of the Gnostics, which is contrary to the testimony, I may safely say, of all other ancient writers; it being commonly said by them, that the heresy of the Ebionites was the very reverse of that of the Gnostics. He says, however, that “ some of “ the Ebionites held that Adam, who was “ first formed, and into whom God breathed “ the breath of life, was Christ. But others “ of them say that he was from above, “ that he was a spirit created before any “ others, before the angels, that he was “ lord of all, was called Christ, and made “ the sovereign of that age; that he came “ from thence whenever he pleased, as into “ Adam, and that he appeared in the form

* Το υδωρ αντι θεου εχουσι. Opera, vol. 1. p. 53.

“ of a man to the patriarchs, to Abraham, “ Isaac, and Jacob, and that it was the “ same who in the latter days, being clothed “ with the body of Adam, appeared as a “ man, was crucified, rose from the dead,
 “ and ascended into heaven*.”

Again, speaking of the Ebionites in general, he says; “ they assert that there were “ two beings created, viz. Christ and the “ devil; that Christ took the inheritance “ of the future age, and the devil of the “ present, and that the Supreme Being “ made this appointment at the request of “ them both. On this account, they say “ that Jesus was born of the seed of man,
 “ and became the son of God by adoption,
 “ by Christ coming into him from above,

* Τινες γαρ ἐξ αὐτῶν καὶ Ἀδάμ του χριστου εἶναι λεγουσι, τον πρωτου πλαιστηναι τε καὶ ἐμφυσηθεναι ἀπο της τε θεσ επιπνοιας. αλλοι δε εν αυτοις λεγουσιν ανωθεν μεν οντα, προ παντων δε κτισθεναι πνευματα οντα, καὶ υπερ αγγελου οντα, παντων τε κυριευοντα, καὶ χριστον λεγεσθαι, τον εκεισε δε αιωνα κεντηρωσθαι. ερχεσθαι δε ενταυθα οτε βαλειαι, ως καὶ εν τω Ἀδαμ ηλθε, καὶ τοις πατριαρχαις εμφανειο ενδυομεν<sup>θ</sup> το σωμα.
 προς Αβρααμ ελθων καὶ Ισαακ καὶ Ιακωβ. ο αυτος επ' εσχαιων των ημερων ηλθε, καὶ αυτο το σωμα τε Ἀδαμ ενεδυσαιο, καὶ ωφθη ανθρωπος, καὶ εσταυρωθη, καὶ ανεστη, καὶ ανηλθεν. Hær. 30. sect. 3. p. 127.

“ in

“ in the form of a dove. But they say that “ he was not generated from God the Fa“ ther, but created by him, as one of the “ archangels, though greater than they ;
 “ for that he is lord of the angels, and of “ all things that were made by the Al“ mighty ; that he came and taught what “ is contained in their gospel, saying, I “ am come to destroy sacrifices, and if you will “ not cease to sacrifice, wrath shall not cease
 “ with respect to you. These and such like “ things are taught by them*.”

In another passage he ascribes these doctrines not to Ebion himself, but to his * Δυο δε τινες, ως εφην, συνισωσιν εκ δευ τελειμενης, ενα μεν τον χριστον, ενα δε τον διαβολον. κη τον μεν χριστον λεγουσι τε μελλοντι αιωνος ειληφεναι τον κληρον, τον δε διαβολον τελον πεπιτευθει του αιωνα, εκ προσταγης δηθεν τε παντοκρατορος καλα αιησιν εκαλεραν αυτων. κη τελς ενεκα Ιησεν γεγενημενον εκ σπερματι ανδρος λεγουσι, κη επιτε-χθεντα, κη ελω καλα εκλογην υιον δευ κληθεντα, απο τε ανωθεν εις αυτον ηκοντι χρις εν ειδη περιετρας. ε φασικουσι δε εκ δευ πατρος αυτου γεγενησθαι, αλλα εκλισθαι, ως ενα των αρχαγγελων, μειζονα δε αυτων οντα, αυτον δε κυριευειν, κη αγερω κη παντων απο τε παντοκρατορος πεπονημενων, κη ελθοντα κη υφηγησασμενον, ως το παρ αυτοις ευαγγελιον καλεμενον περιεχει, οι κηδον καταλευσαι τας θυσιας, κη εαν μη παυσησθε τε θυειν, ε παυσεται αφ υμων η οργη. και ταυτα και τοιαυτα τινα εστιν τα παρ αυτοις επιηδευματα. Ηετ. 30. sect. 16. p. 140.

followers

followers. “Ebion himself,” he says, “held that Christ was a mere man, born “as other men are; but they who from “him are called Ebionites, say that God “had a superior power called his son, that “he assumed the form of Adam, and put “it off again*.”

That this representation, which is wholly Epiphanius’s own, is founded on some mistake, cannot be doubted; and I think it most probable, that he has confounded the doctrines of the Ebionites with those of the Cerinthians, who agreed with them in some things, especially in Jesus being a mere man, born as other men are. But he most grossly misrepresented both the Ebionites and the Cerinthians, in saying that they rejected sacrifices, and taught that Christ preached against them. For according to the testimony of all antiquity, both these sects insisted on the observance of the Jewish law.

* Ποτε μεν ο αυλος Εβιων λεγων εκ παραληθης ψιλον ανθρωπον αυτον γεγενησθαι. αλλοτε δε οι απ’ αυτε Εβιωναιοι, ανα δυναμιν εκ θεε κεντησθαι υιον, και τετον κατα καιρον του Αδαμ ενδυεσθαι τε και εκδυεσθαι. Hær. 30. sect. 34. p. 162.

This is all that I have been able to collect concerning the heresy of the Ebionites, excepting that Optatus charges them with maintaining that “the Father suffered, and “not the Son*.” But it was no uncommon thing to charge all unitarians with being patripassians. No early accounts of the Ebionites say any such thing of them. Their doctrine was simply, that Christ was a man, but a man approved of God by signs and wonders, and mighty deeds, which God did by him.

I must here remark, that no person, I should think, can reflect upon this subject with proper seriousness, without thinking it a little extraordinary that the Jewish christians, in so early an age as they are spoken of by the denomination of Ebionites, should be acknowledged to believe nothing either of the divinity, or even of the pre-existence of Christ, if either of those doctrines had been taught them by the apostles. Could they so soon have deserted so important an article of their faith, and so lately delivered to the saints, and having once believed Christ to be either the Supreme God, or a super-angelic spirit, have contrary to the general propensity of human nature (which has always been to aggrandize, rather than to degrade a lord and master, because it is in fact to aggrandize themselves) come universally to believe him to be nothing more than a mere man, and even the son of Joseph and Mary?

* Ut Hebion, qui argumentabatur patrem passum esse, non filium. Lib. 4. p. 91.

CHAPTER XI.

Of the sacred Books of the Ebionites.

THE Ebionites being Jews, and in general acquainted with their own language only, made use of no other than a Hebrew gospel, which is commonly said to have been that of Matthew, originally composed in their language, and for their use. This I think highly probable, from the almost unanimous testimony of antiquity. But this is a question which I shall not make it my business to discuss.

“The Ebionites,” says Irenæus, “make use of the gospel of Matthew only*.” Jerom had seen this gospel, and translated it from Hebrew into Greek, and without giving his own opinion, says, that “it was by most persons called the authentic gospel of * Ebionitæ etenim eo evangelio quod est secundum Matthæum solo utentes. Lib.3. cap. 11. p. 220.

“Matthew.”

“ Matthew*.” Theodoret says concerning both the kinds of Ebionites, that they received no other gospel than that of Matthew †.

But it is evident from Epiphanius, that the Ebionites did not consider the two first chapters of Matthew’s gospel as belonging to it; for their copies were without them, beginning with the third chapter. “ The “ gospel of the Ebionites began thus, It “ came to pass in the days of Herod king “ of Judea, in the time of Caiaphas the “ high-priest, a person whose name was “ John came baptizing with the baptism “ of repentance in the river Jordan ‡.”
Here, however, there must be some mistake, as it was not in the time of Herod

* In Matt. cap. 12. Opera, vol. 6. p. 21:

† Ἀλλῆ δὲ παρὰ ταύτην συμμορία, τὴν αὐτὴν ἐπωνυμίαν ἔχουσα· Ἐβιωνεῖς γὰρ καὶ εἰσι προσαιγορευοῦνται· τὰ ἀλλὰ μὲν ἀπάντα συνομολογεῖ τοῖς πρῶτοις, τὸν δὲ σῶτῆρα καὶ κυρίον ἐκ παρθενῆς γεγεννησθαι φησιν· εὐαγγελίῳ δὲ τῷ κατὰ Ματθαίου κερηνίζου μόνῳ. Hær. Fab. lib. 2. cap. 1. vol. 4. p. 328. Ed Halæ.

‡ Ὅτι ἐγενέτο, φησιν, ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις Ἡρώδου βασιλεως τῆς Ἰουδαίας, ἐπὶ Ἀρχιεως Καϊαφα ἦλθε τις Ἰωάννης ὀνομασί βαπτίζων βαπτισμα μελαινίας ἐν τῷ ποταμῷ Ἰορδάνη, καὶ τὰ ἐξῆς. Hær. 30. Opera, vol. 1. p. 138:

king of Judea, but of Herod the Tetrarch, or king of Galilee; and the inaccuracy is probably to be ascribed to Epiphanius himself. That this writer quoted only from his memory, and inaccurately, is evident from his giving the beginning of this gospel in another place somewhat differently, as follows: “It came to pass in the days “of Herod king of Judea, John came bap“tizing with the baptism of repentance, “in the river Jordan; who was said to be “of the race of Aaron the priest, the son “of Zacharias and Elizabeth; and all men “went out to him*.”

This writer, who was fond of multiplying sects, and who makes that of the Nazarenes to be different from that of the Ebionites, says concerning the latter, that “he did “not know whether they had cut off the “genealogy from the gospel of Matthew †.”

* Οτι εγενετο εν ταις ημεραις Ηρωδη τῆ βασιλευς της Ιουδαϊας, ηλθεν Ιωαννης βαπτιζων βαπτισμα μετάνοιας εν τω Ιορδανη ποταμῳ, ος ελεγετο ειναι εκ γενεας Ααρων τῆ ιερευς, παις Ζαχαριε και Ελισαβετ, και εξηρχοντο προς αυτον παντες. Ηερ. 30. sect. 13. p. 138.

† Εχσσι δε το καλα Ματθαιου ευαγγελιον ωληρησατον Εβραϊσι .
παρ' αυτοις γαρ σαφως τῆτο, καδως εξ αρχης εγραφη Εβραϊκοις γραμμασι

Meaning, perhaps, the whole of the introduction, as far as the third chapter.— It must be observed, however, that in the copy of this gospel which Jerom translated, there was the second chapter, if not the genealogy. For in this gospel there was, *out of Egypt I have called my son, and he shall be called a Nazarene**." This I am willing to explain in the following manner. Originally the Jewish christians did not believe the doctrine of the miraculous conception. Both Justin Martyr and Irenæus represent them as disbelieving it, without excepting any that did. Origen is the first who has noticed two kinds of Ebionites, one believing the miraculous γραμμασιν ἐτι σωζεται. ἔκ οὐδα δὲ εἰ καὶ τὰς γενεαλογίας τὰς ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀβραάμ περιειλον. Ἡερ. 29. vol. 1. p. 124.

* Mihi quosque a Nazaræis, qui in Beræa, urbè Syriæ, hoc volumine utuntur, describendi facultas fuit, in quo animadvertendum quod ubicunque evangelista, sive ex persona sua, sive ex persona domini salvatoris, veteris scripturæ testimoniis utitur, non sequatur septuaginta translatorum auctoritatem, sed Hebraicam, e quibus illa duo sunt. Ex Ægypto vocavi illum meum, et quoniam Nazaræus vocabitur. Catalogus Scriptorum, Opera, vol. 1. p. 267.

conception, and the other denying it. Probably, therefore, their original copies of the gospel had not the two first chapters, which contained that history; but after some time, those of the Jewish christians who gave credit to the story, would naturally add these two chapters from the Greek copies; and it might be a copy of this kind that Jerom met with.

Epiphanius likewise says, that “the Ebionites made use of the travels of Clement*.” This being an unitarian work, they might be pleased with it; but it is not probable that they would read it in the public offices of their churches, or consider it in the same light with one of the books of scripture.

It is agreed on all hands that the Ebionites made no use of the epistles of Paul, because they did not approve of the slight which he seemed to put upon the law of Moses, which they held in the greatest possible veneration.

* Χρῶνται δὲ καὶ ἀλλοῖς τισὶ βιβλίοις, ὄθεν τὰς περιόδους καλεσμένοις Πέτρος, τὰς διὰ Κλημεντῶ γραφείσους. Har. 30.
Opera, vol. I. p. 139.

Epiphanius

Epiphanius says farther concerning the Ebionites, that “ they detest the prophets*.” This, however, I think altogether as improbable, as what he says of their revering water as a god. He is the only writer who asserts any such thing, and as far as appears from all other accounts, the Ebionites acknowledged the authority of all that we call the canonical books of the Old Testament. Symmachus, whose translation of the scriptures into Greek is so often quoted, and with the greatest approbation, by the learned Fathers, was an Ebionite; and Jerom says the same of Theodotion. They both translated the other books of the Old Testament, as well as the Pentateuch, and, as far as appears, without making any distinction between that and the other books; and can this be thought probable, if they had not considered them as entitled to equal credit? Besides, our Saviour’s acknowledgment of the authority of the whole of the Old Testament is so express, that I cannot readily believe that any christians, Jews especially, acknowledging his authority, would reject what he admitted.

* Αὐτῷ [Κλημης] γὰρ ἐγκωμιάζει Ἡλιαν, καὶ Δαβὶδ, καὶ Σαμψων, καὶ πάντας τὰς προφητάς, ὡς εἶσι βδελυττοῦνται. Hær. 30. p.

Lastly, the authority of Epiphanius is, in effect, contradicted by Irenæus, who says, that “the Ebionites expounded the “prophecies too curiously*.” Grabe says, that Ebion (by which we must understand some Ebionite) wrote an exposition of the prophets, as he collected from some fragments of Irenæus’s work, of which he gives some account in his note upon the place †.

* Quæ autem sunt prophetica curiosius exponere nituntur. Lib. 1. cap. 26. p. 102.

† Ipsum Ebionem ἐξηγησιν τῶν προφητῶν scripsisse, colligo ex fragmentis hujus operis, quæ ante paucos dies Parisiis accepi, in MS. codice collegii Claromontani descripto, a viro humanissimo, R. P. Michaele Loquien, inter addenda ad specilegium hæreticorum sæculi 1. suo tempore, deo volente, publicanda. Ibid.

C H A P T E R XII.

Of Men of Eminence among the Jewish Christians.

THOUGH it is probable, that the Jewish christians in general were poor, and therefore had no great advantage of liberal education, which might be one means of preserving their doctrine in such great simplicity and purity ; yet it appears that there were some men of learning among them. Jerom mentions his being acquainted with such during his residence in Palestine ; and there are three persons among them who distinguished themselves by translating the Old Testament from Hebrew into Greek, viz. Aquila, Theodotion, and Symmachus ; though the last of them only was a native of Palestine, and born a Samaritan. Eusebius says, that “ Theodotion and Aquila were both Jewish “ profelytes, whom the Ebionites follow“ ing,

“ing, believe Christ to be the son of “ Joseph*.” According to Epiphanius, Theodotion was first a Marcionite, and then a Jewish convert †. Aquila is said to have flourished about the year 130, Theodotion about 180, and Symmachus about 200.
 Whatever was thought of the religious principles of these men, the greatest account was made of their versions of the Hebrew scriptures by learned christians of all parties, especially that of Symmachus, which is perpetually quoted with the greatest respect by Origen, Eusebius, and others.
 Jerom, speaking of Origen, says, that “ be“ sides comparing the version of the sep“ tuagint, he likewise collated the versions “ of Aquila of Pontus, a profelyte, that “ of Theodotion an Ebionite, and that of “ Symmachus, who was of the same sect ;
 “ who also wrote commentaries on the “ gospel of Matthew, from which he en-

* Ως Θεοδοσίαν ἑρμηνεύσεν ὁ Ἐφεσίος, καὶ Ἀκυλάς ὁ Ποντικός, ἀμφότεροι Ἰουδαῖοι προσηλυτοὶ οἱς καλῶς ἐμαρτυροῦντο οἱ Ἐβιωνῆες, ἐξ Ἰωσήφ αὐτῶν γεγενῆσθαι φασκεται. Hist. lib. 5. cap. 8. p. 221.

† Θεοδοσίαν τῆς Ποντικῆς ἀπο τῆς διδοχῆς Μαρμῆωνος τῆς αἰρεσι-αρχῆς τῆς Σινοπίτις. De Mensuris, Opera, vol. 2. p. 172, “ deavoured

“ deavoured to prove his opinion*.” In so great estimation was Symmachus held, that Austin says the Nazarenes were sometimes called Symmachians †.

I reserve the account of Hegeſippus to the laſt, becauſe it has been aſſerted that, though he was a Jewish chriſtian, he was not properly an Ebionite, but orthodox with reſpect to his belief of the trinity. But that he was not only a Jewish chriſtian, but likewise a proper Ebionite, or a believer in the ſimple humanity of Chriſt, may, I think, be inferred from ſeveral circumſtances, beſides his being a Jewish chriſtian; though, ſince Origen ſays that none of them believed the divinity of Chriſt, we ought to have ſome poſitive evidence before we admit that he was an exception.

* Aquilæ ſcilicet Pontici profelyti, et Theodotionis Hebionei, et Symmachi ejuſdem dogmatis, qui in evangelium quoque κατα Ματθαίου ſcripſit commentarios, de quo et ſuum dogma confirmare conatur. Catalogus Scriptorum, Opera, vol. I. p. 294.

† Et tamen ſi mihi Nazareorum objiceret quiſquam quos alii Symmachianos appellant. Contra Fauſtum Man. Opera, vol. 6. p. 342.

That

That Hegesippus was an Ebionite, may be inferred from his giving a list of all the heresies of his time, in which he enumerates a considerable number, and all of them Gnostics, without making any mention of the Ebionites.

He being a Jewish christian himself, could not but be well acquainted with the prevailing opinions of the Jewish christians, the most conspicuous of which, it cannot be denied, was the doctrine of Christ's being a mere man. Now can it be supposed, that if he himself had been what is now called an orthodox christian, that is, a trinitarian, or even an Arian, he would wholly have omitted the mention of the Ebionites in any list of heretics of his time, had it been ever so short a one; and this consists of no less than eleven articles? Also, can it be supposed that Eusebius, who speaks of the Ebionites with so much hatred and contempt, would have omitted to copy this article, if it had been in the list?

Their not being inserted in the list by such a person as Eusebius, must, I think, satisfy satisfy any person, who has no system to support, with respect to this article. A stronger negative argument can hardly be imagined. As to Hegeſippus himſelf, we muſt judge of his feelings and conduct as we ſhould of thoſe of any perſon at this day in a ſituation ſimilar to his. Now, did any ſubſequent eccleſiaſtical hiſtorian, or did any modern divine, of the orthodox faith, ever omit Arians, or Socinians, or names ſynonymous to them (who always were, and ſtill are, in the higheſt degree obnoxious to them) in a liſt of heretics?

Had the faith of the early chriſtians been either that Chriſt was true and very God, or a ſuperior angelic ſpirit, the maker of the world, and of all things viſible and inviſible under God; and had Hegeſippus himſelf retained that faith, while the generality, or only any conſiderable number of his countrymen, had departed from it, it could not but have been upon his mind, and have excited the ſame indignation that the opinions of the Arians and Socinians excite in the minds of thoſe who are called orthodox at this day. Nay, in his circumſtances, such a defection from that important article of faith in his own countrymen, after having been so recently taught the contrary by the apostles themselves, whose writings they still had with them, must have excited a much greater degree of surprize and indignation, than a similar defection would have occasioned in any other people, or in any later times.

It is said to be as remarkable that Hegesippus should have omitted the Cerinthians as the Ebionites. But I see nothing at all extraordinary in the omission of the Cerinthians in this list of heretics by Hegesippus, as they were only one branch of the Gnostics, several of whom are in his list; and it is not improbable that these Cerinthians, having been one of the earliest branches, might have been very inconsiderable, perhaps extinct in his time. I do not know that they are mentioned by any ancient writer as existing so late as the time of Hegesippus; and as they seem to have been pretty much confined to some part of Asia Minor, and especially Galatia, which was very remote from the seat of the Ebionites,

he

he might not have heard much about them. Whereas the Ebionites were at that very time in their full vigour, and though their opinions (being then almost universal in what was called the catholic church) had not begun to give offence, they were afterwards the object of the most violent hatred to the other christians, and continued to be so as long as they subsisted.

That Hegesippus, though an unitarian himself, should speak as he does of the state of opinions in the several churches which he visited, as then retaining the true faith, is, I think, very natural. The only heresy that disturbed the apostle John, and therefore other Jewish christians in general, was that of the Gnostics; and all the eleven different kinds of heresies, enumerated by this writer, are probably only different branches of that one great heresy. If, therefore, the churches which he visited were free from Gnosticism, he would naturally say that they retained the true faith. For as to the doctrine of the personification of the logos, held then by Justin Martyr, and perhaps a few others, it was not, in its origin, so very alarming a thing; and very probably this plain man had not at all considered its nature and tendency, if he had heard of it. The author of the Clementine Homilies, though cotemporary with Hegesippus, and unquestionably an unitarian, makes no mention of it.

Hegesippus, as an unitarian, believed that all the extraordinary power exerted by Christ was that of the Father residing in him, and speaking and acting by him; and he might imagine that these philosophizing christians, men of great name, and a credit to the cause, held in fact the same thing, when they said that this logos of theirs was not the logos of the Gnostics, but that of John the evangelist, or the wisdom and power of God himself. And though this might appear to him as a thing that he could not well understand, he might not think that there was any heresy, or much harm in it. Had he been told (but this he could only have had from inspiration) that this specious personification of the divine logos would, about two centuries afterwards, end in the doctrine of the perfect equality of the Son with the Father,

this

this plain good man might have been a little startled.

That Eusebius, and others, should speak of Hegesippus with respect (from which it has been argued that he could not possibly have been an Ebionite) appears to me nothing extraordinary, though it should have been known to them that he was one, considering that they quote him only as an historian; and supposing, what is very probable, that he did not treat particularly of doctrinal matters, but confined himself to the acts of the apostles, and other historical circumstances attending the propagation of the gospel; especially as he was the only historian of that age, and had always been held in esteem. A man who is once in possession of the general good opinion, will not be censured lightly, especially by such men as Eusebius.

Can it be supposed also that Eusebius, in expressly quoting ancient authorities against those who held the opinion of the simple humanity of Christ, would not have cited Hegesippus, as well as Irenæus, Justin Martyr, and others, if he could have found any thing in him for his purpose? This may be considered as a proof that there was nothing in his work unfavourable to the doctrine of the Ebionites. A negative argument can hardly be stronger than this.

Q 2

could

Had there been any pretence for quoting Hegesippus as a maintainer of the divinity of Christ, he would certainly have been mentioned in preference to Justin Martyr, or any others in the list; not only because he was an earlier writer, but chiefly because he was one of the Jewish christians, who are well known not to have favoured that opinion.

The manner in which Eusebius speaks of Hegesippus's quoting the gospel of the Hebrews, is such as led him to think that he was a Hebrew christian. "He quotes some things from the gospel according to the Hebrews and the Syriac, and especially in the Hebrew tongue, shewing that he was one of the Hebrew christians*." We may, therefore, conclude, that he quoted it with respect; and this was not done except by those who were Ebionites, or who favoured their opinions. As Hegesippus wrote in Greek, he must have been acquainted with the Greek gospels, and therefore must have quoted that of the Hebrews from choice, and not from necessity.

* Εἰ τε τὸ καθ' Ἑβραίων εὐαγγέλιον καὶ τὸ Συριακὸν, καὶ ἰδίως ἐκ τῆς Ἑβραϊκῆς διαλέκτου τινα τίθῃσι, ἐμφανῶν ἐξ Ἑβραίων αὐτοῦ πεπιστευμένοι. Hist. lib. 4. cap. 24. p. 184.

Lastly, the manner in which Hegesippus speaks of James the Just, is much more that of an unitarian, than of a trinitarian.—“James the Just,” says Eusebius, “is represented by Hegesippus as saying, Why do you ask me concerning Jesus the son of man *?” This looks as if both James and the historian were unitarians; the phrase son of man, being probably synonymous to a prophet, or a person having a divine commission, and certainly not implying any nature properly divine.

Valesius, the learned commentator on Eusebius, has intimated a suspicion, that the works of Hegesippus, as well as those of Papias and the Hypotyposes of Clemens Alexandrinus, were neglected and lost, on account of the errors they were supposed to contain*. This I cannot help thinking highly probable, and those errors could hardly be any other than the unitarian doctrine, and the things connected with it. Indeed, there were no errors of any consequence ascribed to that early age besides those of the Gnostics, and of the unitarians. The former certainly were not those that Valesius could allude to with respect to Hegesippus, because this writer mentions the Gnostics very particularly as heretics. Though Clemens Alexandrinus was not an unitarian, yet he never calls unitarians heretics; and since, in his accounts of heretics in general, which are pretty frequent in his works, he evidently means the Gnostics only, and therefore virtually excludes unitarians from that description of men; it is by no means improbable but that, in those writings of his which are lost, he might have said things directly in favour of unitarians.

* Τι με επερωτατε περι Ιησους τε υιου τε ανθρωπου. Hist. lib. 2. cap. 23. p. 79.

* Porro ii Clementis libri continebant brevem et compendiarium utriusque testamenti expositionem, ut testatur Photius in bibliotheca. Ob errores autem quibus scatebant, negligentius habiti, tandem perierunt. Nec alia, meo quidem iudicio, causa est, cur Papiæ et Hegesippi, aliorumque veterum libri intercederint. In Euseb. Hist. lib. 5. cap. 11.

In this passage Valesius also mentions the writings of Papias, as having, in his opinion, been lost for the same reason. Now Papias has certainly been supposed to be an Ebionite. Mr. Whiston has made this very probable from a variety of circumstances. See his Account of the ceasing of Miracles, p. 18. In the same tract he gives his reasons for supposing Hegesippus to have been an Ebionite, and he expresses his wonder, “that he should have had the good fortune “to be so long esteemed by the learned for “a catholic,” p. 21, &c. In this Mr. Whiston may be supposed to have been sufficiently impartial, as he was an Arian, and expresses great dislike of the Ebionites; as, indeed, Arians always have done.

It is to be lamented that we know so very little of the history of the Jewish christians. We are informed, that they retired to Pella, a country to the east of the sea of Galilee, on the approach of the Jewish war, that many of them returned to Jerusalem when that war was over, and that they continued there till the city was taken by Adrian. But what became of those who were driven out of the city by Adrian, does not appear. It is most probable that they joined their brethren at Pella, or Berræa in Syria, from whence they had come to reside at Jerusalem; and indeed what became of the whole body of the ancient christian Jews (none of whom can be proved to have been trinitarians) I cannot tell. Their numbers, we may suppose, were gradually reduced, till at length they became extinct. I hope, however, we shall hear no more of them as an evidence of the antiquity of the trinitarian doctrine.

A few of the Nazarenes remained, as Epiphanius says, in the Upper Thebais and Arabia. He also speaks of the Ebionites as existing in his own time, and joined by the Offens*. Austin says that they were in small numbers even in his time †.

* Μονοὶ δὲ τινες ἐν σπαγεί εὐρισκόνται, ἢ παρ' εἰς, ἢ δύο Ναζαρηνοὶ ὑπὲρ τὴν ἀνω Θηβαίδα, καὶ ἐπεκεινὰ τῆς Ἀραβίας. Hær. 20. Opera, vol. i. p. 46.

† Ji sunt quos Faustus Symmachianorum vel Nazarenorum, nomine commemoravit, qui usque ad nostra tempora jam quidem in exigua, sed adhuc tamen vel in ipsa, paucitate perdurant. Contra Faustum Man. Opera, vol. 6, p. 351.

C H A P T E R XIII.

Unitarianism was the Doctrine of the primitive Gentile Churches.

HAVING proved, as I think I may presume that I have done, to the satisfaction of every impartial reader, that the great body of Jewish christians always were, and to the last continued to be, unitarians; believing nothing concerning the pre-existence or divinity of Christ, it may with certainty be concluded, that the Gentile converts were also universally unitarians in the age of the apostles, and that, of course, the great majority of the common people must have continued to be so for a very considerable time. There is no maxim, the truth of which is more fully verified by observation and experience, than that great bodies of men do not soon, or without great causes, change their opinions. And the common people among christians, having no recollection of the apostles having taught

2

taught the pre-existence or divinity of Christ, would not soon receive such strange doctrines from any other quarter.

In what manner the speculative and philosophizing christians came to receive these doctrines, and what plausible arguments they used to recommend them, I have fully explained. But such causes would affect the learned long before they reached the unlearned; though, in time, the opinions of those who are respected for their knowledge, never fail to diffuse themselves among the common people, as we see to be the case in matters of philosophy, and speculation in general.

Actual phenomena, I shall undertake to shew, correspond to this hypothesis, viz. that the Gentile christians were at first universally unitarians; that for a long time a majority of the common people continued to be so, being till after the council of Nice, pretty generally in communion with the trinitarians, without abandoning their own opinion. It will also appear, from the most indisputable evidence, that the Arian hypothesis, which makes Christ to have been a great

a great pre-existent spirit, the maker of the world, and the giver of the law of Moses, was equally unknown to the learned and to the unlearned, till the age of Arius himself. As to the opinion of Christ having been a pre-existent spirit, but either not the maker of world, or not the giver of the law, it is quite modern, being entirely unknown to any thing that can be called antiquity.

---

S E C T I O N I.

Presumptive Evidence that the Majority of the Gentile Christians in the early Ages were Unitarians.

BOOTH the strongest presumptions, and the most direct positive evidence, show that the common people among the Gentile christians, were unitarians, at least between two and three hundred years after the promulgation of christianity.

1. That unitarians must have been in communion with what was in early times called called the catholic church, is evident from there being no creed, or formulary of faith, that could exclude them. And we have seen that a creed was formed for the express purpose of excluding the Gnostics, who, of course, could not, and we find did not, join the public assemblies of christians, but formed assemblies among themselves, entirely distinct from those of the catholics.

There was no creed used in the christian church, besides that which was commonly called the apostles, before the council of Nice, and even after that there was no other generally used at baptism. This creed, as has been seen, contains no article that could exclude unitarians; and there was nothing in the public services that was calculated to exclude them. The bishops and the principal clergy, zealous for the doctrine of the trinity, might, of their own accord harangue their audiences on the subject, or they might pray as trinitarians; but if the unitarians could bear with it, they might still continue in communion with them, there being no law, or rule, to exclude them.

Accord-

Accordingly, we find that all the unitarians continued in communion with the catholic church till the time of Theodotus, about the year 200, when it is possible that, upon his excommunication, some of his more zealous followers might form themselves into separate societies. But we have no certain account of any separate societies of unitarians till the excommunication of Paulus Samosatensis, about the year 250, when, after him, they were called Paulians, or Paulianists. Others also, about the same time, or rather after that time, formed separate societies in Africa, on the excommunication of Sabellius, being, after him, called Sabellians.

2. The very circumstance of the unitarian Gentiles having no separate name, is, of itself, a proof that they had no separate assemblies, and were not distinguished from the common mass of christians. Had the unitarians been considered as heretics, and of course formed separate societies, they would as certainly have been distinguished by some particular name, as the Gnostics were, who were in that situation. But the Gentile

Gentile unitarians had no name given them till the time of Epiphanius, who ineffectually endeavoured to impose upon them that of Alogi* As to the terms Paulians, Sabelians, Noetians, or Artemonites, they were only names given them in particular places from local circumstances.

When bodies of men are formed, distinguished from others by their opinions, manners, or customs, they necessarily become the subjects of conversation and writing; and it being extremely inconvenient to make frequent use of periphrases, or descriptions, particular names will be given to them. This is so well known, that there can hardly be a more certain proof of men not having been formed into separate bodies, whether they were considered in a favourable, or an unfavourable light, than their never having had any separate name given them; and this was indisputably the case with the Gentile unitarians for the space of more than two hundred years after the promulgation of christianity. The Jewish unitarians using a different language, and living in a part of the world remote from other christians, had little communication with the Gentiles, and therefore, of course, had assemblies separate from theirs; but for that reason they had a particular name, being called Ebionites.

* Φασκεσι τοιων οι Αλογοι · ταυτην γαρ αυλοις τιθημι την επωνυμιαν · απο γαρ της δευρα ελωσ κληθησομαι. Ηær. 51. Opera, vol. I. p. 423.

The name by which the Gentile unitarians were sometimes distinguished before the separation of any of them from the catholic church, was that of Monarchists, which was probably assumed by themselves, from their asserting the monarchy of the Father, in opposition to the novel doctrine of the divinity of the Son. Had it been a name given them by their enemies, it would probably have been of a different kind, and have implied some reproach.

As to the term Alogi, given to the unitarians by Epiphanius, it may be safely concluded, that it was imposed on a false pretence, viz. their denying the authenticity of the writings of the apostle John, and their ascribing them to Cerinthus, for which there is no evidence besides his own; and he does not pretend to have had it from the unitarians themselves. It is sufficiently evident that there could not have been any christians who rejected all the writings of John before the time of Eusebius, who considers very particularly the objections that had been made to the genuineness of all the books of the New Testament. And that the same people should reject these books after the time of Eusebius, and not before, is highly improbable. Epiphanius himself ascribes this rejection to the Alogi in general, and not to those of his time only; and he supposes the heresy of Alogi to have been an old one, of which that of Theodotus was a branch*.”
he

The proof that Origen, Chrysostom, and the Fathers in general, give of their not being heretics, is that they had no particular name, besides that of christians. All therefore, that Chrysostom and others could alledge, as a proof that themselves and their friends were of the orthodox faith, and no heretics, might have been alledged by the whole body of unitarians before the time of Theodotus.

* Ανεστη παλιν Θεοδοῖος τις αποσπασμα υπαρχων εν της προειρημενης Αλογε αιρεσεως. Hær. 54. Opera, vol. 1. p. 462.

3. This argument will have double force, if we consider how exceedingly obnoxious the sentiments of the unitarians must have appeared, if they had been different from those of the generality of christians at that time. In what light they would have been regarded then, may be easily judged of by the treatment which they receive at present, wherever the trinitarian doctrine is established, and that of the unitarians is professed by the smaller number. In these circumstances, it is a fact which no person can deny, that unitarians have, in all countries, been regarded with the greatest possible abhorrence, and treated as impious blasphemers. It is considered as a great stretch of moderation to tolerate them at all. There are many instances in which even Arians would not allow that the unitarians were christians. This now would certainly have been the case in the primitive times, if the unitarians had been in the same situation, that is, if they had been the minority, and trinitarians, or even Arians, the majority.

rity. For, human nature being the same, the influence of the same circumstances will likewise be the same, as universal experience shews. For, no sooner were the trinitarians the majority, and had the favour of government, than they took the severest measures against those who openly avowed themselves to be unitarians. The same also was their treatment from the Arians; when they were in power, as the history of Photinus testifies. It is well known with what severity Calvin proceeded against Servetus, when the doctrine which he defended was far from being novel, and Calvin himself was exposed to persecution. Even in these circumstances he thought that to write against the doctrine of the trinity was a crime for which burning alive was no more than an adequate punishment; and almost all the christian world, not excepting even the meek Melancton, justified his proceedings. Now, since the minds of men are in all ages similarly affected in similar circumstances, we may conclude, that the unitarian doctrine, which was treated with so much respect when it was first mentioned, was in a very different predicament then, from what it was at the time of the reformation. The difference of majority and minority, and nothing else, can account for this difference of treatment.

III . respect

4. Another, and no inconsiderable argument in favour of the antiquity of the proper unitarian doctrine among christians, may be drawn from the rank and condition of those who held it in the time of Tertullian. He calls them simplices et idiotæ, that is, common or unlearned people; and such persons are certainly most likely to retain old opinions, and are always far less apt to innovate than the learned, because they are far less apt to speculate. Whenever we endeavour to trace the oldest opinions in any country, we always enquire among the idiotæ, the common people; and if they believe one thing, and the learned another, we may conclude with certainty, that which ever of them be true, or the more probable, those of the common people were the more ancient, and those of the learned and speculative the more novel of the two.

In most cases the more novel opinions are most likely to be true, considering the gradual spread of knowledge, and the general prevalence of prejudice and error; but in some cases the probability is on the side of the more ancient opinions; and it is evidently so in this. The true doctrine concerning the person of Christ must be allowed to have been held by the apostles. They, no doubt, knew whether their master was only a man like themselves, or their maker. Their immediate disciples would receive and maintain the same doctrine that they held, and it must have been some time before any other could have been introduced, and have spread to any extent, and especially before it could have become the prevailing opinion. We naturally, therefore, look for the genuine doctrine of christianity, concerning the person of Christ, among those who, from their condition and circumstances, were most likely to maintain the old opinion, rather than among those who were most apt to receive a new one. Surely, then, we have a better chance of finding the truth on this subject among these idiota, the common and unlearned people, than with such men as Justin Martyr, who had been a heathen philosopher, Irenæus, or any other of the learned and speculative christians of the same age.
these

On the contrary, supposing the christian religion to have been gradually corrupted, and that, in a long course of time, the corrupt doctrine should become the most prevalent among the common people; the reformation of it, by the recovery of the genuine doctrine, is naturally to be looked for among the learned and the inquisitive, who, in all cases, will be the innovators. This is remarkably the case in the present state of things. The common people in the Roman catholic countries are bigots to the old established faith, while the learned are moderate, and almost protestants. In protestant countries the common people still adhere most strongly to the doctrine of their ancestors, or those which prevailed about the time of the reformation, while the learned are every where receding farther from them; they being more inquisitive, and more enlightened than the unenquiring vulgar. But still, if any man should propose simply to enquire what were the opinions most generally received in this country a century ago (which was about the space that intervened between Victor and the time of the apostles) we should think him very absurd, if he should look for them among the learned, rather than among the common people. We have experience enough of the difficulty with which the bulk of the common people are brought to relinquish the faith of their ancestors.

Dissenters in England are well situated for judging of the truth of the general maxim, that large bodies of men do not soon change their opinions. Notwithstanding the dissenters have no legal bonds, but are perfectly free to adopt whatever opinions they please; yet, as they were universally Calvinists at the time of the reformation, they are very generally so still. The ministers, as might be expected, are the most enlightened, and have introduced some reformation among the common people; but a majority of the ministers are, I believe, still Calvinists.

No

No person at all acquainted with history can entertain a doubt with respect to the general maxim, that great bodies of men do not soon change their opinions. It appeared when our Saviour and the apostles preached the gospel with all the advantage of miracles; and it appeared in the christianizing of the Gentile world. How long did the ignorant country people, in particular, continue pagans, a word borrowed from their being chiefly the inhabitants of villages? Does not the history both of the corruption, and of the reformation of christianity prove the same thing? How many yet believe the doctrine of transubstantiation? and what I think as much a case in point, how many yet believe the doctrine of the trinity?

Is it then at all probable, that when the doctrine of the simple humanity of Christ is acknowledged to have been held by the idiotæ, or common people, and who are expressly said to have been the greater part of the believers (major credentium pars) this should not have been the general opinion a century before that time; but, on the contrary, that of the deity of Christ, which was held by Tertullian, and other learned christians, and who speak of the common people as being shocked (expavescent) at their doctrine? Sufficient cause may be assigned why the learned in that age should be inclined to adopt any opinion which would advance the personal dignity of their master; and the same causes would produce the same effect among the common people, but it would be more slowly, and acquire more time, as appears to have been the fact.

It may be said, that the testimony of Tertullian is expressly contradicted by Justin Martyr, who (in giving an account of the circumstances in which the Platonic philosophy agreed, as he thought, with the doctrine of Moses, but with respect to which he supposed that Plato had borrowed from Moses) mentions the following particulars, viz. the power which was after the first God, or the logos, “ assuming the figure of “ a cross in the universe, borrowed from the “ fixing up of a serpent (which represented “ Christ) in the form of a cross in the wil“ derness;

“ dernefs; and a third principle, borrowed “ from the fpirit, which Mofes faid moved “ on the face of the water at the creation ;
 “ and alfo the notion of fome fire, or con“ flagration, borrowed from fome figurative “ expreffions in Mofes, relating to the anger “ of God waxing hot. Thefe things, he “ fays, we do not borrow from others, but “ all others from us. With us you may “ hear and learn thefe things from thofe “ who do not know the form of the letters,
 “ and who are rude and barbarous of fpeech, “ but wife and underftanding in mind, and “ from fome who are even lame and blind, “ fo that you may be convinced that thefe “ things are not faid by human wifdom,
 “ but by the power of God *.”

But all that we can infer from this paffage is, that thefe common people had learned from Mofes that the world was made by * Ου τα αυτα εν ημεις αλλοις δοξαζομεν, αλλ' ο παντες τα ημετερα μιμημενοι λεγουσι. παρ ημιν εν εσι ταυτα ακουσαι και μαθειν παρα των κδε τες χαρακτηρας των στοιχειων επιλαμβανων, ιδιωτων μεν κη βαρβαρων το φθεγμα, σοφων δε κη πιστων τον νεν ουλων, κη πηρων κη χηρων τινων τας οφεις* ως συνεινχι, κ σοφια ανθρωπεια ταυτα γεγονοι, αλλα δυναμει θεε λεγεσθαι. Apol. p. 88, the power and wisdom (or the logos) of God; that the serpent in the wilderness represented Christ; and that there was a spirit of God that moved on the face of the waters: in short, that these plain people had been at the source from which Plato had borrowed his philosophy. It is by no means an explicit declaration that these common people thought that the logos and the spirit were persons distinct from God. Justin was not writing with a view to that question, as Tertullian was, but only meant to say how much more knowledge was to be found among the lowest of the christians, than among the wisest of the heathen philosophers.

Besides, Justin is here boasting of the knowledge of these lower people, and it favoured his purpose to make it as considerable as he could; whereas Tertullian is complaining of the circumstance which he mentions; so that nothing but the conviction of a disagreeable truth could have extorted it from him. The same was the case with respect to Athanasius.

That

That the common people in Justin's time should understand his doctrine concerning the personification of the logos, is in itself highly improbable. That this logos, which was originally in God the same thing that reason is in man, should, at the creation of the world, assume a proper personality, and afterwards animate the body of Jesus Christ, either in addition to a human soul, or instead of it, is not only very absurd; but also so very abstruse, that it is in the highest degree improbable, a priori, that the common people should have adopted it. The scriptures, in which they were chiefly conversant, could never teach them any such thing, and they could not have been capable of entering into the philosophical refinements of Justin on the subject. Whereas, that the common people should have believed as Tertullian and Athanasius represent them to have done, viz. that there is but one God, and that Christ was a man, the messenger or prophet of God, and no second God at all (the rival as it were of the first God) is a thing highly credible in itself, and therefore requires less external evidence.

5. Another

5. Another ground of presumption, that the unitarians were not considered as heretics, or indeed in any obnoxious light, and consequently of their being in very great numbers in early times, is, that no treatises were written against them. As soon as ever Gnostics made their appearance, they were censured with the greatest severity, and express treatises were written against them. Whereas the unitarians were first mentioned without any censure at all, afterwards with very little; and no treatise was written expressly against them before Tertullian's against Praxeas, with whom he was, on other accounts, much offended. About the same time, it is supposed, that Caius wrote the treatise called The Little Labyrinth, quoted by Eusebius. Before this time there were some voluminous writers among christians, and several treatises were written expressly against heresy, but all the heresies then noticed were those of the Gnostics. Irenæus's treatise against heresy shews, that the Gnostics only were considered as coming under that description. The Ebionites indeed are censured in it, but no mention is made of the Gentile unitarians, though they were the majority of the common people among christians a long time after this.

His censures of Gentile unitarians is, at least indirect, as they held the same doctrine concerning Christ that the Ebionites did; and it must always be considered, that Irenæus lived in Gaul, where there were no Ebionites, and perhaps not many unitarians, as they abounded most in those countries in which christianity was first planted.

Theophilus of Antioch, about the year 170, wrote against heresies, but only his book against Marcion is mentioned by Eusebius. Hist. lib. 4. cap. 24. p. 187. He also mentions many of the works of Melito, bishop of Sardis, but none of them were against the unitarians. Lib. 4. cap. 26. p. 188. Rhodon, he also says, wrote against the Marcionites. Lib. 5. cap. 13. p. 225. We have also the first book of a large work of Origen's against heresy; and it is very evident, as I have observed, from his introduction, that he had no view to any besides the Gnostics. Can it be doubted then, but that there would have been treatises written expressly against the unitarians long before the time of Tertullian, if they had been considered in any obnoxious light, or had not been a very great majority of the christian world.
that

6. That the unitarian doctrine was very prevalent, even among learned christians, in the age which followed that of the apostles, and was then supposed to be that which was taught by them, may, with considerable probability, be inferred from the Clementine Homilies, and Recognitions, of which some account was given, vol. 1. p. 113. What is particularly remarkable relating to this work (for the two were originally the same) is, that, though it was written by a philosopher, and upon subjects which related to the doctrine concerning the person of Christ, it contains no mention of that doctrine which made so great a figure afterwards, and which in time bore down all before it, viz. that of the personification of the logos. No person, I should think, could peruse that work with care, without concluding, that the orthodoxy of the subsequent period riod had made but little progress then. The same questions are discussed, and the same objections are answered, but on quite different principles, and without taking the least notice of any different principles.

If we cannot infer from this circumstance, that such a system as that of Justin Martyr, or the orthodoxy of the third century, did not exist, or was not much prevalent, so as to have attracted much notice, in the second; it must at least be allowed, as I observed before, that the writer of this work, being indisputably a man of genius and learning, would ascribe to Peter and Clement such opinions, and such a mode of answering the Gnostics, as he thought would pass for theirs. And as the work was probably a very popular one, from the different editions and modifications of it (being published afterwards, with Arian, and again with trinitarian adulterations) and used, as Epiphanius says, by the Ebionites as a sacred book, we may likewise infer, that the theological doctrines of it were generally thought to be those of the apostolic age, though with such additions as the philosophy of the times could supply. A man must have had less knowledge and less judgment than the writer of this work was evidently possessed of, to have put into the mouths of Peter and Clement unitarian doctrines, and unitarian modes of answering the Gnostics, if it had not been supposed that Peter and Clement, though not philosophers, were at least unitarians.

To the passages quoted from this work before, I shall here add another, in which, contrary to the orthodox doctrine of the world not having been made by God himself, but by the logos, and without noticing any such doctrine, he gives a fine enumeration of the attributes of the one true God, and represents him as the demiurgus, the immediate maker of the world, and all the several parts of it, the heavens and the heavenly bodies, the earth and water, mountains and seas, fountains and fruits, &c. &c.*

* Διο, ω τεινον κλημης, επεχε, μη αλλο τι φροντης περι τῶ θεῳ, η ολι αυλος μου εστιν θεος, κ' ηυρι, κ' πατηρ, αγαθος κ' δικαιο, δημιουργος, μακροδυμος, ελεημων, τροφους ευεργετης, φιλανθρωπιαν νομιτευων, αγγελιαν συμβεβλευων, αιωνιο, αιωνιος ποιων, ασυγκριτο, ταις των αγαθων ψυχαις οικιζομενο, αχωρητο κ' χωρημενο, ο εν απειρω

Dr. Lardner observes (Credibility, vol. 2. p. 819.) that the Clementine Homilies and Recognitions deserve a more particular examination than has yet been given to them. And indeed, in the view in which I have mentioned them, and also, in many others, they are justly intitled to it; as they contain a particular account of the opinions of those times, especially of the manner in which christianity was treated and defended by philosophers. More may be learned concerning the theology and philosophy of those times, from this single work, than from many others. It is true that the philosophical doctrines in it are absurd enough; but the age afforded no better, and they are exhibited in a very pleasing dress.

ρω τον μεγαλυ αιωνα ως κεντρον πηξας, ο θρανον εφαπλωσας, κη γην πιλωσας, υδωρ ταμμευσας, αστρα εν θρανω διαδεις, πηγας γη βρυσας, καρπυς εκφυσας, ορη υψωσας, θαλασσαν περιορισας, ανεμυς τε κη πνευμαλια διαλαξας · ο το περιεχον σωμα εν απειρω πελαγει πνευμαλι βελτις ασφαλης ασφαλισαμενος. Hom. 2. sect. 45. p. 63<sup>a</sup>.

SECTION II.

Direct Evidence in Favour of the Gentile Christians having been generally Unitarians.

BUT there is no occasion to argue in this manner from circumstances, and the nature of the thing, since it appears from the evidence of all history, so as never to have been questioned by any writer of reputation, that the unitarians had not any places of worship separate from those of other christians in early times. It was allowed by Mosheim, a zealous trinitarian, who says, (Hist. vol. i. p. 191) "However, ready many " have been to embrace this erroneous doc" trine, it does not appear that this sect
 " formed to themselves a separate place of " worship, or removed themselves from " the ordinary assemblies of christians." But does it not also follow from the same fact, that these unitarians were not expelled from christian societies by others, as they certainly would have been, if they had been considered as heretics ?

" In

“ In former times,” says Nicephorus, “ all who were called christians, though “ they held different opinions, being confi- “ dered in the same light by the Gentiles, “ and suffering from them, made little ac- “ count of their differences, while they were “ exposed to equal hardships, on which ac- “ count they easily joined in the common “ assemblies; and having frequent inter- “ course, while they were few in number, “ did not divide into parties*.” In these circumstances, however, the Gnostics held se- parate assemblies, and as the violence of per- secution did not make the orthodox receive them into their assemblies, so neither would they have admitted the unitarians, if they had been at all obnoxious to them.

That unitarians were included among those who, holding different opinions, were considered by the orthodox as fellow christians, is evident from the following passage of Origen ; but it will be more evident from other passages which I shall have occasion to quote from him hereafter. It is only to be observed, that the unitarians are here described as being patripassians ; but these were only the more philosophical of the unitarians, as I shall show in its proper place. “ It is allowed,” he says, “ that as in the great multitude of believers, “ who admit of difference of opinion, there “ are some who say that the Saviour is God “ over all ; but we do not say so, who be- “ lieve him when he said, My Father is “ greater than I ? *”

* Επι μεν γαρ των αυτων χρονων οσοι κλησει χριστη εσεμνυνοντο ει, η διαφοροι ταις δοξαις ησαν, ισοι παντες προς των τα Ελληνων Σχημαζοντων ενομιζοντο · η κακως εξ εκεινων πασχοιτες, απολυπραγμοτητον το διακρινεσθαι ειχον, κοινας υφισταμενοι συμφορας · δια τι η ρατα και εαυτες συνιοντες, εκκλησιαζον · πικνην τε την ομιλαν εχοντες, ει δε ολιγοι ησαν, ομως εκ εις πολλα διελυθησαν. Hist. lib. 8. cap. 52. vol. 1. p. 661.

Eusebius, describing two sorts of heretics, one of whom denied the humanity of Christ, and the other his pre-existence and divinity, says, that the former were out of the church ; but he is so far from saying the same of the latter, that he particularly com-* Εγω δε, τινας ως εν πληθει πιστευοντων, η δεχομενων διαφωνιαν, δια την απροπειειαν απολιθωσθαι τον σωτηρα εναι τον επι πασι θεον. αλλ' ει γε ημεις τοιςτοις, οι κειδομενοι αυτω λεγοντι, Ο πατηρ, ο υπερτας με, μειζων μου εστι. Ad Celsum, lib. 8. p. 387.

plains

plains that Marcellus, one of them, even presided in it, being then bishop of Ancyra*.

That Chrysofom considered almost all the christians as being unitarians in the age of the apostles has been shewn already; and yet he says, that in their time there was no heresy †." This, however, could not be strictly true, because there were Gnostics in the time of the apostles; but they were few compared with their numbers afterwards. On this account, it is said by several of the ancients, that heresy began in the time of Adrian, when the most distinguished of the Gnostics made their appearance. Cyprian says, that "the worst of the

* Των γὰρ ἑτεροδοξῶν, οἱ μὲν, μὴ προεῖναι μὴδὲ παρεπαρχειν τὸν υἱὸν τῆς θεῆς φανίτες, ἀνθρώπων ἐνὰ αὐτὸν τοῖς λοιποῖς ὁμοῖον, ὑποδεμένοι ἐξ ἀνθρώπου, υἰοθεσία τέλει μῆσθαι αὐτὸν εἶπασαν, καὶ τὰς δούλες, ἀθανάτου καὶ ἀλλοεὐί η αὐτοῦ τιμὴν καὶ δόξαν καὶ βασιλείου αἰώνιον ὠμολογήσαν. οἱ δὲ τὸν ἀνθρώπον ἀρνήσαντες, υἱὸν εἶναι θεοῦ. θεοῦ προούλα ὑφἑστησαν. ἀλλ' οἱ μὲν τῆς ἐκκλησίας ἀλλότριοι, μέχρι τούτων πλανῆς ἐλάσαν. οὗ δὲ τῆς ἐκκλησίας τῆς θεῆς τοσούτοις κληθησάμενος χρόνοις, τὴν ὑπαρξίν ἀναιρεῖ τῆς υἱὲ τῆς θεῆς, τῷ αὐτῆς λείψανος δυσίαστηρα. Contra Marcellum, vol. i. p. 33.

† Τὰς τοιούτων, ἠνικα ἐκρηγυτῶν αὐτοὶ κατὰ τὴν οἰκουμενὴν ἀπάσαν, αἰρέσεις ὑδὲμια ἦν. Ser. 61. Opera, vol. 5. p. 809.

“ heresies did not rise till after the time of “ the apostles *.”

That the common people among christians were actually unitarians in the early ages, and believed nothing of the pre-existence or divinity of Christ before the council of Nice, we have as express a testimony as can be desired in the case. These sublime doctrines were thought to be above their comprehension, and to be capable of being understood and received by the learned only. This we see most clearly in the general strain of Origen’s writings, who was himself a firm believer, and a zealous defender, of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ.

“ This,” says he, “ we ought to understand, that, as the law was a shadow of “ good things to come, so is the gospel “ as it is understood by the generality.
“ But that which John calls the everlasting gospel, and which may be more “ properly called the spiritual, instructs the * Et hoc, cum nondum hæreticæ pestes acriores prorupissent. Epist. I. Opera, p. 211, 219.

“ intelligent “ intelligent very clearly concerning the “ Son of God. Wherefore the gospel must “ be taught both corporeally and spiritually,

 “ and when it is necessary we must preach
 “ the corporeal gospel, saying to the carnal, “ that we know nothing but Jesus Christ
 “ and him crucified. But when persons “ are found confirmed in the spirit, bring“ ing forth fruit in it, and in love with “ heavenly wisdom, we must impart to “ them the logos returning from his bo“ dily state, in that he was in the begin“ ning with God *.”

“ Some are adorned with the logos itself, “ but others with a logos which is a-kin to “ it, and seeming to them to be the true

* Και τὸ δὲ εἶδέναι ἐχρην, οἱ ὡς περ ἐστὶ νομοθῆσιν παρέχων τῶν μελλόντων ἀγαθῶν, ὑπο τῆ καὶ ἀληθείαν καὶ ἀγγελλομένῃ νόμῳ δηλωμένων; εἶω καὶ εὐαγγελίῳ σκίαν μυστηρίων χριστοῦ διδάσκει, τὸ νομιζόμενον ὑπο πάντων τῶν ἐπιλογησανόντων νοεῖσθαι. Ὡς φησὶν Ἰωάννης εὐαγελίου αἰωνίου, οἰκειῶς ἀν λεχθησομένου πνευματικόν, σαφῶς παρίησι τοῖς νοῦσι τὰ πάντα ἐνωπίῳ περὶ υἱοῦ τῆ θεοῦ.— Διόπερ ἀναγκαῖον πνευματικῶς καὶ σωματικῶς χριστιανίζειν· καὶ οὗτος μὲν χρῆ το σωματικόν κηρυσσεῖν εὐαγγέλιον, φασκόντα μηδὲν εἶδέναι τοῖς σαρκίκοις ἢ Ἰησοῦν χριστὸν καὶ τὸν ἐσαυρωμένον, τὸν ποιήσαν. ἔπειτα δὲ εὐρεθῶσι κατήρησι-μένοι τῷ πνευματικῷ, καὶ καρποφορήσιν ἐν αἰῶνι, ἐρωήσιν τὰ βραβεία σοφίας, μέγα δόξαν αἰοῖς τῆ λογῆς, ἐπανελεύσονται ἀπὸ τῆ σαρκοῦσθαι, ἐφ' ὃ νῦν ἐν ἀρχῇ πρὸς τὸν θεόν. Comment. in Johan. vol. 2. p. 9.

“logos; who know nothing but Jesus Christ,
“and him crucified, who look at the word “made flesh*.”

“There are,” says he, “who partake of “logos which was from the beginning, the “logos that was with God, and the logos
“that was God, as Hosea; Isaiah, and Jere“miah, and any others that speak of him “as the logos of God, and the logos that “was with him; but there are others who “know nothing but Jesus Christ and him “crucified, the logos that was made flesh, “thinking they have every thing of the “logos when they acknowledge Christ ac“cording to the flesh. Such is the multi“tude of those who are called christians †.”

* Οι μὲν γὰρ αὐτῷ τῷ λόγῳ κηκοσμηναί. Οἱ δὲ παρακειμενῷ τινὶ αὐτῷ, καὶ δοκῶντι εἶναι αὐτῷ τῷ πρώτῳ λόγῳ, οἱ μὴδὲν εἰδότες, εἰ μὴ Ἰησοῦν χριστὸν, καὶ τῆτον ἐσαυρωμένον, οἱ τὸν λόγον νσάρκα ὀρανοῦτες. Comment. vol. 2. p. 49.

† Οὕτω τοίνυν οἱ μὲν τινες μέλεχθαι αὐτῷ τῷ ἐν ἀρχῇ λόγῳ, καὶ πρὸς τὸν θεὸν λόγῳ, καὶ θεὸν λόγῳ, ὡς πρὸς ὡσπερ καὶ ἠσαιας καὶ ἱερεμίας, καὶ εἰ τις ἕτερος τοῖσιν αὐτῶν παρῆρθεσεν ὡς τὸν λόγον κυρίου, ἢ τὸν λόγον γενεσθῆαι πρὸς αὐτὸν: ἕτεροι δὲ οἱ μὴδὲν εἰδότες εἰμὴ Ἰησοῦν χριστὸν καὶ τῆτον ἐσαυρωμένον, τὸν γενομένον σάρκα λόγον, τὸ πᾶν νομιζοῦτες εἶναι τῷ λόγῳ χριστῷ κατὰ σάρκα μόνον γινώσκουσι. τῆτον δὲ ἐστὶ τὸ πᾶν τῶν πᾶσι εὐκέναι νομιζομένων. Comment. in Johan. vol. 2. p. 49.

“ this number and disposition of a trinity is “ a division of the unity. They, there“ fore, will have it that we are worshippers “ of two, and even of three Gods, but that “ they are the worshippers of one God “ only. We, they say, hold the monarchy.
 “ Even the Latins have learned to bawl
 “ out for the monarchy, and the Greeks “ themselves will not understand the œco“ nomy *.”

It is hardly possible in any words to describe the state of things more clearly than * Simplices enim quippe, ne dixerim imprudentes et idiotæ, quæ major semper credentium pars est, quoniam et ipsa regula fidei a pluribus diis seculi, ad unicum et deum verum transfert; non intelligentes unicum quidem, sed cum sua œconomia esse credendum expavescunt ad œconomiam: Numerum et dispositionem trinitatis, divisionem præsumunt unitatis; quando unitas ex semetipsa derivans trinitatem, non destruat ab illa, sed administratur. Itaque duos et tres jam jactitant a nobis prædicari, se vero unius dei cultores præsumunt. — Quasi non et unitas inrationaliter collecta, hæresim faciat, trinitas rationaliter expensa, veritatem constituat. Monarchiam, inquirunt, tenemus. Et ita sonum vocaliter exprimunt etiam Latini, etiam opici, ut putes illos tam bene intelligere monarchiam, quam enunciant. Sed monarchiam sonare fludent Latini, œconomiam intelligere nolunt etiam Græci. Ad Praxeam, sect. 3. p. 502.

Tertullian

Tertullian here does. It is the language of strong feeling and complaint, the clearest of all proofs that he did not mis-state things on that side, as it would have been for the purpose of his argument to have represented the unitarians as being inconsiderable on account of their numbers, as well as despicable on account of their want of learning.

Whoever Tertullian meant by the simplices and idiotæ, for any thing that appears, he meant the whole body of them. His language is general and unlimited. However, I am far from being willing to construe him rigorously, and am ready to allow that some of the simple and unlearned persons he describes might profess to believe the doctrine of the trinity, though he says nothing of it. But, making all reasonable deductions on this account, he asserts a palpable falsehood, and against himself, if a very great majority of them were not unitarians.

On the whole, it is impossible not to infer from this passage, that, in the time of Tertullian, the great body of unlearned christians were unitarians. Common sense cannot

cannot put any other construction on this passage, and Tertullian is far from being singular in this acknowledgment. It is made, in different modes, by several of the Fathers, even later than the age of Tertullian.

That Tertullian considered the more simple and unlearned people as those among whom the unitarian doctrine was the most popular, is evident from his saying, that “the tares of Praxeas grew up, while many “slept in the simplicity of doctrine*.”

That the word idiota in Latin, or ιδιωτης in Greek, signifies a man simply unlearned, and not a fool, would be an affront to the literature of my readers to attempt to prove.

Athanasius also, like Tertullian, acknowledged that the unitarian doctrine was very prevalent among the lower class of people in his time. He calls them the οι πολλοι, the many, and describes them as persons of low understanding. “It grieves,” he says, “those who stand up for the holy faith, * Fruticaverant avenæ Praxeanæ hic quoque superfeminatæ, dormientibus multis in simplicitate doctrinæ. Ad Praxeam, lib. 1. p. 511.

“that

“ that the multitude, and especially persons “ of low understanding, should be infected “ with those blasphemies. Things that “ are sublime and difficult are not to be ap“ prehended, except by faith; and ignorant “ people must fall, if they cannot be per“ suaded to rest in faith, and avoid curious “ questions*.”

This being the language of complaint, as well as that of Tertullian, it may be the more depended on for exhibiting a state of things very unfavourable to what was called the orthodoxy of that age. And it was not the doctrine of Arius, but that of Paulus Samosatensis, that Athanasius is here complaining of.

These bumble christians of Origen, who got no farther than the shadow of the logos, the simplices, and idiotæ of Tertullian, and the persons of low understanding of Athanasius, were * Ἀυτεῖ δε κ' νυν τες ἀνέχομενος της αγιας τωσέως, ηπερι των αυτων βλασφημιων βλαπτισσα τες πολλας μαλιστα τες ηλαττωμενος περι την συνεσιν. Τα γαρ μεγαλα κ' δυσκαλαηπτα των πραγμων τωσει τη προς τον θεον λαμβανειαι. Οθεν οι περι την γνωσιν αδυνακεις αποπιπτεσιν, ει μη τωσειθειεν εμμενειν τη τωσει, κ' τας περιεργως ζήησεις εκήρεπεσθαι. De Incarnatione verbi contra Paulum Samosatensem, Opera, vol. 1. p. 591.

probably

probably the simplices credentium of Jerom, who, he says, “did not understand the scriptures as became their majesty.” For had these simple christians (within the pale of the church) inferred from what John says of the logos, and from what Christ says of himself, that he was, personally considered, equal to the Father, Jerom would hardly have said, that “they did not understand the scriptures according to their majesty,” for he himself would not pretend to a perfect knowledge of the mystery of the trinity. “For these simple christians,” he says, “the earth of the people of God brought forth hay, as for the heretics it brought forth thorns*.” For the intelligent, no doubt, it yielded richer fruits.

From all these passages, and others quoted before, I cannot help inferring, that the doctrine of Christ being any thing more than a man, the whole doctrine of the eternal logos, who was in God, and who was God, was long considered as a more abstruse and refined principle, with which there was no occasion to trouble the common people; and that the doctrine of the simple humanity of Christ continued to be held by the common people till after the time of Athanasius, or after the council of Nice. And if this was the case then, we may safely conclude, that the unitarians were much more numerous in a more early period, as it is well known that they kept losing, and not gaining ground, for several centuries.

* Quod dicitur super terram populi mei, spinæ et fœnum ascendent, referre potest et ad hæreticos, et ad simplices quosque credentium, qui non ita scripturam intelligunt ut illius convenit majestati. Unde singula singulis coaptavimus, ut terra populi dei hæreticis spinas, imperiis quibusque ecclesiæ fœnum afferat. Jerom in Isai. xxxii. 20. Opera, vol. 4. p. 118.

CHAPTER XIV.

An Argument for the Novelty of the Doctrine of the Trinity, from the Manner in which it was taught and received in early Times.

THE subject of this chapter properly belongs to the Twelfth, as it relates to a circumstance from which it may be inferred, that the unitarian doctrine was held by the the majority of christians in the early ages ; but I reserve it for a distinct consideration in this place, because it requires a more particular discussion, and will receive much light from what was advanced both in the Twelfth and Thirteenth chapters.

One proof of the antiquity of a doctrine is its being found among the common people, in preference to the learned ; the former being the least, and the latter the most apt to innovate ; so that from the doctrine of the simple humanity of Christ being held by the common people in the time of Tertulian, lian, Origen, and Athanasius, it may be concluded with certainty, that it was the doctrine which they had received from their ancestors, and that it originated with the apostles themselves.

There is also another mark by which we may distinguish what opinions are new, and what are old, whenever they are apprehended to be of much consequence; and that is by the manner in which they are advanced by the patrons of them, and that in which they are received by those who disapprove of them. The innovator will be timid and modest, and the asserter of an old opinion will be bold and confident. A new opinion will alarm and terrify; but an old one will be treated with respect. This maxim we see exemplified every day, and in no case more remarkably than with respect to these very doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ.

If we look back into the state of things in this country about a century, or half a century ago, we shall find the trinitarians shocked at the doctrine of the humanity of Christ, and endeavouring to bear it down with the greatest confidence and violence. On the other hand, all the defences of what is called the Socinian doctrine, were written with the greatest modesty, and with the air and manner of an apology. Let us now, by this maxim, judge how things stood with respect to this very doctrine in the time of Justin Martyr, Origen, and Tertullian.

As the doctrine of the humanity of Christ was then chiefly held by the common people, who were not writers, and as no work of any unitarian, written after the controversy was started, has been preserved to us, we labour under great disadvantages in this respect. But notwithstanding this, circumstances now may be collected from the writings of the trinitarians, to enable us to judge how both themselves, and the unitarians, thought and felt with respect to it; and circumstances furnished in this indirect manner by adversaries, are often the least suspicious intimations of the real state of things.

On this principle, it will, I think, sufficiently appear, that it was with great difficulty that the generality of christians were recon-

reconciled to the doctrine of the deity of Christ, and that of the trinity in any form. It is evident, that the lower class of christians was much staggered by it, and exceedingly offended when they did hear of it; which could never have been the case if it had then been supposed to have been the doctrine of the apostles, and to have been delivered by them as the most essential article of christian faith, in which light it is now represented. Such terms as scandalizare, expavescere, &c. used by Tertullian, Novatian, &c. and ταρασσειν, &c. by Origen, can only apply to the case of some novel and alarming doctrine, something that men had not been accustomed to. We may, therefore, take it for granted, that it had not been much heard of among the common people at least; and if so, that it had never been taught by the apostles.

Admitting that the apostles had taught any doctrines of a peculiarly sublime nature (which the Fathers pretend to have been the case with respect to the pre-existence and divinity of Christ) yet, as all their teaching was in public, and there were no secrets among them (Paul, for instance, having solemnly assured the elders at Ephesus, that he had not shunned to declare unto them the whole council of God) the common people must at least have heard of these sublime doctrines, and have been accustomed to the sound of the language in which they were expressed. And had they known that those doctrines had been taught by the apostles to any of their body, though not to themselves, they would have learned to respect what they did not understand, and was not meant for their use. They could never have been offended and staggered at things which they and their fathers before them had always been in the hearing of.

I shall not recite in this place all the passages which show how much the common people were offended at the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ. Many of them have already passed before the eye of the reader, and many others will be produced in different connexions. It will be found, that even at and after the council of Nice, the unitarians continued to speak their sentiments with the greatest freedom, and always exclaimed against the prevailing doctrines, as no less new than absurd. Little were those writers who have inadvertently recorded these circumstances aware of the value of the information which they were hereby giving to posterity. Had Tertullian, Origen, and others, thought more highly than they did of the common people, we should probably never have known from them what their opinions and feelings were. But, happily for us, these writers thought meanly of the common people, and speaking of them with contempt, or pity, have, without design, given us very useful and valuable lights into this very important circumstance in the history of their times.
and

I shall now give an account of the manner which the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ were first proposed by the most learned and distinguished persons of their age; and we shall find that it was with much diffidence, and the air of an apology, as if they were sensible that the doctrines were new, and might not easily recommend themselves. For this purpose I shall, in the first place, produce an extract from the writings of Justin Martyr, who was probably the first who publicly maintained these doctrines.

He represents Trypho as saying, concerning the doctrine of the incarnation, “it is so extraordinary, that it can never be proved. That this Christ was a God, existing before the ages, and then born a man, is not only extraordinary, but ridiculous. To this I answered, I know that this doctrine appears strange, and especially to those of your race,” that is, to the Jews*. It is evident from this passage, that Justin thought that this doctrine would appear strange to others, besides the Jews; and as he proceeds, it will appear that he took care not to lay too much stress on this new doctrine, lest he should not be able to prove it satisfactorily.

“It will not follow that he is not the Christ, though I should not be able to prove * Παραδοξος τις γαρ ποτε και μη δυναμει θεως αποδειχθηναι δοκει μοι ειναι . το γαρ λεγειν σε, τρηπαρχειν θεον οντα προ αιωνων τελον του χριστον, ειλα και γεννηθηναι ανθρωπον γενομενον υπομειναι, και δι εκ ανθρωπος εξ ανθρωπου, ε μονον παραδοξον δοκει μοι ειναι, αλλα και μωρον . Καγω προς ταυτα εφην, οιδ δι παραδοξο ο λογο δοκει ειναι, και μαλιστα τοις απο τα γενεα μμων . Dial. p. 232, 233.

“that

“ that he pre-existed, as God, the son of “ him that made all things, and that he “ became a man by the virgin; it being “ proved that he is the Christ, the Son of “ God, whoever he was; though I should “ not prove that he pre-existed, but was a “ man of the same passions with ourselves, “ having flesh, and being subject to his “ Father’s will. It will be right to say,
 “ that in this only I have been mistaken,
 “ and not that he is not the Christ, though “ he should appear to be a man born as other “ men are, and to be made Christ by elec“ tion. For there are some of our race, “ who acknowledge him to be Christ, but “ hold that he was a man born like other “ men. With them I do not agree, nor “ should I do so, though ever so many,
 “ being of the same opinion, should urge “ it upon me; because we are commanded “ by Christ himself, not to obey the teach“ ings of men, but what was taught by the “ holy prophets and himself.” Trypho says, “ They who say that he was a man, “ born like other men, and that he became “ Christ by election,” i. e. the appointment of God, " seem to hold a doctrine more " credible than yours. For all of us ex" pect that Christ will be a man, born like " other men, and that Elias will come to " anoint him. If, therefore, this person

 " be the Christ, he must by all means be " a man born like other men*."

This diffidence of Justin agrees remarkably well with the supposition, that the * Ουκ απολλύται το τοίσιον είναι χριστόν τῆ θεῶ εἰν αποδείξει μὴ δύναμαι δι καὶ παρεπηρεχεν, υἱὸς τῆ ποιητῆ των ὁλων θεοῶν, καὶ γεγενῆσαι ἀνθρώπος διὰ τῆς παρθενῆς. Ἀλλὰ ἐκ πάντος ἀποδεικνύμενε δι εἶδος ἐστὶν ὁ χριστὸς ὁ τῆ θεῶ, οἷς εἶδος ἐσται, εἰν δὲ μὴ ἀποδεικνύω δι παρεπηρεχε καὶ γέννηθῆναι ἀνθρώπῳ ὁμοιοπαθῆς ἡμῶν, σὰρκα ἐχῶν, καὶ αἰ τῆν τῆ πατρὸς βῆλῆν, ὑπεμεινεν, ἐν τῷ πεπλανησθαι με μόνου λεγείν δικαίον, ἀλλὰ μὴ ἀρνεῖσθαι δι εἶδος ἐστὶν ὁ χριστὸς, εἰν φαίνῃαι ὡς ἀνθρώπῳ ἔξ ἀνθρώπων γεννηθεῖς, καὶ ἐκλογῆ γενομένῳ εἰς τὸν χριστόν εἶναι ἀποδεικνύῃται. Καὶ γὰρ εἰσι τινες, ὡ φίλοι, εἰεγον, ἀπο τῆ ἡμέτερε γενεῆς ὁμολογητῆς αὐτόν χριστόν εἶναι, ἀνθρώπον δὲ ἔξ ἀνθρώπων γενημένον ἀποφαινόμενοι. Οἷς, ἔ συνιθεμαι, εἰδ ἂν πλείτοι ταῦτα μοι δοξα-σάιτες εἰποῖεν, ἐπειδὴ ἡμ ἀνθρώποις διδάγμασι κεκελευσμεθα ὑπ' αὐτῆ τῆ χριστῆ πειθεσθαι, ἀλλὰ τοῖς διὰ των μακαρίων προφητῶν κηρυχθεῖσι καὶ δι αὐτῆ διδάχθεῖσι. Καὶ ὁ Τρυφῶν, ἐμοὶ μὲν δοκῆσιν, εἰπεν, εἰ λεγόντες ἀνθρώπον γεγενῆσθαι αὐτόν καὶ καὶ ἐκλογῆν κερῖσθαι, καὶ χριστόν γεγενῆσθαι, πιθανώτερον ἡμῶν λεγείν, των ταῦτα ἀπερ-φῆς λεγόντῶν. καὶ γὰρ πάντες ἡμεῖς τὸν χριστόν ἀνθρώπον ἔξ ἀνθρώπων προσδοκῆμεν γενῆσθαι, καὶ τὸν Εἰλιαν χριστῆ αὐτόν εἰθούα. εἰν δὲ εἶδος φαίνῃαι ὡν ὁ χριστὸς, ἀνθρώπον μὲν ἔξ ἀνθρώπων γενομένον ἐκ πάντος ἐπιστάσθαι δεῖ. Dial. p. 233.

unitarians were originally no less than the whole body of christians, and that the trinitarians were the innovators, appearing at first modest and candid, as was natural while they were a small minority, though they grew bold and imperious when they became the majority.

Independently of any nice construction of this passage, we may safely say, that if the doctrine of the simple humanity of Christ had not been at least a very general opinion in the time of Justin, he would never have spoken of it with so much tenderness and respect as he has done, considering how very different it was from his own opinion, his defence of which has sufficiently the appearance of an apology. He even intimates some degree of doubt with respect to his opinion, when he says that, if he should not be able to prove it, the fundamental doctrine of christianity, viz. that of the messiahship of Jesus, would not be affected by it. Why should he provide this retreat, if he had not had some secret suspicion of the ground on which he stood. He calls the unitarians some, as if they were the minority ; but the term is indefinite, and may apply to the majority ; and from the complexion of the whole passage, I have no doubt but that Justin was aware that it was so, and that, with a view to this, he added, that he should not be influenced by that consideration.
2 they

That Justin's language is that of a man who knew that he was advancing a new opinion, is evident, as I said, from the general air and complexion of it ; and the more we attend to it, the more sensible we shall be of the justness of this construction.

1. Let it be considered, that in this place, as well as in his writings in general, he labours the proof of the pre-existence of Christ, shewing that it is consonant to the principles of Platonism, and also deducible from the writings of Moses, and other parts of the Jewish scriptures, without referring to any other writer in support of what he advances.

2. He does not use a single acrimonious expression against those who differed from him with respect to it, which is just as any man would do who should write in defence of a novel, or not very prevalent opinion, and one, of which himself was the principal abettor.
of

3. He talks of not being overborne by the authority of any number of men, even his fellow christians, but would adhere to the words of Christ, and the sense of scripture; which is a stile almost peculiar to those whose opinions are either quite novel, or at least not very prevalent.

4. The phrase, "neither do I agree with the majority of christians, who may have objected to my opinion," which is nearly the most literal rendering of the passage (though I would not be understood to lay much stress on that circumstance) will naturally be construed to mean that the majority actually did make the objection, or that Justin suspected they might make it.

When I consider these circumstances, and also how apt all persons are to make their own party more numerous than it really is, I am inclined to think that even, if the passage might bear such a construction as that Justin meant to insinuate that the majority were with him, yet that it would not be the most natural construction, or a sufficient authority to conclude that such was the fact. I therefore think that, upon the whole, the passage has all the appearance of an apology for an opinion different from that which in his time was commonly received on the subject.

I am no doubt, influenced in my construction of this particular passage by the persuasion that I have, from other independent evidence, that the unitarians were in fact, the majority of christians in the time of Justin; that he therefore knew this to be the case, and could not mean to insinuate the contrary. Another person having a different persuasion concerning the state of opinions in that age, will naturally be inclined to put a different construction upon this passage. In this case I only wish that he would suspend his judgment till he has attended to my other arguments; and afterwards he may perhaps see this passage in the same light in which I do.

The word γενε I think, refers to natural descent; and I therefore conclude that Justin here meant not christians in general, but but Gentile christians in particular; because, as he is opposing the opinion concerning Christ, which made him to be a man born of men, not to the doctrine of the miraculous conception, but only to his pre-existence (though I think it probable, that most, if not all, who believed in the simple humanity, were also in that age believers in the natural birth of Christ) the only idea that he had in his mind, and to which he attended, was that of his simple humanity, and we have positive evidence that this was the doctrine of all the Jewish christians, so that he could not speak of some of them holding it and others not. Whereas the Gentile christians were divided on that subject; and some of them, even later than this, viz. in the time of Origen, held that in the strictest sense of the expression, Jesus was a man born of man, being the son of Joseph as well as of Mary. I therefore think that Justin meant the Gentile christians, omitting the Jewish christians, whose sentiments he might suppose to have been well known to the learned Jew, with whom he was con-

converſing. It was as if he had ſaid, Not only do thoſe chriſtians who are of your race, viz. Jews, believe Chriſt to be a mere man, born as other men are, but there are alſo ſome of our race, viz. Gentile chriſtians, who hold the ſame opinion.

I ſhall conclude this article with obſerving, that, without attending to minute criticifms, it is quite ſufficient for my purpoſe, that theſe ancient unitarian chriſtians, whether they held the miraculous conception or not, whether they were Jews or Gentiles, or whether Juſtin meant to repreſent them as ſtrictly ſpeaking the majority of chriſtians, or otherwiſe, were not treated by him as heretics. From this circumſtance alone, it may be concluded, that they were very numerous, becauſe, whenever unitarians have not been very numerous, and have not made a reſpectable figure among chriſtians, they have always been conſidered with great abhorrence, and have been cut off from communion with thoſe of the orthodox perſuaſion.

With

With what rancour does Eusebius treat this class of christians, both in his History, and in his Treatise against Marcellus of Ancyra, when we know from Athanasius, and other authorities, that they were at that time very numerous (though among the lower classes of people) and probably in all parts of the christian world.

When these things are duly considered, it can hardly be imagined but that, let this passage in Justin be construed in any manner that the words can possibly bear, it will be sufficiently to my purpose, and authorize all the use that I have ever made of it. But I can very well spare the passage altogether, thinking that I have evidence enough of my general position without it.

If we consider the time in which Justin wrote, viz. about A. D. 140, that is, about eighty years after the time of the apostles, and compare it with the account that Tertullian and others give of the state of opinions among the Jews and Gentiles in their time, we can hardly doubt (whether Justin confesses it or not) that the doctrine of the simple humanity of Christ must

mult have been the prevailing one in his time. According to the ancient Fathers, the Jews, meaning the Jewish christians, were so fully persuaded concerning the simple humanity of their Messiah, that the apostles did not chuse to inform them, except in an indirect manner, that Christ was any thing more than a man, and the Gentiles were drawn by the Jews into the same opinion; and though John was supposed to speak more plainly, we find no effect from it.

Since, therefore, it was only an indirect evidence of the divine or super-angelic nature of Christ, that the Jewish christians (by whom the gospel was communicated to the Gentiles) were ever favoured with; can it be thought probable, so highly averse as the account itself states the Jews to have been to the idea of any super-human nature in Christ, that they should, by their own reasoning alone on the subject, have generally abandoned their favourite doctrine in so short a time as fourscore years? Or, if from some most unaccountable cause, and without any person of great authority to lead them, them to it (for no such authority can we trace) they should have abandoned their original and favourite doctrine, is it probable that they would have been so extremely active and successful in the propagation of their new opinion, and withal have found the Gentiles so very pliant as to have been able to induce the generality of them to make the same change, when at the same time they are known to have had but little connexion, and indeed but little respect for each other? Is a period of eighty years naturally sufficient for these two successive changes?

But if we take another well authenticated circumstance, we shall be obliged to reduce this short space (too short as it already is for the purpose) to one still shorter. Hegefippus, as explained by Valefius, in his notes on Eusebius's ecclesiastical history, says, that the church of Jerusalem continued a virgin, or free from heresy, till the death of Simeon, who succeeded James the Just, that is, till the time of Trajan, or about the year 100, or perhaps 110, for his reign began A. D. 98, and ended A. D.

117. Knowing, therefore, from other circumstances, what this purity of christian faith was, and what Hegesippus must have known it to be, we have only the space of forty, or perhaps, thirty years for so great a change. So rapid at that particular period must have been that movement, which we find by experience to be naturally one of the very slowest in the whole system of nature, viz. the revolution of opinions in great bodies of men. Can it then be thought probable that, considering the Jewish and Gentile christians as one body, the generality of them should have abandoned the doctrine of the simple humanity of Christ, in the time of Justin Martyr.

On the contrary, it is certainly not at all improbable, that the more learned and philosophical of the christians, beginning to be ashamed of a crucified man for their saviour, and firmly believing the doctrine of the pre-existence of all souls, and of their descent into human bodies, should have begun to fancy that Christ must have had some origin superior to that of other men, that this should first of all produce the opinions of the Gnostics, who thought that the Christ, who came down from heaven, was quite distinct from the man Jesus, and felt nothing of his pains or sorrows; or that these opinions being rejected through the authority of the apostles, the generality of christian teachers or bishops (many of whom were educated in the Platonic school at Alexandria) should afterwards apply the Platonic doctrine of the logos to the same subject, and that by their influence, opinions leading to the deification of Christ should gradually gain ground among the common people. But this must have been a work of time, so that the majority of christians could hardly have been infected with these principles so early as the time of Justin Martyr.
the

Irenæus, who wrote forty years after Justin, makes no mention of any Gentile unitarians, in his works against heresy, but only of the Ebionites; and what he says of them is a very small proportion of the whole of his work. And almost all the orthodox Fathers, both before and after the council of Nice, make laboured apologies for their seeming to teach the doctrine of more Gods than one. This circumstance is a sufficient indication that the trinitarians were then the minority, as their violence and insolence afterwards shows, that if they were not the majority, at least they had the advantage of power in their favour.

As the advocates for the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, advanced it with caution and with apology, as being sensible that they were not likely to be well received; so, on the other hand, it appears that the unitarians did express the greatest dread of them, as the introduction of polytheism. Several instances of this have been produced already, and others will appear in different connexions, especially when I shall show the zeal with which the ancient unitarians defended their tenets. But I shall in this place introduce a few others.

Origen says, “ Because it is probable that “ some will be offended with our saying, that “ the Father being called the only true God, “ there are other gods besides him partaking
 “ of

“ of his divinity*.” Novatian speaks of the unitarians as scandalized at the doctrine of the divinity of Christ †.” And the state of things was not different about the time of the council of Nice. Eusebius, in his controversy with Marcellus, says, “ If they are afraid of making two Gods ‡.” “ Some for fear of introducing a second God, make the Father and the Son the same ||.” “ Marcellus, for fear of saying there are two Gods, denies the Son to be a separate person §.” And again, “ But you

* Αλλ' επει ειμος προσκοψειν τινας τοις ειρημενοις, ενος μιν αληθινου θεου τε πατρως απεγγελλομενου, παρα δε τον αληθινον θεου θεων πλειωνων τη μελοχη τε θεα γνωμενων. Comment, vol. 2. p. 47.

† Sed quia oblectantes adversus veritatem semper hæretici sinceræ traditionis, et catholicæ fidei controversiam solent trahere, scandalizati in christum quod etiam deus et per scripturas adferatur, et a nobis hoc esse credatur, merito a nobis, ut omnis a fide nostra auferri possit hæretica calumnia, de eo quod et deus sit Christus, sic est disputandum, ut non impediat scriptura veritatem Cap. 30. p. 115.

‡ Ει δε φοβον αυτους εμποιοι, μη πη αρα δυο θεου αναγορευειν δεξι. Ec. Theol. lib. 1. cap. 11. p. 69.

|| Οι δε, φοβω τε δοκειν δευτερον εισηγεισθαι θεου, τον αυτον εινα πατερα η υιον ορισαμενοι. Ibid. cap 3. p. 62.

§ Ο μιν γαρ, δεει τε μη δυο θεου ειπειν, την αριστην τε υιου πατριβαλλειο, την υποστασιν αδελων αυτου. Ibid. cap. 10. p. 69.

“ are dreadfully afraid lest you should be “ obliged to acknowledge two hypostases
 “ of the Father and Son *.”

In short, it appears that the ancient unitarians entertained the same dread of the doctrine of the divinity of Christ, that the trinitarians of this day do of that of his simple humanity; a proof that each of them had been brought up in the persuasion of the opinions they held, being the doctrine of their ancestors, and of the apostles. In this the ancient unitarians could not be mistaken, but the trinitarians of the present age may very well be so. Whether, therefore, we consider the feelings of the unitarians, or those of the trinitarians of the early ages, we perceive evident traces of the former maintaining an old opinion, and the latter a new one.

* Αλλα αγωνιας μη δυο θεες αναγκη παραδεξασθαι τον δυο υποστασεις πατρος κ' υιου ειναι ομολογηνα. Ec. Theol. lib. 2. cap. 7. p. 109.

C H A P T E R XV.

Objections to the preceding State of Things considered.

THAT I may conceal nothing from my readers that can tend to throw any light on this subject, I shall fairly state every objection that I have yet met with, to any part of the evidence that I have produced.

---

S E C T I O N I.

Of the Testimony of Eusebius to the Novelty of the Unitarian Doctrine.

IT is alledged by Eusebius, the historian, or rather Caius (who is supposed to be the author that he quotes, and who, Photius says *, wrote The Little Labyrinth, * Γαις τινος πρεσβυτερος εν Ρωμη διακριθών ου φασι συνλαξαι η τον λαβυρινθον.—Τον λαβυρινθον τινες επιγραψαν Οριγενες, επει Γαις ησι ποιημα. Bib. sect. 48. p. 35.

which is thought to be the work that Eusebius copied from) is so far from confirming this account of the great antiquity of the unitarians, that he expressly asserts that they were a modern sect. That this charge, with the evidence, may be fairly before the reader, I shall quote the passage in which it is contained at full length.

“ Artemon made Christ a mere man.
 “ They who hold this doctrine pretend that “ it is very ancient; for they say that all “ the primitive christians, and the apostles “ themselves, received and taught it, and “ that the truth was preserved till the time “ of Victor, the thirteenth bishop of Rome “ from Peter, but that it was corrupted in “ the time of his successor Victorinus.
 “ This might appear probable, if, in the “ first place, the sacred scriptures were not “ against it; and if there were not writings “ of christians now extant, older than the “ time of Victor, which they wrote against “ the heathens and against heresies. I mean “ those of Justin, Miltiades, Tatian, Clemens, “ and many others, in all of which Christ is “ spoken of as a God. Who is unacquainted “ with

“ with the writings of Irenæus, Melito, and “ others, speaking of Christ as God and “ man? How many psalms and hymns also “ are there, written by christians from the “ beginning, in which Christ is celebrated “ as a God—How were they not ashamed
 “ to speak thus falsely of Victor, knowing “ very well that Victor excommunicated “ Theodotus, the leader and father of that “ God-denying heresy, who first said, that “ Christ was a mere man *.”

* Την γὰρ τοι δεδιλωμενην αιρεσιν φιλον ανθρωπον γινεσθαι του σωτηρα φασκεσαν κ̄ προ πολλων νεωτερισθεισαν διευθυνων. Επειδη σεμνυνει αυτην ως αν αρχαιαν οι ταυτης ηθελον εισηγηται. Φασι γαρ τες μεν προτερες απαιιας κ̄ αυτες τες αποστολες παρειληφεναι τε κ̄ δεδιδαχεναι ταυτα, α νυν εῑοι λεγνσι κ̄ τεληρησθαι την αληθειαν τε κρηρυμαλος μεχρι των βικτορος χρονων, ως ην τρισκαιδεκατος απο Πειρι εν Ρωμη επισκοπος. απο δε τς διαδοχς αυς Ζεφυρινης, παρακεχα-ραχθαι την αληθειαν. ην δ̄ αν τυχον π̄θανον το λεγομενον, ει μη π̄ωλον μεν αντεπιπλον αυλοισ αι θειαι γραφαι κ̄ αδελφων δε τινων εσι γραμματια πρεσβυτερα των Βικτορος χρονων, α εκεινοι προς τα εθνη υπερ της αληθειας, κ̄ προς τας τοτε αιρεσεις εγραψαν. λεγω δε Ιστων κ̄ Μιλτιαδς κ̄ Ταιανς κ̄ Κλημενιος κ̄ ε̄ερων πλειονων εν οισ απασι θεολογει-ται ο χριστος. τα γαρ Ειρηναϊς τε κ̄ Μελιωνος κ̄ των λοιπων τις αγ-νοει βιβλια, θεον κ̄ ανθρωπον καταγγελουτα τον χριστον; ψαλμοι δε οσοι κ̄ ωδαι αδελφων απαρχης υπο π̄σιων γραφεισαι, τον λογον τε δεσ τον χριστον υμνσι θεολογητες. Πως δε εκ αιδνυται ταυτα Βικτορος κα-λαιφευδεσθαι. ακριβως ειδδες, οτι Βικτωρ τον σκευεα θεοδωλον τον αρχηγον κ̄ πατερα ταυτης της αρνησιθες αποστασιας, απειηρυξε της κοινωνιας, π̄ωλον

In these passages we have an account of the claims of the ancient unitarians to the high antiquity of their doctrine. And it has been seen that, by the general acknowledgment of the Fathers, and of Eusebius himself, among the rest, that the first doctrine that was taught by the apostles, was that of the simple humanity of Christ; and that his divinity was very little known till it was published by John, after the death of the other apostles. Eusebius, therefore, denying it in this case, is not at all to be regarded, since it is contrary to all other evidence, and also to the reason of the thing, as I have abundantly proved, unless he had brought some sufficient proof to counteract that evidence. What he has offered of this kind I shall distinctly consider, after I have produced a passage from Theodoret, in which he also mentions the claim of the unitarians to the antiquity of their doctrine. “Artemon,” he says, “taught that Christ “was a mere man, born of a virgin, and ex-πρωτον ειποντα ψιλον ανθρωπον τον χριστον; ει γαρ Βικτωρ και αυτης ειως εφρονει ως η τριτων διδασκει βλασφημια, πως αν απεβαλλε θεοδωτου του της αιρεσεως ταυτης ευρειν. Hist. lib. 5. cap. 28. p. 252.

“ celling the prophets in virtue. This, he “ says, the apostles taught, perverting the “ sense of the sacred scriptures, but that “ those who came after them made a God of “ Christ, who was not God*.” It appears also from Eusebius’s answer to Marcellus, that he also charged his opponents with holding a new doctrine, and scrupled not to call that doctrine heresy †.

The first argument of Eusebius is, that the sacred scriptures are against the unita-rians. This, however, is a matter of opi- nion, in which he might be, and I doubt not was, mistaken. He then mentions the writings of some persons who held the doctrines of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, viz. Justin, Miltiades, Tatian, and * Τον δε κυρίον Ιησυν χριστον ανθρωπον ειπε ψιλον, εκ παρθεν γεγεννημενον, των δε προφητων αρετη κρειττονα . ταυτα δε κ' της αποστολης ελεγε κεκηρυχεναι, παρερμηνευων των θειων γραφων την διανοιαν, της δε μελ εκεινης θειλογησαι τον χριστον, εκ ούτα θεον. Hæg. Fab. lib. 2.

 cap. 4. Opera, vol. 4. p. 220.

† Ψιλον γαρ κ' τω ανθρωπινω λογω ομοιον, αχι δε υιον αληθως ζωντα κ' υφεσώτα, τον χριστον ειναι ομολογειν εδελει . κ' επειδη ταυτην ειπε επινοεισθαι νυν αιρεσιν, &c. Contra Marcellum, lib. 1.
 p. 19.

Clemens.

Clemens. But of these Justin was the oldest, and it is not denied that he did hold those doctrines, being probably the first who advanced them. Who the Clemens is that he mentions, he does not say; but had it been Clemens Romanus, it is probable that he would have placed him first, the rest being named in the order of time in which they flourished; and besides, there is nothing in the epistle of Clemens that is in the least favourable to those doctrines. Consequently, it must have been Clemens Alexandrinus that he intended, and therefore the highest antiquity of the doctrine of the divinity of Christ that Eusebius could prove, is that of Justin.

Pearson makes no difficulty of contradicting Eusebius in this case. His opponent, Mr. Daillé, having said, if that account be true, he replies, “ He knew very “ well that, strictly speaking, it was not “ true; for he knew many others, long “ before Theodotus, and not a few even “ before Ignatius, who taught the same “ heresy, a catalogue of whom may be seen “ in

“ in Epiphanius *,” and whom he proceeds to mention.

Eusebius’s reply to Marcellus’s charge of novelty is equally unsatisfactory, as he only, in a general way, refers to writings older than those of Origen, in all which he says he found the same faith †.

As to the hymns used by christians, and said by Eusebius to have been from the beginning, no inference can be safely drawn from them, because divinity may be ascribed to persons in very different senses, and some of them very innocent ones, especially in * Theodotum novisse rursus pernego. Dallæus ipse dubitanter hæc proponit, si vera sunt, inquit, quæ Caius, sive alius apud Eusebium scriptor vetustissimus dicit, Theodotum scilicet primum asseruisse Christum fuisse nudum hominem; ipse enim optime novit hæc, si striçte sumantur, vera non esse: novit alios quamplurimos diu ante Theodotum, non paucos etiam ante Ignatium, eandem hæresin promulgasse, quorum catalogus apud Epiphanium legitur. Vindicte, lib. 2. cap. 2. p. 24.

† Εγω δε και Ωριγενες παλαισιων ανδρων, πλειστοις οσοις εκκλησιαστικους συγγραμασιν εηλυχηκα, επισκοπων τε και συνοδων επιστολαις, προπαλαι γραφεισαις, δι ων εις και αυτος ο της πεισεως χαρακτηρη αποδεικνυται. εκ ορθως αρα διαβεβληκεν ειπων επινοεισθαι την νυν αιρεσιν υπο των διαβαλλομενων. Contra Marcellum, lib. 1. p. 20.

the

the language of poetry; and as to the antiquity of these hymns, as the historian has not mentioned the age of them, it is very possible, for any thing that appears to the contrary, that they might have been those very hymns which were rejected by Paulus Samosatensis on account of their novelty.

It is likewise alledged, that Pliny says, that “the christians on a certain day, before it was light, met to sing a hymn to Christ as to God (or a God) *.” But as to this writer, if he had been told that hymns were sung by christians in honour of Christ, being himself a heathen, he would naturally imagine that they were such hymns as had been composed in honour of the heathen gods, who had been men. He would be far from concluding from that circumstance, that Christ was considered by his followers either as the supreme God, or as a pre-existent spirit, the maker of the world under God.

* Affirmabant autem hanc fuisse summam vel culpæ suæ, vel erroris, quod essent soliti stato die, ante lucem convenire; carmenque Christo, quasi deo, dicere. Epist. 97.

SECTION II.

Of the Excommunication of Theodotus by Victor.

THE argument that is urged with the most plausibility against the antiquity of the unitarian doctrine, is that which is drawn from the excommunication of Theodotus, by Victor, bishop of Rome, about the year 200; as it may be said, that this bishop, violent as he was, would not have proceeded to the public excommunication of a man whose opinions were not generally obnoxious.

I wish that we had a few more particulars concerning this excommunication of Theodotus, as it is the first of the kind that is mentioned in history. It is to be observed, that it is not Caius, the writer quoted by Eusebius, who says that he was excommunicated on account of his being an unitarian, but Eusebius himself*; so that, * Ησαν δε ετοι αμφω Θεοδόξ τε σκευέως μαθήται, τε πρώτῃ ἐπιταύτῃ τῇ φρονήσει, μαλλον δὲ ἀφροσύνη, ἀφορισθέντες τῆς κοινωνίας ὑποβύλορος ὡς εἶπεν, τε τότε ἐπισκόπος. Hist. lib. 5. cap. 21. p. 253.

considering

considering the writer's prejudices, there may be some room to doubt, whether he was excommunicated on that account.

The unitarians, it has been seen, said that Victor favoured their doctrine, and this we find asserted in the Appendix to Tertullian's Treatise, De Præscriptione, which, whether written by Tertullian himself, or not, is probably as good an authority as that of Eusebius. He says that, after the two Theodotus's, "Praxeas introduced his "heresy into Rome, which Victorinus en"deavoured to strengthen. He said that "Jesus Christ was God the Father omni-
"potent, that he was crucified, suffered,
"and died, &c.*" Victorinus, in this passage, Beaufobre says †, it is agreed, should be Victor, and it cannot be supposed, that he would have patronized in Praxeas the same doctrine for which he had before excommunicated Theodotus. The probability, therefore, is, that Theodotus was excommunicated on some other account than that of his being an unitarian.

* Sed post hos omnes etiam Praxeas quidam hæresim introduxit, quam Victorinus corroborare curavit. Hic deum patrem omnipotentem Jesum Christum esse dicit; hunc crucifixum passumque contendit et mortuum. Ad Finem, p. 223.

† Histoire de Manichéisme, vol. 1. p. 533.

Theodotus having been excommunicated as an unitarian, is not consistent with that general prevalence of the unitarian doctrine in the time of Tertullian (which was also that of Victor) which we have seen that Tertullian expressly asserts. However, the account of Eusebius, though improbable, may be admitted without denying that of Tertullian, when the circumstances attending them are duly considered.

Tertullian lived in Africa, where there seems to have been a greater inclination for the unitarian doctrine than there was at Rome; as we may collect from the remarkable popularity of Sabellius in that country, and other circumstances. Athanasius also, who complains of many persons of low understanding favouring the same principle, was of the same country, residing chiefly in Egypt; though he had seen a great part of the christian world, and was, no doubt, well acquainted with the state of it.

We should likewise consider the peculiarly violent character of Victor, who was capable of doing what few other persons would have attempted; being the same person who excommunicated all the eastern churches, because they did not observe Easter at the same time that the western churches did, for which he was much censured by many bishops, even in the west.

Such an excommunication as this of Theodotus was by no means the same thing with cutting a person off from communion with any particular church, with which he had been used to communicate. Theodotus was a stranger at Rome, and it is very possible that the body of the christian church in that city did not interest themselves in the affair; the bishop and his clergy only approving of it. For I readily grant that, though there were some learned unitarians in all the early ages of christianity, the majority of the clergy were not so.

Theodotus, besides being a stranger at Rome, was a man of science, and is said by the unitarians to have been well received by Victor at first; so that it is very possible possible that the latter might have been instigated to what he did by some quarrel between them, of which we have no account.

Upon the whole, therefore, though Victor excommunicated this Theodotus, who was a stranger, and had, perhaps, made himself conspicuous, so as to have given some cause of umbrage or jealousy to him, it is very possible that a great proportion of the lower kind of people, who made no noise or disturbance, might continue in communion with that church, though they were known to be unitarians.

There is no instance, I believe, of any person having been excommunicated for being an unitarian before Theodotus.—Whereas, had the universal church been trinitarian from the beginning, would not the first unitarians, the first broachers of a doctrine so exceedingly offensive to them, as in all ages it has ever been, have experienced their utmost indignation, and have been expelled from all christian societies with horror.

SECTION III.

Of the Part taken by the Laity in the Excommunication of the early Unitarians, and other Considerations relating to the Subject.

IT is particularly remarkable, that we read of none of the laity having been excommunicated on account of their unitarian principles, which they were well known to hold. And whenever any of the bishops were deposed on this account, it is also remarkable, that the common people appear to have been their friends. None of the laity were excommunicated along with Noetus, about A. D. 220, with Sabellius, about A. D. 255. (See Lardner's Credibility, vol. 4. p. 593.) Paulus Samosatensis, A. D. 269, or Photinus, A. D. 344, &c. After the bishops had deposed Paulus Samosatensis, it is observable, that only sixteen signed the condemnation (Eusebii; Hist. lib. 7. cap. 30. p. 359) and he could not be expelled from the episcopal house till

till the aid of the emperor Aurelian was called in ; and he may be supposed to have been offended at him for his having been in the interest of his rival Zenobia. This could not have been necessary, if the majority of his people had not been with him, and therefore, if his deposition had not, in fact, been unjust.

Besides, the prosecution of Paulus Samosatensis, as Dr. Lardner has observed, was vehemently urged by his presbyter Malchion, who had a quarrel with him. Having been disobliged, he could not be satisfied till he was deposed. Credibility, vol. 4. p. 624. “ He wrote, says Jerom, the large epistle in the name of the council. Paul had many friends and admirers among the bishops and presbyters of the neighbouring churches and villages, and was much beloved and admired by others,” Ibid. p. 640. He could not be expelled in the first council, in 264, when Firmilian of Cappadocia and Gregory of Neocæsarea were present ; and Firmilian was dead at the time of the second council, in 269 or 270. Ibid. p. 534.

Dr. Lardner's account of Paulus Samofatenfis, is as follows :

“ As we have not now before us any of “ Paul's writings, and have his history “ from adversaries only, we cannot propose “ to judge distinctly of his talents, nor draw “ his character at length. However, from “ the several particulars before put down,
“ and collected from divers authors, some “ things may be concluded. And I apprehend that, laying aside for the present the “ consideration of his heterodoxy, we shall “ not mistake much if we conceive of him “ after this manner. He had a great mind, “ with a mixture of haughtiness, and too “ much affection for human applause. He “ was generally well respected in his diocese, and by the neighbouring bishops, “ in esteem with the great, and beloved by “ the common people. He preached frequently, and was a good speaker. And “ from what is said by the Fathers of the “ council, of his rejecting, or laying aside, “ some hymns, as modern, and composed by “ moderns, it may be argued, that he was a “ critic, which is a valuable accomplishment “ ment

“ment at all times, especially when un“common.” Ibid. p. 644.

He adds, in a note, “A learned writer “among the moderns (viz. Garnier) whom “I did not think of when I drew the above “character, confirms almost every part of it.
“For he allows Paul to have possessed the “third see in the church, and to have had “the patronage of a great princess, an ap“pearance of piety, reputation for learning, “flowing eloquence, and the favour of the “multitude.”

As to Photinus, he was so popular in his diocese, that his solemn deposition by two councils, could not remove him from his
see. “He defended himself,” says Telemont (Hist. of the Arians, vol. 1. p. 116.) “against the authority of the church, by “the affection which his people had for “him, even to the year 351, though his “heresy began to appear as early as 342, or “343, according to Socrates; and the Eu“sebiens condemned it in one of their con“fessions of faith, in 345.” At length the Emperor Constantius, a zealous Arian, thought it necessary to interfere, and to get him banished, in a council held at Sirmium itself. Had the body of christians in those times been generally trinitarians, the common people would, no doubt, have been ready enough to take an active part against their heretical bishops.

As to Eusebius charging heretics with teaching new doctrines, he is remarkably inaccurate and inconsistent with himself in that respect, and so, indeed, are all the other ecclesiastical historians. No unitarian is mentioned, but he is said to have been the first to have taught the unitarian doctrine. This language is held even with respect to Photinus, the very last of the celebrated unitarians. But it is possible, as I have observed before, that by novelty these writers might sometimes mean nothing more than heresy.

The charge of teaching the unitarian doctrine as a novelty, is first advanced against Beryllus, bishop of Bostra in Arabia, who, perhaps, was the first who wrote in defence of the doctrine, that of the divinity of Christ beginning at that time to be prevalent. Eusebius says of him, that

2

“ he

“ he introduced things new and strange to “ the catholic faith ; having dared to assert,
 “ that our Lord and Saviour did not pre-“ exist in his own distinct person before his “ incarnation, that he had no proper divi“ nity of his own, but that of the Father
 “ only abiding in him *.”

Sozomen also says, that Marcellus introduced a new doctrine, that “ the Son of “ God had his beginning with his birth of “ Mary ;” and yet, in the same section, he says of him, that he adopted the opinion of Paulus Samofatenfis †.

The same writer calls Photinus the introducer of a new heresy, when, in the same chapter, he says, that he held the same opi-

* Βηρυλλῶ ο μικρῶ προσθεν δεδηλωμενῶ Βοσρων της Αραβιας επισκοπῶ, τον εκκλησιαστικον παρεκτρεπων κανονα, ξενα τινα της πιστεως παρεισφερειν επειραλο τον σωτηρα κη κυριον ημων λεγειν τολμων μη πωρφεσαναι καλ, ιδιαν υσιας περιγραφην, προ της εις ανθρωπου επιδημιας, μηδε μην θεοτητα ιδιαν εχειν, αλλ' εμπολινομενην αυτω μονη την πατρικην. Hist. lib. 6. cap. 33. p. 297.

† Εν δε τω τῷτε κη Μαρκελλον Αγκυρας επισκοπον της Γαλαλιων, ως καινων δογματων εισηγητην, κη τον υιον τε θεος λεγοντα εκ Μαριας την αρχην ειληφεναι.—Εις την Παυλε τε Σαμοσαλειωσ εξεκυλισθη φοξαν. Hist. lib. 2. cap. 33. p. 91, 92.

nion with Sabellius and Paulus Samosatensis*.

Photinus is also charged with being the author of his own opinion by Socrates †; and yet he had before mentioned him as a disciple of Marcellus ‡.

As to the general testimony of Eusebius, and other writers, who were themselves believers in the pre-existence and divinity of Christ, that the primitive church was orthodox in their sense of the word, it is not, as I said, to be regarded, unless they bring some sufficient proofs of their assertion. They were, no doubt, willing to have it thought so, and, without considering it very particularly, might presume that it was so. But the facts which they them-

* Ἡδὴ πρότερον καινῆς αἰρεσέως εἰσηγήτης γενομένος.—Ὡς τὰ Σαβελλίῳ καὶ Παυλῷ τῷ Σαμοσατέως φρονεῖν. Hist. lib. 4. cap. 6.

p. 135.

† Τόδε δὴ καὶ Φωτεινὸς ὁ τῆς ἐκεῖ ἐκκλησίας προεστώς, τὸ παρειρεθεὶν αὐτῷ δόγμα φανερώτερον ἐξεθρυλλεῖ. Hist. vol. 2. p. 123.

‡ Φωτεινὸς γὰρ τῶν ἐκεῖ ἐκκλησιῶν προεστώς, γενὸς τῆς μικρᾶς Γαλιτίας, Μαρκελλῶ τε τῷ καθηρημένῳ μαθητῆς, ἀκολούθῳ τῷ διδασκαλῷ, Ψίλον ἀνδρῶπον, τὸν υἱὸν ἐδογματίσε. Hist. lib. 2. cap. 29. p. 98.

selfes

selves record, and the account which they give of the apostles in divulging the orthodox doctrine with so much caution, make it impossible to have been as, in general terms, they assert. I am even surprized that any person should lay the least stress on the mere assertion of a writer in this case, when it is so common for men to represent the opinions of those whose authority they know to be great, as being the same with their own. Every man should be heard with caution in such a case, and what he says on one occasion, should be compared with what he says on another, and especially with what he drops, as it were, accidentally, and when he was off his guard.

This may certainly be said in favour of the unitarians, that they did not contradict themselves on this subject, but uniformly maintained, that theirs was the ancient doctrine, transmitted to them from the apostles; whereas Eusebius manifestly contradicts himself. He certainly knew that Justin Martyr had not only mentioned unitarians, as existing in his time, but had also treated them with much respect; and to

to say nothing of his own testimony, to the apostle John having been the first who taught with clearness, and consequently with effect, the doctrine of the divinity of Christ; he himself speaks of the Ebionites as cotemporary with Cerinthus, who by his own account lived in the time of the apostle John*.

That Eusebius should take so violent a part, as he always does, against the ancient unitarians, is not difficult to be accounted for. He was himself strongly suspected of Arianism, at a time in which the Athanasian doctrine was prevalent, and though a learned man, he was not of the firmest tone of mind. In these circumstances, he would naturally make the most of such pretensions to orthodoxy as he had, and would be inclined to shew his zeal by invectives against those who were more heretical than himself. This we see illustrated every day. This was the cause why many of the reformers from popery joined with the papists, in the persecution of those who were desirous of carrying the reformation farther than themselves.

* Hist. lib. 3. cap. 27, 28. p. 121, &c.

selves. This might, in some measure, contribute to produce the zeal of the Calvinists against the Arminians, that of the Arminians against the Arians, that of the Arians against the Socinians, and that of Socinus himself against Francis David.

It may be said, that if the great majority of christians in early times were unitarians, why did they not excommunicate the innovating trinitarians. I answer, that the doctrine of the trinity, was not, in its origin, such as could give much alarm, as I have already explained; and it was not obtruded upon the common people as an article of faith necessary to their salvation, or indeed as a thing which they were at all concerned to know. And before it became very formidable, there was a great majority of the learned and philosophizing clergy on its side. However, that it did give very great alarm, as it began to unfold itself, I have produced the most undeniable evidence.

CHAPTER XVI.

*Of the State of the Unitarian Doctrine after
the Council of Nice.*

THAT the unitarians constituted the great body of christians till the time of Justin Martyr, and that they were the majority at least of the common people till about the time of the council of Nice, has, I presume, been proved to as much satisfaction as the circumstances of the case could be expected to admit. There is every reason to believe that it was so a priori, a great number of circumstances, applied by the clearest axioms of historical criticism, shew that it must have been so. And there is likewise the strongest positive testimony to the fact, from some of the most considerable christian writers. The unitarians were the major pars credentium, in the

the time of Tertullian, they were the το πλῆθος, the multitude, and the τα πλῆθη, the multitudes of Origen, and the οἱ πολλοί, the many of Athanasius.

According to Eutychius, who is said to have compiled his annals from the archives of the church of Alexandria, there must have been more unitarian bishops than the Greek historians give us any account of. He says, that “there were two thousand and forty “eight bishops assembled at the council “of Nice, some of whom were Sabellians, “who believed that Christ had no being “before he was born of the virgin; others “saying that God was one substance called “by three names, but not believing in the “word, or the Holy Spirit, which,” he says, “was the opinion of Paulus Samosatenensis; and that Constantine having heard “their opinions, but approving of that of “three hundred and eighteen, who held “the same doctrine, he appointed them to “meet in a large room, and gave them “power to make decrees.” The same account Selden, the publisher of Eutychius, chius, found in an Arabian and christian writer, named Joseph, and also in a celebrated Mahometan historian, Ismael Ebn Ali.

This account, though seemingly very different from that of the other ecclesiastical historians, Beausobre thinks may be reconciled with it, if it be supposed that the bishops of villages, presbyters, and those who were deemed heretical, were not allowed to have a seat with the rest *. Wormius, he observes, says that no sectary was allowed to give his opinion in that council †.

* Histoire de Manicheisme, vol. I. p. 531.

† Mittens ergo Constantinus rex in omnes passim regiones patriarchas et episcopos convocavit, adeo ut post annum et duos menses, Niceæ convenirent bis mille quadraginta octo episcopi, sententiis et religionibus inter se discrepantes.—Erant qui dicerent christum a patre esse, instar flammæ ignis quæ ab igne flammante dependeret, nec priorem diminuere posterioris ab ipso derivationem. Erat que hæc Sabellii et affectarum ipsius sententia.—Alii christum hominem fuisse a divinitate creatum ejusdem cum nostrum aliquo substantiæ, filique principium a Maria fuisse, ipsumque electum qui substantiæ humanæ liberator esset, comitante ipsum gratia divina, et in ipso per

That the unitarians were exceedingly numerous in the time of Athanasius, or not long before it, especially in Africa, is evident from his complaints on the subject. He says that “in Pentapolis of Upper Lybia, per amorem et voluntatem habitante, ideoque appellatum fuisse filium dei. Dicentes etiam deum substantiam unam esse, et personam unam quæ tribus nominibus appellatur, nec in verbum, nec in spiritum sanctum credentes: erat hæc sententia Pauli Samosatani patriarchæ Antiochæni, ejusque sectatorum qui Pauliciani audiunt.—Alii (denique) asseruerunt divinitatem Christi; quæ Pauli apostoli sententia est, nec non episcoporum trecentorum et octodecim. auditis ipsorum sententiis miratus est Constantinus rex hanc discrepantiam, domoque ipsis seposita in qua loca ipsis paravit, disputationes ipsos habere jussit, ut perspecto apud quem vera esset fides, ipsum sequeretur. Illi ergo trecentum et octodecim in unam fidem, unamque sententiam consenserunt, cumque reliquis qui litem ipsis moverunt disputantes, illis argumentis suis superiores evaserunt fidemque veram declararunt: reliqui autem episcopi sententiis et religionibus inter se diversi fuerunt. Rex ergo trecentis et octodecim episcopis istis loco quodam proprio et amplo parato, ipse in eorum medio confedit, acceptaque, annulum, gladium et sceptrum suum ipsis tradidit, dicens ipsis, vobis hodie in imperium meum potestatem concessi, ut in eo faciatis quicquid facere vobis expedit eorum quæ ad religionem rite stabilendam et fidelium commodum spectant. Selden’s Euty-chius, p. 439, 440. 443, 444.

“ some of the bishops embraced the doctrine of Sabellius, and prevailed so much, that the Son of God was hardly preached in the churches*.”

---

SECTION I.

Of the State of the Unitarians from the Time of the Council of Nice, to the Sixth Century.

INOW proceed to mention the traces I have found of unitarians after the council of Nice. And notwithstanding their numbers certainly kept decreasing, owing to the prevalence of the trinitarian and Arian doctrines, each in their turns favoured by the civil powers (which it is remarkable, the unitarian doctrine never was in any age or country) it appears from circumstances, that the unitarians were in considerable numbers; some holding separate assemblies, but * Εν Πελοποννησῷ τῆς ἀνω Διόκλειος τῆνικαὶ τινες τῶν ἐπισκοπῶν ἐφρόνησαν τὰ Σαβελλίαν * ἢ τοσούτον ἰσχυροῦσαν ταῖς ἐπινοήταις, ὡς ὀλίγη δὲ μὴ ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις κηρυττεῖσθαι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ. De Sententia Dionysii, Opera, vol. i. p. 552.

many

many more concealed in the great body of christians, and joining their public worship.

It is highly probable that, even long after the doctrine of the divinity of Christ was established by councils, and the decrees of emperors, many of the common people were well known to believe nothing of the matter; and yet, if they made no disturbance, and did not think proper to separate themselves from the communion of the orthodox bishops, who were not authorized to propose any test to them, they were not excommunicated. In fact, they were considered by the more learned as simple ignorant people, who acquiesced in the doctrine of the humanity of Christ, because they were incapable of comprehending that of his divinity, and the sublime doctrine of three persons in one God. This circumstance, together with there being no distinguished writers among them, and also their being mixed and confounded with other sects, accounts for our hearing so little of them.

Many of the Montanists, besides Praxeas, against whom Tertullian wrote, were probably unitarians. Jerom represents the Montanists in general, as “differing from “the orthodox in the rule of faith, and “agreeing with the Sabellians*.”

Sandius says, that Noetus was said by some to have been the disciple of the Montanists †. According to Socrates, Eusebius said that they who disliked the term con- substantial at the council of Nice, charged their adversaries with favouring the sentiments of Sabellius and Montanus ‡.”

Nicephorus observes, that “Some Mon“tanists were Sabellians.” He also expressly says, that “they denied the per“sonal existence of the Son, and that he “was consubstantial with the Father ||.”

* Primum in fidei regula discrepamus. Nos patrem, et filium, et spiritum sanctum in sua unumquemque persona ponimus, licet substantiâ copulemus: illi, Sabellii dogma sectantes, trinitatem in unius personæ angustias cogunt.
Ad Marcellum, Opera, vol. I. p. 414.

† Hist. p. 97.

‡ Οι μὲν γὰρ τῆ ὁμοσίου τὴν λέξιν ἐκαλινοῦτες τὴν Σαβελλίῳ καὶ Μοντῶνι δοξᾶν εἰσπηγείσθαι αὐτὴν τῆς προσδεχομένης ἐνομιζοῦσιν· καὶ διὰ ταῦτο τῆς βλασφημίας, ἐκαλεῖν, ὡς ἀναίρεσίαις τὴν ὑπαρξίαν τῆς υἱοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ· οἱ δὲ πάλιν τῷ ὁμοσίῳ προσκειμένοι πολυθεΐαν εἰσαγεῖν τῆς εἰρᾶς τομιζοῦσιν, ὡς ἐλληνισμὸν εἰσαγούσας, ἐξέβρεπτοῦ. Hist. lib. I. cap.
23. p. 57.

|| Οι μὲν γὰρ τὸ ὁμοσίου μὴ προσκειμένοι, δοξᾶν ἐσχόντα τὰ Μον-τῶνι καὶ Σαβελλίῳ φράσει, τῆς αὐτοῦ παραδεχομένης· καὶ βλασφημίας ἐκαλεῖν

Zonaras also says, that “ Montanus, besides “ maintaining that himself was the para-“ clete, confounded the whole trinity, con“ tracting it into one person*.” Lastly, Harmenopulus, in his account of sects, says expressly, that the disciples of Montanus reduced the holy trinity to one person †.

Upon the whole, therefore, though Tertullian was a Montanist, and no unitarian, it may be concluded, that the prevailing sentiments of those who went by that name were unitarian. Sabellius himself is said by Nicephorus, to have learned his doctrine from some of the Montanists ‡. According to the author of the Appendix to to Tertullian’s Treatise De Præscriptione, they were only those Montanists who fol-ελαλιν ως την τε υιου υπαρξιν αναλρεπολιας. Hist. lib. 8. cap. 45.

 p. 637.

* Και εις εν προσωπον την αγιαν τριαδα συναρην κ̅ συνεχεον.
 Canones, p. 78.

† Οι περι τον Μολανον——εις εν προσωπον την αγιαν συναρηνιες τριαδα κ̅ το πασχα διετρεφον. Harmenopulus de Sectis.

‡ Τινες δε των εξ αυτη, ες υτερον τας τρεις της θεοτητος υποστασεις εν ειναι εδοξασαν · τον αυτου λεγοντες ειναι κ̅ πατερα κ̅ υιον κ̅ αγιον πνευμα · εξ ων φασι και τον Λιβυν Σαβελλιον, τας της αιρεσεως αρχας εκπορισασθαι. Hist. vol. 1. p. 319.

lowed Æschines, who were unitarians, while those who followed Proclus were not so*.

The Donatists, also, who did not separate from the church on this subject, are yet said to have been afterwards heretical with respect to the trinity †.

Jerom says, that Donatus himself wrote a book concerning the Holy Spirit agreeable to the Arian doctrine ‡, which in this respect was the same as the unitarian. Austin also says, that he did not hold the catholic doctrine of the trinity, but that he was not generally followed by those who bore his name. Theodoret says, that the Donatists agree with the Arians||. The probability * Sunt etiam qui καλα Proclum dicuntur. Sunt qui secundum Æschinem pronunciantur—Privatam autem blasphemiam illi qui sunt καλα Æschinem hanc habent, qua adjiciunt etiam hoc, ut dicant Christum ipsum esse filium et patrem. Sect. 52. p. 223.

† Cur autem solis Donatistis, qui a schismate profuerunt in hæresim, ut postea etiam de baptismo et divina trinitate male sentirent. Facundus contra Moci-anum, p. 199.

‡ Extant ejus multa ad suam hæresim pertinentia et de spiritu sancto liber, Ariano dogmati congruens. Catalogus Scriptorum; Opera, vol. 1. p. 311.

|| Ουτοι δε καλα μεν την αιρεσιν τοις Αρειοις συμπερολαι. Lib. 4. cap. 6. Opera, Ed. Halæ, vol. 4. p. 360.

is, that both Montanus and Donatus, living at a time when the unitarian doctrine was generally received, held it themselves; though their followers, influenced by the same causes that affected other christians, gradually adopted the philosophical opinions.

That the Pelagians should be heretical, with respect to the doctrine of the trinity, will not be wondered at. (though Pelagius himself is said to have been orthodox in that respect) as the unitarians of all ages have adopted the sentiments of Pelagius with respect to human nature. Cassian, who met with them in Gaul, evidently considered them in this light. For he censures them as holding that “Christ was a mere man;” “and saying that men may live sinless lives, because Christ, who was a man, did so.” “They say, that Jesus became Christ after his baptism, and God after his resurrection; the one arising from his unction, the other from the merit of his passion*.”

* Addiderunt quoque dominum, salvatoremque nostrum post baptismum factum esse Christum, post resurrectionem deum: alterum adsignantes unctionem mysterio, al-

“ Otherwise,” he says, “ we come to the “ Pelagian heresy, and say that God dwel“ led in Christ from a certain time, and “ came into him, when, by his life and “ conversation, he deserved that the power “ of the divinity should dwell in him *.”

Admitting this to be true to any considerable extent, it will not be doubted, but that the unitarians must have been very numerous, because the Pelagians were so. Perhaps the Pelagians, described by Cassian, might be inclined to the opinion of Nestorius. But this, as I shall shew, did not differ from unitarianism with respect to the person of Christ.

terum merito passionis: unde advertit novus nunc jam, non novæ hæreseos autor, qui dominum salvatoremque nostrum solitarium hominem natum esse contendit, idem se omnino dicere quod Pelagianistæ ante dixerunt; et consequens errori suo esse, ut qui utique sine peccato solitarium hominem Jesum Christum vixisse asserit, omnes quoque per se homines sine peccato posse esse blasphemet. De Incarnatione, lib. 1. cap. 3. p. 966. See also, p. 1017, 1018, 1066.

* Alioquin ad illam Pelagianæ hæreseos impietatem devolvimur: ut dicamus ex certo tempore habitantem in Christo deum; tum in eum supervenisse, quando ille vita et conversatione id promeruerit, ut in se virtus divinitatis habitaret. Hær. lib. 5. cap. 4. p. 1022.

Marius

Marius Mercator says, that Julianus, a Pelagian, adopted the opinion of Theodorus, the master of Nestorius*.

The simplicity of the unitarians is a circumstance by which they are generally noted; and by this they were likewise concealed, as giving no umbrage to any. But it does not follow, that because they were styled simple, they were persons of low understanding. Tertullian, who gave them that epithet, in answer to the Gnostics, who likewise applied it to the orthodox christians, says, “we are reckoned simple by them, but we are not therefore senseless †.” In a treatise ascribed to Athanasius, the more simple are represented as easily taken with the assertion, that God the logos suffered in the flesh *. Basil represents “simplicity of faith as a bait with which the ignorant are drawn to their destruction †.” Writing on the subject of the Holy Spirit, he begs that what he wrote “might be concealed from the vulgar, lest it should be throwing pearls before swine ‡.” Gregory Nazianzen also must have felt himself in the same situation, when he said, “Have we not suffered from the mad populace §.”

* Simul admonere volens Julianum exepiscopum oppidi Eclanensis, hæreticum Pelagianum seu cælestianum, hunc secutum esse Theodorum. Opera, p. 40.

† Ideoque simplices notamur apud illos, ut hoc tantum, non etiam sapientes: quasi statim deficere cogatur a simplicitate sapientia, domino utramque jungente: Estote prudentes ut serpentes et simplices ut columbæ. Aut si nos propterea insipientes quia simplices. Adv. Valent. sect. 2. Opera, p. 250.

The doctrine of the trinity being considered as a sublime doctrine, the common people, who could not comprehend, or relish it, but who at the same time made no disturbance in the church, would naturally * Αλλά ει τι ξενον επινοειν προς απάτην των απλυσερων νεανειουονται, οιον κ̅ το προκειμενον νυν εις εξέλαισιν, Επαθεν' ο θεος λογος σαρκι. Opera, vol. 2. p. 311.

† Τίλο δε παύλι γνωριμον, οτι ωσπερ αγιστω προς θανατον ελκοθη, τω εαυτη φρονιματι το απλην της επιλασεως, οιον τι δελεαρ, περιβαλλει, ινα τω φαινομενω επιδραμοντες οι απειροτεροι, αφυλακως τω κακω της ασσεβειας περιπαρωσιν. Ad Eunom. lib. 1. Opera, vol. 1. p. 701.

‡ Ουκ ως αξια καλακρυπτεσθαι, αλλ' ωσε μη ριπτεσθαι τοις χοιροις της μαργαριτας. De Sp. S. cap. 30. Opera, vol. 2. p. 366.

§ Ουκ κ̅τελκαμεν δημον μαυνομενον. Or. 32. p. 525.

be pitied and overlooked. Athanasius, considering the violence of his character, speaks of the unitarians with a good deal of tenderness, on account of the difficulty of understanding the doctrine of the trinity. I have quoted a passage from him, in which he represents them as (οι πολλοι) the many, and persons of a low understanding, but by no means as persons out of the church. Contrasting them with the Gnostics and the Arians, he says, “ some persons considering “ what is human in Christ, seeing him “ thirsting, labouring, and suffering, and “ degrading him to a mere man, sin indeed “ greatly ; but they may readily obtain for“ giveness if they repent, alledging the “ weakness of the flesh ; and they have the “ apostle himself administering pardon to “ them, and as it were holding out his hand “ to them, while he says, Truly great is the “ mystery of godliness, God was manifest in the “ flesh *.”

* Όταν τινες, εις τα ανθρωπινα βλεποντες, ιδωσι τον κυριον διψωντα, η κοπιωντα, η πασχοντα, κ' μονον φλυαρησωσιν ως και ανθρωπος τα σωτηριου, αμαβλανεσι μεν μεγαλως. δυναται δε ομως ταχεως μεταγνωσκοντες λαμβανειν συγγνωμην, εχοντες προφασιν την τα σωματιου ασδεγειαν :

According to him many persons within the pale of the church, must either have been unitarians, or have believed the doctrine of the trinity without understanding it, which, in fact, is no belief at all. For, being consulted what was to be done with respect to the spread of the doctrine of Paulus Samosatensis; after acknowledging that persons of low understanding were chiefly infected with it, and quoting what Paul says of the great mystery of Godliness, God manifest in the flesh, he says, “those who understand the subject accurately are few, but all pious persons may hold the faith delivered to them*.” But what kind of holding must it be, when they had no perfect understanding of what they held.

Gregory Nazianzen also represents the common people as excusable for their errors, νεισαν: εχρησι γαρ κ̅ αποστολον συγγνωμην αυλοις νεμονια, κ̅ οιονει χειρα αυλοις εν τω λεγειν εκλεινονια, ο̅ι και ομολογεμενωσ μεγα εσι το της ευσεβειας μυστηριον, θε̅ εφανερωδη εν σαρκι. In illud Evangelii Quicumque dixerit, &c. Opera, vol. 1. p. 975.

* Ο̅ι την μεν ακριβειαν αυλης επιζηειν ολιγων εσι, την δε π̅ισιν καλεχειν π̅παντων των προς τον θεον ευπειθων. De Incarnatione contra P. Samosat. Opera, vol. 1. p. 592.

and safe from not being disposed to scrutinize into things*.

Unitarians, however, were far from being all of the common people, and unlearned. There were several considerable writers among them. “Beryllus of Bostra,” Nicephorus says, “left elegant writings behind him †.” Marcellus and Photinus distinguished themselves as writers, and Gregory Nazianzen says, that the heretics boasted of the number of their books ‡. Unhappily there are none of them now extant.

After the establishment of orthodoxy by Constantine, “all the sects,” says Eusebius, “were forbidden to hold separate assemblies;” and among the rest the unita-* Τῶν μὲν γὰρ τῆ λαοῦ ταχῶς αὐ καὶ συγγνωστοίμεν τὰ τοῦ πασχοῦ σιν. ἔς σωζει, πολλὰς το ἀβασανιστον. Oratio 21. Opera, p. 388.

† Ἐν οἷς ο, τε τῆς κατὰ Βοστρᾶν ἀραβῶν πν Βερύλλος, φιλοκαλῶς ἐπευθῆς συγγραμμάτα καταλείψας. Hist. lib. 5. cap. 15. vol. 1. p. 363.

‡ Καὶ τῶ πλεῖθι τῶν βιβλίων φιλοτιμώμενοι. ἐπειδὴ δὲ τῶ περι τριάδος φυσισμένοι λογοί, καταψευδοῦνται μὲν ἡμῶν, ὡς ἔχ ὑγιῶς ἐχούτων περὶ τὴν πίστιν, δὲλεάζουσι δὲ τῶς πολλὰς. Or. 50. p. 744.

rians, rians, called Paulians, are mentioned*. But this did not make them change their opinions. For he says that, after Constantine's edict against heresy, some, terrified with the emperor's threats, came into the church, dissembling on account of the times. "For, the law forbidding the publication of their books, some who were taken acting contrary to the law, on that account, consulted their safety by every dissimulation †."

This accounts for the great number of unitarians that Facundus mentions, as being in the church, in the time of Theodosius. Their opinions must have been well known, or he could not have been acquainted with them ;

* Επιγνώτε νυν δια της νομοθεσίας ταύτης ω Ναυαλιανοί, Ουαλεντινοί, Μαρκιωνισται, Παυλιανοί, οι κατά τας φρυγας επιτεκλημενοι, και πάντες απλως οι τας αιρεσεις δια των οικειων πληρεβλεις συστηματων—επειδη τον ολεθρον τελον της ημετερας εξωλειας επι πλειον φερειν εν εσιν οιον τε δια τε νομω τειε προαγορευομεν, μηλις υμων συναγειν τε λοπε τολμηση. De Vita Const. lib. 3. cap. 64. p. 621.

† Οι μεν νοτω φρονηματι. βασιλικης απειλης φοβω, την εκκλησιαν υπεδουλο, τον καιρον καιριωνευομενοι. επει δε και διερευνησθαι των ανδρων τας βιβλιας διηγορευεν ο νομος. ηλισκοιλο τοτε απειρημενας οι κακολεχθιας μειοντες. ε δη χαριν, παντ επραττων, ειρωνεια την σωτηριαν ποριζομενοι. Ibid. p. 622.

them ; but they were not molested, while they did not molest others, and wished only to be quiet.

As the passage in his writings, from which I infer this, is a pretty remarkable one, I shall cite it at full length. Speaking of the condemnation of Theodorus (the master of Nestorius, whose system differed very little from that of unitarianism) in whose favour he is writing, he says, that “ in condemning him, they condemned all “ those who thought as he did, even though “ they afterwards changed their opinion.
 “ —What will they do with Martha, and “ then with Mary, the sisters of Lazarus, “ who were particularly attached to our “ Lord, while he was upon earth. And yet “ both of them, first Martha, and then Mary,
 “ are said to have spoken to him thus, Lord,
 “ if thou hadst been here, my brother had not “ died; who, though they thought that he “ was the Son of God, who was to come “ into the world, yet could they not have “ said, if thou hadst been here, if they had “ believed him to be God omnipresent.
 “ They therefore only thought as Theo“ dorus

“ dorus is said to have done, and were “ excommunicated along with him. And “ how many of this kind do we know, by “ the writings of the apostles and evange“ lists, there were at that time; and how “ many even now are there still, in the “ common herd of the faithful, who by “ only partaking in the holy mysteries,
 “ and by a simple observance of the com“ mandments, we see pleasing God; when “ even the apostles themselves, the first “ teachers, only thought as those whom we “ see to be included in this condemnation “ of Theodorus *.”

* Condemnaverunt omnes ab ipso in quem illum in-cidisse putant errore conversos.—Ubi quid agent de Martha et Maria, sororibus Lazari, quæ familiari devotione ipsi domino dum hic in carne degerit adhæserunt. Et tamen utraque, id est, prius Martha, ac deinde Maria, legitur illi dixisse, domine si fuisses hic frater meus non fuisset mortuus. Quæ licet crederent quod ipse esset filius dei qui in mundum venisset, tamen non dicerent si fuisses hic, si eum cognoscerent sicut deum, ubique esse præsentem. Eadem ergo sapuerunt quæ dicitur sapuisse Theodorus, et cum Theodoro simul anathematizatz sunt. Et quantos vel eo tempore in evangeliiis et apostolicis scriptis tales fuisse cog-novimus? Quantos etiam nunc tales in grege fidelium, sola sanctorum mysteriorum participatione, et simplici præceptorum

If this was the case in the time of Theodosius, there can be no doubt of its having been so in the time of Constantine, and that it continued to be so long afterwards. The candour of Facundus towards these simple unitarians is remarkable, and is well illustrated by his account of the state of the christian faith in the time of the apostles. Speaking of those who believed Christ to be a mere man, he says, “ The apostles “ themselves were once imperfect in the “ faith, but never heretics. For while “ they believed too little concerning Christ, “ they received power to cast out unclean “ spirits, and to cure diseases, when our “ Lord sent them, and gave them a com“ mission. If, therefore, the apostles, in “ the very time of their ignorance, were “ not heretics, how can any one call these “ so who died such,” &c.*? He says, præceptorum obedientia, placentes deo vidimus; cum et ipsi primi pastores ejus apostoli sic aliquando sapuerunt, quos omnes cum Theodoro vidimus in hoc anathemate condemnatos. Pro Defensione trium Capitulorum, lib. 10. cap. 7. p. 162.

* Cum ipsi apostoli aliquando fuerint in fide imperfecti, nunquam tamen hæretici. Cumque adhuc parum de

“ the woman who touched Christ’s garment did not take him to be God *.”

This testimony of Facundus may teach us, that we are not to take it for granted, that the unitarians were extinct at any particular time, merely because they are by some writers said to be so. Epiphanius says, that “ the heresy of Artemon was “ extinct, when it was revived by Paulus “ Samosatensis †.” But it could only be that there were few, or none, who went publicly by that name The οι πολλοι, the many of Athanasius were, no doubt, unitarians, though they might not be call-

Christo crederent, magnam potestatem acceperunt spirituum immundorum, ut eijcerent eos, et curarent omnem languorem et omnem infirmitatem, mittente eos domino, atque mandante, euntes prædicate, dicentes, quia adpropinquavit regnum cælorum. Infirmos curate, mortuos suscite, leprosos mundate, dæmones ejcite, gratis accepistis, gratis date. Si vero apostoli nec in ipso ignorantia sue tempore fuerunt hæretici, qua ratione quisquam eos qui tales de hac vita transierunt, affirmare possint hæreticos ?
Lib. 12. p. 184.

* Ibid. p. 183:

† Ἀρθεῖς δὲ τῆ διανοίᾳ, ἐξέπεσε τῆς ἀληθείας, καὶ ἀνεκταίνισε τὴν αἰρεσὶν τῆ Ἀρτεμονίου, τὸ πῶτε οἶλος ἐν ἀρχῇ πρὸ ἑλῶν πολλῶν καὶ ἐσθρομένῳ. Hær. 65. Opera, vol. 1. p. 608.

ed Artemonites. On the other hand, we are not to give to particular persons who distinguished themselves in the defence of the unitarian doctrine, all the converts they are said to have made. They, no doubt, found them unitarians, though they might be more encouraged by those leaders to declare themselves more openly. But we shall find, that when all their great leaders were gone, they did not want boldness in asserting their principles, which is a proof that they did not want numbers.

The number of followers that historians give to Marcellus of Ancyra, the capital of Galatia, and also to his disciple Photinus, bishop of Sirmium, in Pannonia, is prodigious; and the effects of their labours are said to have remained a long time. The former, though living in troublesome times, and probably being induced to make some improper compliances, is, notwithstanding, noted for the courage with which he, for some time at least, maintained his opinions. That he was not easily overborne by authority, Eusebius, his antagonist, testifies, when he says, that “ he made no ac“count of the Fathers of the church*.” Alluding to the preaching and writings of Marcellus, Hilary says, “Galatia has brought up many to the profession of one God; and,” alluding to Photinus, “Pannonia wickedly maintains that Jesus Christ was born of Mary,” i. e. that he did not exist before his birth †. This writer complains heavily of the distressed situation of the truth among so many heresies, and more than intimates, that the followers of Photinus, though often condemned, were not sufficiently separated from the church. The mischief, he says, was within ‡.

* Ουκ τε παντας της Εκκλησιαστικης πατερων αδελετ. Contra Marcellum, lib. 1. p. 19.

† Impie multos ad unius dei professionem Galatia nutrit—Pestifere natum Jesum Christum ex Maria Pannonia defendit. Lib. 7. p. 131.

‡ Nihil solitudini meæ, nihil conscientiaë vacat. Sub specula enim omnium hæreticorum ad occasiones singulorum verborum in os meum pendentium loquor, et omnis sermonis mei iter aut angustiis præruptum, aut foveis incisum, aut laqueis prætensum est. Jam quod arduum aut difficile sit minus conqueror; non meis enim, sed apostolicis scando gradibus. Mihi vero aut in angustias decidere, aut in defossa incidere, aut plagis illaqueari, semper in periculo,

Photinus, though violently opposed by the Arian emperor Constantius (Hilarius Contra Constantium, p. 332) was remarkably popular in his see, and elsewhere; for an account of which see Sozomen, lib. 4. cap. 6. p. 135; and “though excommunicated and condemned, he could not be removed,” says Hilary, “on account of the affection that the people had for him*,” as his language ought to be interpreted. And it is particularly remarkable, that though Photinus was so obnoxious to the riculo, semper in metu est. Prædicaturo enim, secundum legem, et prophetas, et apostolos, unum deum, adest mihi Sabellius, totum me sub verbi hujus professione, tanquam desideratum cibum, morsu sævissimo transvorans. Negantem me rursus, contra Sabellium, unum deum, et confitentem verum deum dei filium, expectat nova hæresis, et a me duos deos arguat prædicari. Natum quoque dei filium ex Maria, dicturo, Hebion, qui et Photinus assistit; auctoritatem mendacii sui, ex professione veritatis, sumpturus. De cæteris taceo, qui ab omnibus extra ecclesiam esse non ignorantur. Hoc vero damnatum, et abjectum licet frequentur, sed internum hodie adhuc malum est. Lib. 7. p. 131.

* Photinus hæreticus comprehensus, olim reus pronuntiatus, et a communione jam pridem unitatis abscissus, nec tum quidem per factionem populi potuit admoveri. Fragmenta, p. 444.

orthodox, on account of his principles, his moral character was never impeached. A high encomium on him may be seen in Philaster *. And when he was expelled from his see by the arm of power, he enjoyed an honourable retirement, and employed himself in writing books, in which, besides promoting the cause of christianity in general, he boldly maintained his peculiar opinions. “ Photinus,” says Jerom, “ endeavoured to revive the heresy of the “ Ebionites, and wrote many volumes, the “ chief of which are against the heathens, “ and the books to Valentinian †.” Socrates says, that “ he wrote against all here-

* Nam erat et ingenii viribus valens, et doctrinæ opibus excellens, et eloquio præpotens : quippe qui utroque sermone copiose, et graviter disputaret et scriberet : ut monumentis librorum fuorum manifestatur, quos idem partim Græco, partim Latino sermone composuit, Cap. 16. Bib. Pat. vol. 5. p. 71.

† Photinus de Gallogræcia, Marcelli discipulus, Sirmii episcopus ordinatus, Hebionis hæresim instaurare conatus est : postea, a Valentiniano principe pulsus ecclesia, plura scripsit volumina, in quibus vel præcipui sunt, contra gentes, et ad Valentinianum libri. Catalogus, Opera, vol. 1, p. 316.

“ fies,

“ lies, proposing only his own opinion *.” “ Though banished,” says Sozomen, “ he “ continued to defend his opinion, and “ wrote books in the Greek and Latin “ tongues, in which he endeavoured to “ shew that all opinions were false except “ his own †.” That he continued strenuously to maintain his opinions, notwithstanding his persecution and banishment, is evident from all the accounts we have had of him. Nicephorus says, that “ what “ Photinus laboured in all his writings “ was, that all opinions besides his own “ were nothing ‡.”

Of all the theological works of the ancients, I own that I regret most of all the loss of those of Photinus, and especially his treatise against heresies. An impartial ac-

* Εγραφε δε καλα πασων αιρεσεων, το οικειον μονον δογμα παρα-τιθεμενος. Lib. 2. cap. 30. p. 129.

† Φωτεινος δε φευγειν καλαδιμασθεις, εδε ειως επαυσατο το οικειον συγκριτων δογμα λογος τε τη Ρωμαιων και Ελληνων φωνη συγγραφων εξεδιδε, δι ων επειρατο, πλην της αυτης, τας των αλλων δοξας ψευδεις αποφαινειν. Lib 4. cap. 6. p. 137.

‡ Ο δ' εσπαδαξέτο ταις γραφαις ην, πλην της οικειας, τας των αλλων δοξας μηδεν ἕσας απρεπως εξελεγχειν. Lib. 9. cap. 31.

account of his conference with Basil of Ancyra, would be exceedingly valuable. A few things that are quoted from him I shall produce in my account of the arguments used by the ancient unitarians in defence of their principles. That his writings were not thought meanly of by his adversaries, appears by their frequent notice of them, and the answers that were written to them long after his death. Among others, Vigilius Martyr, about the year 500, wrote against Photinus, as well as Sabellius and Arius*.

Both Photinus and Marcellus were obnoxious to the Arians, but Marcellus more particularly, perhaps, for not having approved of the conduct of the Arians with respect to Athanasius, who always shewed a kindness for him †.

There are several traces of there being great numbers of unitarians in the time of Austin.

* Bib. Pat. vol. 5. p. 546.

† Athanasii, Opera, vol. 1. p. 813. Nicephori, Hist. lib. 8. cap. 53. vol. 1. p. 663.

There

There appears to have been Photinians who even held open assemblies at Sirmium, contrary to a law of the emperor Gratian, A. D. 381; when the bishops of the council of Aquileia petitioned the em-perors to take farther measures with respect to them*." The words invisible and impassible, Ruffinus says, were added to the creed in the church of Aquileia, on account of the Sabellian, or patripassian heresy, though they were not in the creed at Rome†. Jerom speaks of Ancyra, the capital of Galatia, as forely over-run with various heresies in his time‡; and yet,

• Photinianos quoque quos et superiori lege censuistis, nullos facere debere conventus, profit jam et sacerdotum concilio sententia in eos lata est. Petimus insuper, ut quoniam in Syrmienti oppido adhuc conventus tentare eos cognovimus, clementia vestra, interdicta hac ejus coitione, reverentiam primum ecclesiæ catholicæ, deinde etiam legibus vestris deferre jubeat. Ambrosii, Opera, vol. 5. p. 167.

† His additur invisibilem et impassibilem. Sciendum quod duo isti sermones in ecclesiæ Romanæ symbolo non habentur, constat autem apud nos additos, hæreseos causâ Sabellii illius profecto, quæ nostris patripassiana appellatur.
In Symbol, p. 173.

‡ Scit mecum qui vidit Ancyram metropolim Galatiæ, civitatem, quod nunc usque scismatibus dilacerata sit.
quod

Ambrose, his cotemporary, speaks of the heresies of Photinus, Arius, and Sabellius, as being extinct, but says that, that of the Manicheans prevailed*. But as it is well known that the heresy of Arius was far from being extinct at that time, so it is no less evident that that of Photinus had many adherents.

Sabellianism was one of the five heresies, as he calls them, against which Austin thought it more particularly necessary to write. The other four were those of the Pagans, the Jews, the Manicheans, and the Arians †. It is also to the unitarians that he refers in the following passage, “ Let “ us not,” says he, “ hear those who say “ there is only the Father, and that he has “ no son, nor that there is a Holy Spirit, “ but that the Father himself is sometimes “ called the Son, and sometimes the Holy quod dogmatum varietatibus confuprata. In Gal. cap. 2. Opera, vol. 6. p. 134.

* Postea quam Photinus obmutuit, Arius conticuit, Sabellius vocem perdidit, adhuc tamen hæreses diversa contra ecclesiam exerentes ora conspicio. Apologia, David cap. 4. p. 508.

† De Quinque Hæresibus, Opera, vol. 6. p. 35.

“ Spirit.”

“ Spirit *.” Lardner says, that the frequent notice which Austin takes of the Sabellians, in his tracts and sermons to the people, is an argument that in his time there was some considerable number of persons who maintained his opinion †. Paulinus of the same age, speaks of heretics in his time, who said, that “ Christ was “ God by adoption,” from which he infers, that “ they must think him to be a “ mere man ‡.”

If we look towards the east, where Basil and the two Gregories were then flourishing, we shall find still louder complaints of the prevalence of heresy, and especially that of the unitarians. For it is to be observed that, as it was some time before the * Nec eos audiamus qui dicunt patrem tantummodo esse, nec habere filium, nec esse cum eo spiritum sanctum: sed ipsum patrem aliquando appellari filium, aliquando spiritum sanctum. De Agen. Christ. cap. 13. Opera, vol. 3. p. 268.

† Credibility, vol. 4. p. 606.

‡ Aut certe purum eum hominem sine deo natum (quod cogitare impium est) necesse est fateantur, ac per hoc quasi eguerit adoptione a patre in filium sit adoptatus. Adv. Felicem, Bib. Pat. vol. 5. p. 435.

gospel was propagated with success in the western parts of the Roman empire, not till the doctrine of the divinity of Christ had made considerable progress, the christianity of those parts was always what was called more orthodox than that of the east, where the gospel was first preached, and consequently, where the prejudices of christians in favour of the old unitarian doctrine were stronger than in other places.

Cyril of Jerusalem complains of heretics, both Arians and unitarians, as in the bosom of the church. “Now,” says he, “there is an apostacy; for men have departed from the right faith, some confounding the Son with the Father,” meaning the unitarians, “others daring to say that Christ was created out of nothing,” meaning the Arians. “Formerly heretics were open, but now the church is full of concealed heretics*.”

* Νυν δε εστιν αποστασια : απεστησαν γαρ οι ανθρωποι της ορθης πιστεως, και οι μεν υιοπατριαν καταγγελησιν, οι δε τον χριστον εξ ουσιων εις το ειναι παρενεχθεντα λεγειν τολμωσιν. και προτερον μεν ησαν φανεροι αιρετικοι, νυν δε απεπληρωται η εκκλησια κεκρυμμενων αιρετικων.
Cyrilli, Catech. 15. p. 209. See also p. 5.

Complaints of the spread of heresy, both that of the unitarians, and that of the Arians, by Basil himself, and his cotemporaries, are particularly loud and incessant. The opinions he most complains of were such as were held by the common people, though many of the clergy were also infected; and what is remarkable, the malecontents complained loudly of Basil's innovations, both with respect to doctrines, and practices. For some time Basil, though surnamed the Great, was obliged to give way to the storm, and to retire from his diocese; and yet, this it seems was a dangerous step. For according to him, the most unremitting assiduity was necessary to guard their flocks from seduction. "If any person," says he, "leave his diocese for the shortest time, he leaves the common people exposed*."

To give my readers a clear idea of Basil's situation, I shall select from his writings a few passages, which will give us a sufficient insight into it; and the case appears to have been the same through the whole of Asia Minor, but more especially in Galatia, which had been the diocese of Marcellus. "Groan with us," says Basil, "the only begotten is blasphemed, and there is no one to contradict it*." Gregory Nazianzen represents him as absolutely banished for holding opinions different from those of his people †.

† Εἰ γὰρ τις καὶ πρὸς τὸ βραχυλαΐον τῆς ἐκκλησίας αὐτῆ ἀποστασῆ ἐκδόξως ἀφήσῃ τὴν λαὸν τοῖς ἐφεδρευμένοι. Basilii Epist. lxx. Opera, vol. 3. p. 114.

The difficulties of Basil were occasioned both by the Arians, and the unitarians, but chiefly the latter; though they both agreed in decrying the novel doctrine of the divinity of the Holy Spirit, which was the great topic of controversy, as has been already seen, at that particular time. All the following passages shew that his strongest apprehensions were from the unitarians, the disciples of Sabellius, Marcellus, and Paulus Samosatensis. "We are torn in pieces," he says, "on one side by the * Στεναξατε εφ ημιν οτι ο μονογενης βλασφημειται, και ο ανηλεγων εκ εστι. Epist. 70. Opera, vol. 3. p. 114.

† Ος γε και εξοριαν υπερ της αληθειας κατακριθεις. Or. 20. p. 364.

"Anomeans,

“ Anomeans, and on the other by Sabel“ lius *.” “ Is not the mystery of godli“ nefs every where laughed at; the bishops “ continuing without people, and without “ clergy, having nothing but an empty “ name; able to do nothing for the ad“ vancement of the gospel of peace and “ salvation. Are there not discords con“ cerning God, and blasphemy, from the “ old impiety of vain Sabellius †.” “ You “ know, says he, “ my dear brethren, that “ the doctrine of Marcellus, overturns all “ our hopes, not acknowledging the Son
 “ in his proper personality ‡.”

Basil's enemies alledged the authority of his predecessor, the famous Gregory Thau-maturgus, as he is now generally called, as if * Εὐλευθεν γὰρ ἡμᾶς ὁ ἀνωμοῖος σπαρασσει, εἰρωθεν δὲ ὡς εἰκεν • Σαβελλίος. Epist. 64. Opera, vol. 3. p. 100.

† Οὐχι γελάει το μέγα τῆς εὐσεβείας μυστήριον, ὡς ἀνευ λαῶν καὶ κληρῶ ἐπισκοπῶν περιερχομένων, καὶ ὄνομα ψίλων περιφερομένων, ἔθεν δὲ καλορθέντων εἰς προκοπὴν τῆς εὐαγγελίᾳ τῆς εἰρήνης καὶ σωτηρίας; ἔχῃ οἱ περὶ τῆ θεῶ λόγοι παρ' αὐτῶ πληρεῖς εἰσὶν ἀσεβῶν δόγματων, τῆς παλαιᾶς ἀσεβείας τῆ μαλαιοφρονος Σαβελλίᾳ, δι αὐτῆς νῦν ἀνανεώθεισῆς ἐν τοῖς συνάγμασιν. Epist. 293. ibid. p. 284.

‡ Οὐδαὲ, ἀδελφοὶ τιμιώτατοι, δι πάσης ἡμῶν τῆς ἐλπίδος ἀδείψῃσιν ἐχει το Μαρκελλῆ δόγμα. εἶε υἱὸν ἐν ἰδίᾳ ὑποσάσει ἐμολογεῖν.
 Epist. 74. ibid. p. 126.

he had held that "the Father and Son were two in conception, but one in hypostasis." This he does not absolutely deny, but says, "that it was advanced by him not seriously, but only in disputation *."

Writing to the clergy of the church of Neocæsarea, he says, that Sabellius the Lybian, and Marcellus of Galatia, were the real authors of the doctrines taught by his opposers. He complains heavily of the violence with which they opposed him, and that they had the assurance to call his doctrines mischievous ones †.

* Ως αρα Γρηγοριϋ ειποϋλος εν εκθεσει πιστεως, πατερα και υιου επινοια μεν ειναι δυο, υποσασει δε εν. τϋλο δε, ολι κ δογματικως ειρηται, αλλ' αγωνιστικως εν τη προς Αιλιανου διαλεξει. Epist. 64. Opera, vol. 3. p. 101.

† Σαβελλιος α Διδυς, και Μαρκελλος ο Γαλατης μονοι εκ πασιων εισημισαν, και διδασκει ταυτα και γραφαι, απερ νυν παρ ημων, ως ιδια εαυτων ευρηματια επιχειρεισι προσφερειν οι καθηγημενοι τς λαοι, βομβαινοιλες τη γλωσση, και εδε εις πιδανην κλισκεινη εξαγαγειν τα σοφισματια ταυτα, και τς παραλογισμους εξαρκηνιλες. ελοι ρηλα και αρρηλα καθ' ημων δημηγορησι, και παυτα τροπον τας συνιυχιας ημων εκκλινησι. τινοσ ευεκεν; εχι τον επι τοις πονηροις εαυτων διδασμασιον ελεγχον υπορωμενοι; οι γε επι τοσβιον ημων κληναισχυνηθησαν, ωσε και ονειρεσ τινας εφ ημασ συμπλασαι, διαβαλλοιλες ημων τας διδασκαλιασ, ως βλαβερασ. Epist. 63. Opera, vol. 3. p. 95.

It is acknowledged that, in general, the unitarians were of the lower sort of people; yet, in Basil's diocese many of them were those of better condition. He complains of the leading men in his own church being addicted to the opinions of Sabellius and Marcellus, and of their being dissatisfied with his psalms, his new mode of singing, and his institution of monks*. He particularly mentions an excellent person, of the name of Terentius, as having joined the Paulians, in a passage in which he makes great complaint of the progress of that sect, of their boldness, the publication of their confessions of faith, and threatening to join his church †. This would not have been thought of, if their number had not been very considerable. Basil himself was charged with having been a favourer of the unitarian doctrine, and even with having written in defence of it; but this he absolutely denies, appealing to God for the truth of his declaration*.

* Epist. 63. Ibid. p. 95.

† Και μεγαφρονειν της γασιασας τς μερς εκεινς, κ̅ επαγαλλεσθαι, τοις γραμμασιν, εις κ̅ πικριν̅ προλειν̅εσθαι, κ̅ επι ταυτη̅ ειοιμωσ̅ εχειν συναπτεσθαι τη καθ̅ ημας εκκλησια, προς δε τεισ̅ις κακεινο̅ ημιν απηγγελι, οτι υπηγαγου̅λο προς την υπερ αυλων σπαδην, τον παντα αρισον ανδρα Τερεντιον. Epist. 272. Ibid. p. 268.

In this age it was the custom to apply to the church of Rome, in any difficulties from the distant churches of the empire; a circumstance which greatly contributed to advance the power and insolence of that church. And it was chiefly by means of the overbearing influence of this church, that those doctrines, which are generally termed orthodox, got established. Basil requested that persons might be sent from Rome to condemn the heresy of Marcellus, saying, that “to this day, in all the letters “ they send, the heresy of Arius is anathe“ matized, where no fault was found with “ Marcellus, who brought in a contrary he“ resy, affecting the very being of the deity
“ of the only begotten Son, and giving a “ wrong sense to the word logos †.”

* Οὐτε εγραψαμεν εκεινα, εις συνιδεμεθα αυλοις, αλλα, κ' αναθεματιζομεν τας εχουλας εκεινο το πονονρον φρονημα, το της συγχυσεως των υποσασεαν, εν ω η ασεβεσαλη αιρεσις τε Σαβελλιου ανενεωδη. τειλο μεν εν γνωριμον τω θεω, τω τας καρδιας γινωσκουλι, Epist. 345. Ibid: P. 339.

† Επει μεχρι τε νυν εν πασιν οις επιγελλασι γραμμασι, τον μεν δυσωνυμον Αρειον ανα κ' κατω αναθεματιζοντες κ' των εκκλησιων εξοριζοντες

Gregory Nazianzen, who was cotemporary with Basil, complains of the small number of the orthodox, saying, "they were the smallest of the tribes of Israel*." And yet Optatus, who was cotemporary with him in Africa, speaks of all heretics as extinct, and the Sabellians among the rest, their very names being unknown in Africa †. But if this had been the case, we should never have heard of the complaints ζῶντες & διαλειπῆσι. Μαρκελλῶ δὲ, τῷ κατὰ διαμείρον ἐκείνῳ τῆν ἀσθεῖαν ἐπιδείξαμένῳ, καὶ εἰς αὐτὴν τὴν ὑπαρξίν τῆς τῆς μονογενεὸς θεοῦ ἰσῆος ἀσθεῖσαι, καὶ κακῶς τὴν τῆς λογῆς προσηγορίαν ἐκδέξαμένῳ, ἕδεμیان μεμψίν ἐπενεγμονίεσ φαινόνται. Epist. 52. Ibid. p. 80.

* Καὶ ἐπαρησῶται αἰριθμημέναισ τῶν πόλεων, ἔδε τῶν ποιμανῶν τοῖσ παλιβαλοῖσ ἔχειν τι πλεονημῶν, τῶν ὀλίγων τῆς ἐλαχίστης φυλῆς ἐν υἱοῖσ Ἰσραὴλ, τῶν ὀλίγων ἐν χιλιασίν Ἰδα, τῆς μικρῆς Βηθλεὲμ ἐν πόλεσίν ἐν ἡ χριστὸσ γεννηταί, νῦν τε καὶ ἀπ' ἀρχῆσ κακῶσ καὶ γινωσκόμενοσ καὶ σέβομενοσ, παρ' οἷσ πατήρ υψεῖται, καὶ υἱοσ ἰσαεῖται, καὶ πνεῦμα ἁγίον συνδεδεῖται. Or. 2. p. 48.

† Hæreticos cum erroribus suis mortuos, et oblivione jam sepultos, quodammodo resuscitare voluisti, quorum per provincias Africanas non solum vitia, sed etiam nomina videbantur ignota. Marcion, Praxeas, Sabellius, Valentinus, et cæteri temporibus suis a Victorino Pictaviensi, et Zepherino Urbico, et Tertulliano Carthaginiensi, usque ad Cataphrygas; et ab aliis adfertoribus ecclesiæ Catholicæ superati sunt. Lib. 1. p. 9.

of Austin, who resided in Africa at the same time.

We have likewise boasts of the extinction of heresy in Chrysofom. But, by his own evidence, they may be proved to be premature. He speaks of all heretics by name as extinct; and among the rest the Arians are mentioned, which is known to have been by no means the case*. It may even, with some probability, be inferred from this writer himself, that notwithstanding the prohibitions of government, the unitarians of that age had the zeal and courage to hold public assemblies. For, speaking of the unitarians, he says, “Let us avoid their assemblies, and learning the eternal existence of the Son, his power as the maker of the world, &c. let us hold the truth†,” &c.

It appears from the writings of Chrysofom, that, in his time, many persons were much attached to the religion and customs of the Jews; and it is very probable, that the doctrine of the unity of God, of which the Jews were strenuous assertors, might be a principal inducement to it, especially as some who were fond of the Jews are represented as continuing in the church. “ Let the Jews,” says he, “ learn this, and those who rank with us, and yet think as they do*.”

* De Pseudoprophetis, Opera, vol. 6. p. 479.

† Φευγωμεν τοινευ αυτων της συλλογης, κ' μαδοντες τε μονογενες προαιωνιον υπαρξιν, την δημιουργικην δυναμιν.—Διαληρωμεν των δογματων την ακριβειαν. In Pf. 8. Opera, vol. 3. p. 122.

No person speaks with more triumph of the extinction of heresy, especially that of the unitarians, than Theodoret; and yet his account is flatly contradicted by Facundus, in the passage above quoted from him. And as Facundus wrote after Theodoret, it may be taken for granted, that the unitarians were more numerous in the time of Theodoret than they were in his.

Theodoret represents the cities in his neighbourhood as full of heretics when he came into the diocese; mentioning the Arians, Eunomians, Manichæans, Marcionites, Valentinians, and Montanists, and even heathens and Jews; when himself, who maintained the evangelical truth was excluded from all cities *. Though he does not mention unitarians, it will appear probable, from what has been seen above, that they were intended by the term Montanists. He boasts, however, of his having purged his diocese of all those heresies, especially that of the Marcionites †. In another place, he particularly speaks of the unitarians as extinct, and as an event produced by that power which rebuked the deep, Is. iv. 27. and “dried it up, who says “to the deep, Thou shalt be desolate, and “I will dry up the rivers ‡.” He likewise speaks of the doctrine of the trinity as held not only by the teachers in the church, but also by the lowest artificers, several of whom he enumerates, by women, even of the lowest ranks, and by the inhabitants of villages, as well as those of cities *.

* Μαδίσωσαν και Ιουδαιοι, και οι μεθ ημων μεν τελαχθαι δοκουντες, τα δε εκεινων φρανευτες. Hom. 38. Opera, vol. 1. p. 525.

* Μαλλον δε τοις μεν αλλοις απασι πασα-πολις ανεωκλει, ε μονον τοις τα Αρεισ και Ενωμις φρονεσιν, αλλα και Μανιχαιοις, και Μαρκιωνισταις, και τοις τα Βαλερινις, και Μοσιανς νοσασι, και μειλοι και Ελλησι και Ιουδαιοις · εγω δε των ευαγγελικων υπαραγωγιζομενος δογματων πασης ειρχομαι πολεως. Epist. 81. Opera, vol. 3. p. 953.

† Ibid. p. 954.

‡ Ταυτας απασας τας αιρεσεις επι αφαιρεσεως τε μονογενεος θεοητος επινενοηκεν ο των ανθρωπων αλαςωρ · αλλ εσβεσεν απασας ο επιτημων αδυσσω, και ξηραινων αυτην, ο λεγων τη αδυσσω ερημωδηση, και της ποταμους σε ξηρανω. Hær. Fab. lib. 2. cap. 11. Opera, vol. 4. p. 224.

How far this is to be considered as a faithful state of facts, or the flourish of an orator, I leave the reader to determine, by comparing it with the accounts of Facundus and others. Cyril of Alexandria, who was cotemporary with Theodoret, holds a different language. "Some," says he, "are so far seduced, that they cannot bear any longer to confess that Christ is God; but that he is rather the organ and instrument of the deity, and inspired by God †." In this it is possible, that he alluded to the Sabellian, or Patripassian doctrine, which I shall shew was the language of the philosophical unitarians. But it may be inferred, from several passages in the writings of Cyril, that there were unitarians in his time. I shall give one of them in the notes*.

* Και εστιν ιδειν ταυτα ειδοτας τα δογματα, & μονους γε της εκκλησιας τας διδασκαλους, αλλα και σκυλομοις, και χαλκοδουπυς, και ταλασιουργς και τας αλλας αποχειροβιωτας · και γυναικας ωσαιως, & μονον τας λογων μελεσχημικας, αλλα και χερνηιδας, και αμετριδας, και μεντοι και θεραπαινας: και & μονον ασοι, αλλα και χωρητικοι την δε την γνωσιν εσχημασι. Serm. 5. Opera, vol. 4. p. 556.

† Prope, namque usque adeo quidamseducti sunt, ut non sustineant amplius confiteri, quod Deus sit Christus, sed quod sit magis organum et instrumentum divinitatis, et homo numine affatus. Epist. Opera, vol. 2. p. 14.

Cyril even speaks of writers in defence of the unitarian doctrine in his time, and such as he thought it worth his while to animadvert upon. “But because a heretic,” he says, “famous for his skill in the Jewish scriptures, in his exposition of this passage” (the Father is greater than I) “has written intolerable blasphemies against the only begotten, I thought it my duty to shew the falsehood of his discourse †.”

* Obliterant enim quidam, veritatis pulchritudinem, et sicut numisma, adulterant, extollentes in excelsum cornu et injustitiam contra deum loquentes, sicut scriptum est. Imaginantur unigenitum non habere existentiam, et proprie non subsistere, et per se quidem non esse in subsistentia, Verbum autem simpliciter, et sermonem juxta solam pronunciationem a deo factum quemadmodum et in homine inhabitasse dicunt miseri: et componentes sic Jesum, sanctis quidem sanctiorem esse dicunt, attamen non deum. De Recta Fide, vol. 2. p. 686.

† Verum, quoniam quidam hæreticorum etiam apud Judæos sacrarum peritia literarum illustris hunc locum exponens intolerabiles in unigenitum scripsit blasphemias,

mei

“ He has the arrogance,” he says, “ to assert, that the Father is in no sense greater than the deity of the Son, but only supposes that the nature of the Father exceeds his humanity *.” In this manner he must have meant to describe the Sabelians.

From these circumstances, let the reader judge, whether the unitarian heresy was extinct in the time of Theodoret, whatever it might be in his neighbourhood. His great zeal, and his power in his diocese, would probably prevent the unitarians from declaring themselves, and their acquiescence might be called their conversion.

The Pelagians, as I have shewn, very generally adopted the unitarian doctrine. But, besides these, Cassian speaks of other unitarians in Gaul, whom he does not class with Pelagians. “ There have lately risen,” he says, “ I mean in our days, a mei officii putavi falsitatem orationis ejus arguere. In John, lib. 10. cap. 9. Opera, vol. 1. p. 938.

* Ad hoc arrogantiae quidam processerunt, inquit, ut nullo modo audire patiantur patrem, filii deitate majorem esse, sed sola humanitate naturam patris excedere arbitrentur. Cyril. Alex. vol. 1. p. 939.

“ poisonous

“poisonous heresy, chiefly in the city of “Beligæ, of a certain name, but an un“certain author, which, with a fresh head, “rises from the old error of the Ebionites.
 “It is doubtful whether it can be called “old, or new. It is new in the assertors,
 “but old in the error, viz. that our Lord “Jesus Christ is a mere man*.”

According to Maxentius, who flourished in the year 520, the unitarians were by no means extinct in his neighbourhood.
 Speaking of the church as rejecting the doctrine of those who say that “Christ is “God by favour, and not by nature,” he says, “against this all heretics, as well those “who are manifestly cut off and divided, “as those who are within the church, and “spiritually divided from it, whom the * Nuper quoque, id est, in diebus nostris emerfisse hæresim venenosam, et maxime Beligarum urbe conspexi-mus, certi erroris, incerti nominis: quia cum recenti ca-pite ex antiqua Ebionitarum stirpe surrexerit, dubium ad-modum est antiqua magis dici, an recens debeat. Nōva enim assertoribus, sed vetusta erroribus fuit. Solitarium quippe hominem dominum nostrum Jesum Christum na-tum esse blasphemans. De Incarnatione, lib. 1. cap. 2.

 p. 962.

“ holy

“ holy charity of the church bravely tolerates, always take up arms, and cease not to urge it with false charges, and endeavour to excite all they can influence against it. As yet,” he adds, “ we are in the threshing floor, corn mixed with chaff, good men grieve at the society of the wicked*.” This passage is very similar to that of Facundus, and makes it extremely probable, that, in all christian countries, there were great numbers of unitarians, sufficiently known to be so, in communion with the catholic church, without being molested.

* Vera dei ecclesia, cui non sunt hæreticorum ignotæ procellæ, non est illa quæ christum gratia non natura deum confitetur.—Adversus illam omnes hæretici, tam qui ab ea manifeste abscissi atque divisi sunt, quam hi qui intra eam positi, spiritaliter ab ea dissentiunt (quos fortiter sancta fidelium tolerat charitas) semper arma corripunt, eamque falsis criminationibus infestari non desinunt, atque eos quos suis potuerunt erroribus in ejus nituntur invidiam concitare.—Adhuc, inquit in area sumus, mixta sunt frumenta cum paleis, gemunt boni consortia malorum : sed superest flamma, non necessariis, et parata sunt horrea jam probati, in his remorari diutius superfluum æstimo. Bib. Pat. vol.

5: P. 499.

SECTION II.

Of the State of the Unitarians after the sixth Century.

WE must not expect to find any distinct account of the unitarians, or the condition they were in, in what are called the dark ages. There can be no doubt, however, but that they continued to be in the same state in which they had been in the preceding period, i. e. not very conspicuous, or forming many separate societies, at least, such as the historians of the time had any knowledge of; but mixed with other christians, though without making any secret of their opinions. Of this, though there are no distinct accounts, there are sufficient traces. I have noted only a few, as they happened to fall under my observation, when I was reading for other purposes.

Pope Gregory the Great, who flourished about the close of the sixth century, speaks of heretics who said “ they did not envy
“ Christ

“ Christ being God, because they could “ be so if they would, considering Christ as “ a mere man, and made a God by fa“ vour*.” These must have been unita-rians, for it is a language that was never held by Arians.

In Bulgaria Sandius says, that the Photinians remained till the time of Pope Nicholas, about the year 860. Hist. p.
 117. Agobard speaks of Avitus having written against them, but at what time does not appear †.

For some time the unitarians were called Bonosians, from Bonosus, bishop of Ser-dica, in the latter end of the fourth, and the beginning of the fifth century. Mention is made of him as an unitarian, along

* Non invideo Christo deo facto, quoniam si volo, et ipse possum fieri. Qui Jesum Christum dominum nostrum, non per mysterium conceptionis, sed per profectum gratiæ deum putavit, perversa allegatione astruens eum purum hominum natum : sed ut deus esset, per meritum profecisse, atque ab hoc æstimans et se quoslibet alios posse ei coequari, qui filii dei per gratiam fiunt. In Job. cap.
 35. p. 110. C

† Beatus quoque Avitus, Photinianorum hæreticorum validissimus expugnator. Adv. Fælicem, sect. 41. p. 55.

with

with Photinus, by Marius Mercator*, and also by Justinian, who ranks him with Paulus Samosatensis, Photius (probably Photinus) and Nestorius †. Mention is also made of the Bonosians in a council held at Orleans, A. D. 540 ‡.

Sandius says, that the Bonosians were the same with the Felicians, so called from Felix, of Urgella in Spain, who, in conjunction with Elipandus, of Toledo, taught heretical doctrines with respect to the trinity, A. D. 780 (Hist. p. 360) and that this Elipandus held the same opinions with Sabellius, he says, appears from a copy of his confession to Beatus and Heterius. He adds, that the four preceding bishops of Toledo, who compiled the Toledan Gothic * Hunc itaque Hebionum philosophum secutus Marcellus Galata est, Photinus quoque, et ultimis temporibus Serdicensis Bonosus, qui a Damaso urbis Romæ episcopo prædamnatus est. Opera, p. 165.

† Ἐπειδὴ Παυλον τῶν Σαμοσαίται, καὶ Φωτιον, καὶ Βενωσσυ, καὶ Νεστοριον ἀναθεματίζετε. Epist. p. 122.

‡ Judex civitatis vel loci, si hæreticum aut Bonosiacum, vel cujuslibet alterius hæresis sacerdotem, quam cunque personam de catholicis rebaptizasse cognoverit. Bini Concilia, vol. 2. pt. 2. p. 29.

liturgy,

liturgy, were of the same opinion with him. Ibid. p. 120.

Elipandus, however, may have been a Nestorian, by his asserting that Jesus Christ was the adopted Son of God, as we learn from the transactions of the council of Frankfort in 794*.

The Goths and Vandals, and all the other northern nations, which invaded the Roman empire, are generally said to have been Arians. But it is very possible that this may have been said without making proper distinctions, and that many of them were unitarians. Chilperic, king of the Franks, was probably one, at least so was Leovigild of Spain, who sent ambassadors to Chilperic in 585, as may be inferred * Adferunt igitur, sed falsis adsertionibus irretiti, dominum nostrum Jesum Christum, adoptivum dei filium de virgine natum; quod divinis nequeunt adprobare documentis. Hæc igitur dicentes, aut in utero virginis eum suspicantur adoptatum: quod dici nefas est, quia de beata virgine inerarrabiliter sumpsit, non adoptavit, carnem; aut certe purum eum hominem sine deo natum, quod cogitare impium est, necesse est fateantur. Binni Concilia, vol. 3. pt. 2. p. 140.

from

from what Sandius says of him, and his ambassadors*.

Some Sabellians, as well as Arians, were condemned at a council held at Toledo, A. D. 400 †. Also unitarians, or Nestorians, seem to be alluded to in a council held in the same city, A. D. 684 ‡.

The Albigenfes, at least many of them, appear pretty clearly not to have been orthodox with respect to the trinity; but whether they were more generally Arians, or unitarians, I have not been able to determine.

* Hist. p. 337, 338.

† Si quis dixerit atque crediderit, deum patrem eundem esse filium vel paracletum, anathema fit. Si quis dixerit vel crediderit filium eundem esse patrem vel paracletum, anathema fit. Si quis dixerit vel crediderit paracletum esse vel patrem vel filium, anathema fit. Si quis crediderit vel dixerit, carnem tantum sine anima a filio dei fuisse susceptam anathema fit. Binnii Concilia, vol. 1. p. 60.

‡ Si quis igitur Jesu Christo dei filio, ex utero Mariæ virginis nato, aliquid aut divinitatis imminuit, aut de suscepta humanitate subducit, excepta sola lege peccati; et non eum verum deum, hominemque perfectum in una persona subsistentem sincerissime credit, anathema fit. Binnii Concilia, vol. 3. p. 297.

Of these Albigenses, Lisoius and Herbert are particularly mentioned, as men of excellent moral characters, who were accused of Manicheisme. However, when they were interrogated at Orleans, in 1017, it appeared that they did not hold the doctrine of the trinity*.

In the same uncertainty are the opinions of Peter Abelard, and those of his disciple, as he is called, Arnold of Brescia. But it is no uncommon thing for the same person to be called an Arian by one writer, and an unitarian by another. Thus Lewis Hetzer is called an Arian by Sandius, who was himself an Arian (Hist. p. 424) whereas Mosheim (Hist. vol. 4. p. 183) represents him as having been of the same opinion with Socinus.

* Facta igitur perscrutatione inter clericos, quomodo unusquisque sentiret, et crederet ea, quæ fides catholica per doctrinam apostolicam incommutabiliter servat et prædicat: illi duo, videlicet Lisoius, et Heribertus statim se aliter sentire non negantes, quales diu latuerant, manifestaverunt. Deinde vero plures post illos se parti istorum profitebantur hæerere, nec ulla ratione se posse affirmabant ab illorum segregare consortio. Quibus compertis, tam rex, quam Pontifices tristiores effecti interrogaverunt illos secretius, utpote viros hæcenus in omni morum probitate perutilissimos, quorum unus Lisoius in monasterio sanctæ crucis clericorum clarissimus habebatur: alter item Heribertus sancti Petri ecclesiæ, cognomento Puellarius capitalæ scholæ tenebat dominium.—Dicebant enim deliramenta esse, quidquid in veteri ac novo canone certis signis ac prodigiis, veteribusque testatoribus de trinitate unaque deitate beata confirmat auctoritas. Binnii Concilia, vol. 3. pt. 2. p. 176.

Abelard, however, was most probably a Sabellian, as may be inferred from his comparison of the unity of the three persons in the trinity to the unity of the proposition, assumption, and conclusion, of an oration. At least it was so understood at a council held in 1136*. What is said of him on the occasion of another council, in 1140, may perhaps shew that, with respect to the trinity, * Quare de S. trinitate docens et scribens, tres personas, quas sancta ecclesia non vacua nomina tantum, sed res distinctas, suisque proprietatibus discretis, hæcenus et pie credit, et fideliter docuit, nimis attenuans, non bonis usus exemplis, inter cætera dixit: sicut eadem oratio est propositio assumptio, et conclusio, ita eadem essentia est pater, et filius, et spiritus sanctus. Ob hoc Sueffionis provinciali contra eum synodo sub præsentia Romanæ sedis legati congregata, ab egregiis viris, et nominatis magistris, Elberico Rheimense, et Leutaldo Novariense, Sabellianus hæreticus judicatus. Binnii Concilia, vol. 3. pt. 2. p. 492.

he was an Arian, with respect to the doctrine of grace a Pelagian, and with respect to the person of Christ, a Nestorian*.

It appears then, that, in all the periods of antiquity, there were considerable numbers of unitarians, either avowed or concealed; and especially among the Albigenses, who bore so noble a testimony against the errors of the church of Rome. Unitarians also appeared in great numbers about the time of the reformation by Luther. But he and Calvin, not going so far, but retaining more fundamental corruptions of christianity than any that they abolished, employed all their influence to bear down those who did not exactly agree with them, and stop where they did.

The truth has never, however, been without its witnesses, perhaps, even in no age or country; and providence seems now to be opening a way for the much wider spread, and the firmer establishment of the truth, especially in this country.

* Cum de trinitate loquitur, sapit Arium: cum de gratia, sapit Pelagium: cum de persona Christi, sapit Nestorium. Binnii Concilia, vol. 3. pt. 2. p. 494.

That it is not improbable, but that, even in times of pretty great rigour, quiet people, who wrote nothing, and collected no disciples, would be permitted to continue in communion with the catholic church, notwithstanding their opinions were suspected, or known, to be heretical, may appear from the state of things at home, in the last, and the present age.

Is it not well known that there are both Arians and Socinians members of the church of England, and even among the clergy themselves, and yet, if they can reconcile it to their own minds to keep in communion with a trinitarian church, there are no attempts made to molest them. Zealous as the heads of the church may be for the purity of its tenets, they think proper to connive at these things, and so they did in an age more zealous than this. The excellent Mr. Firmin was not only an avowed Socinian, and in communion with the church of England, but in habits of intimacy with Tillotson, and some of the most distinguished churchmen of his time.

At

At present there are Arian and Socinian writers within the pale of the church, and yet they are not excommunicated. Such a thing as this might not have passed so easily in the time of Theodosius. But even then I make no doubt, but that persons who could content themselves without disturbing others, would not have been molested.

Persons who do not bona fide hold the acknowledged tenets of any church (I mean such great and distinguished ones as those relating to the object of worship) ought to withdraw themselves from it, and not, by continuing in communion with it, to countenance its errors. But how many are there who do not see the thing in this light, or whose habits and prejudices are such, that they cannot bring themselves to act as I think every principle of honour, as well as of religion, dictates; and yet I cannot call all such persons hypocrites, doing what they themselves know and feel to be wrong. They have excuses, which I doubt not, satisfy their own minds, though they do not satisfy me. Great allowance is also to be made for the force of habit, and even for a natural timidity. There are many Erasmus's for one Luther, many Dr. Clarke's for one Whiston, a name, which notwithstanding the weakness of his judgment in some things, ought never to be mentioned without respect, on account of his almost singular and unparalleled uprightness.

As to the common people, the idiotæ of Tertullian, we generally see that, as they are not innovators in doctrine, they go to public worship where they have been used to do, without any nice discrimination of what is transacted there; and the observation will generally apply to the bulk of the inferior clergy. When Henry VIII. reformed the church of England, how many joined him in it, who would never have declared themselves dissenters from the established church?

These considerations, which are founded on such a knowledge of human nature as we may learn from all history, and our own daily observation, may render it credible, that the majority of the common people, might be unitarians, and yet continue in communion

nion with the church, after its forms became trinitarian, especially as they would not become so all at once. In the most ancient liturgies, there were no prayers addressed to Christ; and as the members of christian societies were not required to subscribe to any thing, there was nothing that they were expected to bear a part in, concerning which they might not be able to satisfy themselves.

The case is the same, in a greater or less degree, at all times, and in all churches. Quiet people will generally be indulged in their own way of thinking, and they are only those who disturb others that are themselves disturbed.

CHAPTER XVII.

Of Philosophical Unitarianism.

BESIDES the simple unitarianism above described, or the doctrine of Christ being a mere man, inspired by God, which was the belief of the generality of christians of lower rank, there was likewise, in early times, what may be called a philosophical unitarianism, or an explanation of the doctrine concerning Christ on the principles of the philosophy of those times. And this deserves the more notice, as it probably gave occasion to what is commonly called the patripassian doctrine, if such a doctrine was ever really maintained.

As the sun was supposed to emit rays, and draw them into himself again, so the Divine Being, of whom they imagined the sun to be an image, they likewise supposed, emitted emitted a kind of efflux, or divine ray, to which they sometimes gave the name of logos, which might be attached to any particular substance, or person, and then be drawn into the Divine Being again. Such a divine efflux was imagined to have been the cause of the appearances of God in the Old Testament, and likewise to have been imparted to Jesus Christ; who, nevertheless, was a mere man. For before his baptism they supposed that he had not this divine ray, and that it would leave him when it had enabled him to act the part assigned to him.

This doctrine preceded that of the permanent personification of the logos. It is particularly described by Justin Martyr, and it is remarkable, that, though he does not adopt it, he passes no censure upon it, which is a proof that, in his opinion, it was not heretical.

“There are,” he says, “some I know, who say that the divine power which appeared to Moses, and Abraham, and Jacob, was called an angel, from his de“livering

“ living the will of God to men, and a “ glory, when he appeared in an ineffable “ manner, and a man, when, at the will of “ the Father, he appeared in that form;
“ and logos, when he brought the will of “ God to man; but that this power is in“ separable from the Father, as a beam of “ light is from the sun, since, when he “ sets, he takes his beams with him. Thus “ they say the Father, when he pleases, “ makes this power to go out of him, and “ when he pleases, takes it into him again.
“ In the same manner, they say, angels “ exist. But that angels are permanent be“ ings, and do not return into that from “ which they had their origin, I have “ shewn. And that this power, which the “ prophets call God, and angel, is not like “ a beam of the sun, but numerically dif“ ferent from it, I have briefly shewn “ above; when I proved that this power “ is produced by the Father’s power, and “ at his will, but yet not a thing cut “ off from him, so as to diminish his “ essence, but like the lighting of one “ fire

“ fire from another, which is not thereby “ lessened.*”

Whitby says that Clemens Alexandrinus speaks of this doctrine with approbation.

* Ἀλλὰ ἐπεὶ γινώσκω ἢ τινὰς προλεγεῖν ταύτῃ βεβλομένους, ἢ φασκεῖν τὴν δύναμιν τὴν παρὰ τὴν πατρὸς τῶν ὁλῶν φανείσαν τῷ Μωσῆϊ ἢ τῷ Ἀβραάμ, ἢ τῷ Ἰακώβ, ἀγγέλον καλεῖσθαι ἐν τῇ παρὸς ἀνθρώπων προοδῷ, ἐπειδὴ δι' αὐτῆς τὰ παρὰ τὴν πατρὸς τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ἀγγελῆται, δοξάν δὲ ἐπειδὴ ἐν ἀχωρήτῳ πῶτε φανίσασθαι φανῆσαι, ἀνδρὰ δὲ πῶτε καὶ ἀνθρώπον καλεῖσθαι, ἐπειδὴ ἐν μορφαῖς τοιαύταις σχηματίζομεθα φανῆσαι αἰσπερ βεβῆσαι ὁ πατήρ, καὶ λόγον καλεῖσθαι ἐπειδὴ καὶ τὰς παρὰ τὴν πατρὸς ὀμιλίας φέρει τοῖς ἀνθρώποις. Ἀληθῆνον δὲ καὶ ἀχωρίζον τὴν πατρὸς ταύτῃ τὴν δύναμιν ὑπαρχειν, ὀνπεξήροπον τὸ τὴν ἡλικίαν φασὶ φῶς ἐπὶ γῆς εἶναι ἀληθῆνον καὶ ἀχωρίζον οὐδὲ τὴν ἡλικίαν ἐν τῷ ἔρατῳ, καὶ οὐδὲν ὄντως, συναποφερέται τὸ φῶς, ἕως ὅτε πατήρ οὐδὲν βεβῆται, λεγῆσαι, δύναμιν αὐτῆς προσηθῆσαι ποιεῖ, καὶ οὐδὲν βεβῆται πάλιν ἀναστῆσαι εἰς ἐαυτὸν. Κατὰ τὴν οὖν τὸν τρόπον καὶ τὰς ἀγγελίας ποιεῖν αὐτὸν διδάσκουσιν. Ἀλλ' οἳ μὲν ἐν εἰσιν ἀγγέλοι, καὶ αἰετὸν μενοῖτες, καὶ μὴ ἀναλυόμενοι εἰς ἐκεῖνο ἐξ ἕπερ γεγονασιν, ἀποδεδειχῆται. Καὶ οἳ δύναμις αὐτῆς ἢν καὶ θεὸν καλεῖ ὁ πρῶτος λόγος, διὰ πολλῶν ὀσ-αύτως ἀποδεδειχῆται, καὶ ἀγγέλον, ἔχ, ὡς τὸ τὴν ἡλικίαν φῶς ὀνοματῆ μόνον ἀριθμῆται, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀριθμῶ εἶρον τι ἐστὶ, καὶ ἐν τοῖς πρῶτοις ἐπισημασμένοις διὰ βραχέων τὸν λόγον ἐξήλασα, εἰπων τὴν δύναμιν ταύτῃ γεγενῆσθαι ἀπὸ τῆς πατρὸς δύναμει καὶ βεβῆ αὐτῆς, ἀλλ' ἔ κατὰ ἀπόλομν, ὡς ἀπομερίζομενης τῆς τῆς πατρὸς ὀσιας, ὀποια τὰ ἀλλὰ πάλιν μερίζομενα καὶ τεμνομενα ἔ τὰ αὐτῆς ἐστὶν α καὶ πρὶν τμηθῆναι. Καὶ παραδειγματῆ χάριν παρεῖληφεν τὰ ὡς ἀπὸ πυρὸς ἀναπτόμενα πυρὰ εἶρα ὀρωμεν, ἔδεν ἐλατῆμεν ἐκεῖνα, ἐξ ἔ ἀναφθῆναι πολλὰ δυνάμει, ἀλλὰ ταύτῃ μενοῖ. Dial. p. 412.

He

He also says, “ it is particularly remarkable, that Justin Martyr, though he did not approve of this doctrine, passes it without any censure, or mark of heresy *.”

They who adopted this notion would naturally say, that the divinity of Christ was only that of the Father residing in him; and it is not impossible but that, as they are charged by their adversaries, they might, on this principle, say, that Christ was God; and the divinity being the same in both, that he was the very same with the Father. The Holy Spirit being another divine efflux, they might also say, that all the three persons were one. Farther, though the thing is hardly probable, especially as it is, in a manner, given up by some of their antagonists, they might say, that since Christ sufferred while this divine ray, or logos, was in him, it also suffered along with him. For, according to the philosophy of those times, though the supreme being himself was incapable either of evil or of passion, yet other beings, derived even from his substance, were capable of those affections. They might therefore imagine, that the logos, while out of the deity, might suffer together with the person to whom it was attached; and hence they might get the name of patri-passians. This, however, would never apply to any but philosophers. The common people are described as simple unitarians, without having any such whimsical hypothesis as this.

* Ubi præcipue notandum est, Justinum quidem sententiam hanc improbare, eam vero sine censura aut hæreseos nota dimittere. Sententiam hancce, quam post Noetum et Praxeam, Sabellius propugnavit, Clementi Alexandrino ex Pædagogia sua placuisse non sine ratione existimo; eamque postea renovabat, et pro ea acriter contendebat, Marcellus Ancyræ episcopus. Disquisitiones Modestæ, p. 173.

This opinion of the logos being something like a divine ray, emitted from the Father, and properly belonging to him, though for a time attached to the person of Christ, may be traced in Origen and others; and it is ascribed to almost all the eminent men among the unitarians, as late as Marcellus. For it does not appear that his disciple Photinus was ever charged with it.

Origen,

Origen, after saying that Christ is the God of the dead as well as of the living, says, that “perhaps God the logos is God “to those who place every thing in him, “thinking him to be the same with the “Father*.” Celsus objecting to christians that, “while they exclaimed against poly- “theism, think they do not offend by wor- “shipping his servant.” Origen replies, “that he would not have made this objec- “tion, if he had understood what our Sa- “viour says, that he and his Father were “one,” which union he explains by the union of christians, who had one heart and one mind. “This,” he says, “is a sufficient “argument, without having recourse to the “sentiments of those who maintain, that “the Father and the Son are not two hy- “postases †;” by which he must have * Ο δε θεος λογος ταχα των εν αυτω ισάντων το παν. κ̅ των πατερα αυτον νομιζόντων εστι θεος. Comment. vol. 2. p. 48.

† Οτι ειπερ νενοηκει ο Κελσος το, εγω κ̅ ο πατηρ εν εσμεν· και το εν ευχη ειρημενον υπο τριων τε θεων εν τω. Ως εγω και συ εν εσμεν, εκ αυωλοήμας κ̅ άλλων θεραπευειν παρα τον επι πασι θεον. Ο γαρ πατηρ, φησιν, εν εμοι, καγω εν τω πατρι. ει δε. τις εκ τειλων περισπασθη-σιναι, μη πη αυτομολημεν προς τας ανωρεβιλας δυο ιναι υποσασεις πατερα

meant the Sabellians, whose doctrine, as far as it may be said to have differed from that of the simple unitarians, was the philosophical unitarianism described above. “The Sabellians,” says, Novatian, “while they say that Christ is a mere man, yet, in a manner, make him to be not the Son, but the Father, and the Father omnipotent *.”

Origen well describes the different classes of unitarians of his time in the following passage: “Hence may be solved the doubts which disturb many, who alledge a principle of piety, and a fear of making two Gods, and by this means fall into false and impious opinions; either denying that the identity of the Son differs from that of the Father; saying, that the Son is God only in name, or denying the divinity of the Son, while they allow his identity, πατέρα ἔν υἱόν· ἐπισησαίω τω, ἢ δε πατρῶν των τριγευσαντων η καρδια ἔν η ψυχη μια, ινα θεωρηση το, εγω ἔν ο πατηρ εν εσμεν. Ad Celsum, lib. 8. p. 385.

* Siquidem Christus non filius, sed pater creditur, et novo more dum ab istis destriete homo nudus adseritur, per eos, rursus Christus pater deus omnipotens comprobatur. Cap. 12. p. 40.

“and that he is a different person from the “Father, &c*.” The first that he describes were the philosophical unitarians, who allowed the divinity of the Son, but said it was the same with that of the Father; whereas the latter (probably the common people) denied the divinity of the Son altogether. It is evident from this passage, that the unitarians, in the time of Origen, were numerous; for he calls them many, which he would not have done unnecessarily. The argument by which he solves their doubts has been mentioned before, viz. that the Father is God, with the article prefixed, and the Son without it.

* Και πο πολλας φιλοθεως ειναι ευχομενως ταρασσον, ευλαβημενως δυο αναγορευσαι θεως, και παρα τζιο περιπιτησινας ψευδεσι και ασεξεσι δογμασιν, ηλοι αρνεμενως ιδιοηλια υια ελεραν παρα την τε πατρος ομολογηλιας θεον ειναι τον μεχρι ονομαί⊕ παρ αυτοις υιον προσαγορουομενοι. Η αρνεμενως την θεοτητα τε υιου, τιθενιας δε αυλια την ιδιοηλια, και την εσταν καλα περιγραφην τυγχανουσαν ελεραν τε πατρος, ενλευθεν λυεσθαι δυναται. λεκτεον γαρ αυτοις οτι τοτε μεν αυλοθε⊕ ο θεος εστι, διοπερ και ο Σωτηρ φησιν εν τη προς τον πατερα ευχη. ινα γινηστωσι σε τον μονον αληθινον θεον; παν δε το παρα το αυλοθε⊕ μελοχη της εκεινε θεοτη⊕ θεοποιουμενον, εκ ο θεος, αλλα θεος κυριωτε-ρον αυ λεγοισο ω παντως ο πρωτοτοκος πασης κτισεως, ατε πρωτος τω προς τον θεον ειναι. In Johan. Comment. vol. 2. p. 46.

It does not appear that the persons to whom Origen refers were charged with saying that the Father suffered; but this is expressly alledged against Noetus, who, as Epiphanius says, “scrupled not to say as much.” Being interrogated concerning his doctrine, he said, “What evil have I done? “I honour one God. I know but one, and “no other, besides him who was born, “suffered and died*.

This writer acquits the Sabellians of this charge. For he says that “the Sabellians “agree in every thing with the Noetians; “except that they deny that the Father “suffered †.” But Austin blames him for making that difference ‡. And Epiphanius * Τι γαρ κακου πεποιθηκα; ενα θεον δοξαζω, ενα επισταμαι, κ' εκ αλλον πλην αυτε, γεννηθεντα, πεπονθεντα, αποθανοντα. Hær. 57. Opera, vol. 1. p. 480.

† Σαβελλιανοι, οι τα ομοια Νοηταιων δοξαζοντες, παρα τισο μενον λεγασι γαρ μη πεπονθεναι τον πατερα. Anacephalosis, Opera, vol. 2. p. 146.

‡ Unde vero fit factum, et Noetianos ut Sabellianos non unius hæresis duo nomina, sed tanquam duas hæreses supradictus episcopus poneret, liquido invenire non potui; quia si quid inter se differunt, tam obscure dixit, studio ascribes to them the proper principle of philosophical unitarianism in the following passage. “ The Sabellians say that, the “ Son was sent from the Father, as a beam “ of light from the sun, to administer “ every thing relating to the gospel dispen“ sation, and the salvation of men, and was “ then drawn up into heaven, like a beam

 “ of light, which returns to the sun*.”

In another description of their principles, he is, perhaps, not quite so accurate. “ Sabellius said, there was but one hypof-“ tasis, and the Father, Son, and Spirit, “ three names of it; or, as in man, there “ are the body, soul, and spirit; the body forſitan brevitatis, ut non intelligam. Loco quippe iſto, quo et non tam longe a Noetianis, Sabellianos commemorans, Sabelliani inquit ſimilia Noeto dogmatizantes, præter hoc, quod dicunt patrem non eſſe paſſum, quomodo de Sabellianis intelligi poteſt, cum ſic innotuerint dicere patrem paſſum, ut Patripaſſiani quam Sabelliani crebrius nuncupentur. De Hærefibus, lib. 1. Opera, vol. 6. p. 91.

* Πεμφθεῖλα δὲ τὸν υἱὸν καιρῷ πῶτε, ὡς περ ἀκίνα, καὶ ἐργαſα-μενὸν τὰ πάντα ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ τὰ τῆς οἰκονομίας τῆς εὐαγγελικῆς, καὶ ſωτηρίας τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ἀνακλήθεῖλα δὲ αὐθὶς εἰς ἄραν, ὡς ὑπὸ ἡλίου πεμφθειſαν ἀκίνα, καὶ πάλιν εἰς τὸν ἡλίου ἀναδραμεſαν. Hær. 62.
 Opera, vol. 1. p: 513.

“ being

“ being the Father, the soul the Son, and “ the spirit the Holy Spirit *.”

This philosophical unitarianism is the doctrine ascribed by Tertullian to Praxeas, though he speaks of the common people as simple unitarians. “ He says, that the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are the same †.” He likewise calls him a Patripassian, and says, that “ he first carried the Patripassian doctrine into Rome ‡.” They are Patripassians also whom Cyprian enumerates among heretics. Epist. Opera, p. 200.

Beaufobre thinks that the charge of Patripassianism was entirely founded on a mistake, and as Lardner observes, Austin only inferred that the Sabellians held that doc-* Τον αυτον ειναι πατερα, τον αυτον υιον, τον αυτον ειναι αγιον πνευμα : ως ειναι εν' μια υποστασει τρεις ονομασιαις, η ως εν ανθρωπω σωμα, και ψυχη, και πνευμα . και ειναι μεν το σωμα, ως ειπειν του πατερα, ψυχην δε ως ειπειν του υιον, το πνευμα δε ως ανθρωπος, εως και το αγιον πνευμα εν τη θεοτητι. Hær. 62. Opera, vol. 1., p. 513.

† Dum unicum deum non alias putat credendum, quam si ipsum eundemque et patrem, filium, et spiritum sanctum dicat. — Itaque post tempus pater natus, et pater passus : ipse deus, dominus omnipotens, Jesus Christus prædicatur. Adv. Praxeam, sect. 2. Opera, p. 501.

‡ Ibid. sect. 1. p. 500.

trine (Credibility, vol. 4. p. 450). Beaufobre accounts for the misrepresentation of the ancients, by supposing that they confounded the terms word of God and Son of God, because in the theology of the church they were the same, though in the mind of a Sabellian they were very different. Histoire de Manicheisme, vol. 1. p. 539.

It is very possible that Tertullian and others might give the epithet of heretical to the unitarian doctrine in this obnoxious form only. For it is evident that he did not consider the simple unitarians as heretics, for he says they were the major pars credentium, the majority of the believers.

Marcellus is generally described as being what I call a philosophical unitarian, but he is not said to have been a Patripassian. According to Theodoret, he held that “Christ came as an extension of the Father’s divinity. This he called God the logos; but after all the œconomy” (that is, when the gospel dispensation shall be accomplished) “it will be again drawn into him, and centered in God, from whom it had been extended. He called the Holy “ Spirit

“ Spirit an extension of an extension, and “ said that this was given to the apostles *.”

Beryllus, one of the first who is noticed as an unitarian, though celebrated for the elegance of his writings, is not said to have been a Patripassian. He only held that “ Christ had no proper subsistence till he “ came into this world, and had no divinity
 “ of his own, but only that of the Father “ residing in him †.”

It is allowed by Tertullian, that the Patripassians, as well as the orthodox, said that the Father himself was impassible. That was an universal maxim concerning the divine nature; but they said that the Father had compassion for the Son. Whether this compassion was ascribed by them to the Father himself, or only to the divine ray, or logos, that was in Christ, does not appear. Perhaps it was the latter. On this subject Tertullian replies to them as follows. "Wherefore neither had the Father compassion for the Son. For so, thinking to avoid a direct blasphemy; they think it will be lessened in this manner; granting that the Father and Son are two persons, the Son suffering, and the Father sympathizing with him. But in this they are foolish; for what is sympathizing, but suffering with another*."

* Εκκλασιν δε τινα της τε παλτρος θεοτητος εφησεν εις τον χριστον εηλυθεναι, και ταυτην θεον λογον εκαλεσε. μελα δε την συμπασσαν οικονομιαν παλιν ανασπασθηναι, και συσαλθηναι προς τον θεον, εξ υπερ εξελαθη. το δε πανανγιον πνευμα παρεκκλασιν της εκκλασεως λεγει, και ταυτην τοις αποστολοις παρασχεθηναι. Hær. Fab. lib. 2. cap. 10. Opera, vol. 4. p. 224.

† Ελεγε και γαρ του κυριου ημων Ιησου χριστου, μητινα υποσασιν υσιας ιδιαν κεκλησθαι, πριν η τοις καθ ημας ενδημειν • αλλ' οδε θεοτητα ιδιαν εχειν, μονην δε πατρικην υποσασιν και θεοτητα εν τελω επιδημησασαν πολιμυσασθαι. Hist. lib. 5. cap. 22. vol. 1. p. 374.

Notwithstanding this mode in which the unitarian doctrine was held by some philosophizing persons, it appears that they were considered as being mere unitarians, as much as the common people, to whom this mode * Ergo nec compassus est pater filio; sic enim directam blasphemiam in patrem veriti, diminui eam hoc modo sperant, concedentes jam patrem et filium duos esse; si filius quidem patitur, pater vero compatitur. Stulti in hoc. Quid est enim compati, quam cum alio pati? Porro, si impassibilis pater, utique et impassibilis. Aut si compassibilis utique passibilis. Nihil ei vel hoc timore tuo præstas. Times dicere passibilem, quem dicis compassibilem. Ad Praxeam, sect. 29. p. 518.

of explaining the doctrine must have been unintelligible; and all the more distinguished unitarians of that age, whether they be said to explain their sentiments in this manner, or not, are represented as holding the same opinion, and the very same that was maintained by the Jews. Thus Sabellius, Marcellus, and Photinus, are all classed together by Chrysostom*; and instances frequently occur, in which all these are said to hold the same doctrine with Artemon, Theodotus, and Paulus Samosatensis. That Sabellius in particular, though he is generally represented as a Patripassian, was nevertheless a proper unitarian, who believed Christ to have no proper divinity of his own, is evident from the arguments with which his antagonists press him.— Thus Epiphanius, in answer to the Sabellians, says that “Jesus came the Son of God “to the river Jordan †.”

* Αλλ' ἰδε παλιν ἐπιτηδα Σαβελλιος και Μαρκελλος και Φωτεινος. In Heb. Opera, vol. 10. p. 1763.

† Ἀρμεσσασιν αὐτοῖς Σαβελλιανοῖς μὲν μέγα τῶν ἀλλῶν μαρτυριῶν ἢ μαρτυρία τῆς Ἰορδάνου, ὡς ἤδη εἶπον. υἱὸς γὰρ ἐν Ἰορδάνῃ ἀληθῶς παρρησιαί. Ancoratus, sect. 119. Opera, vol. 2. p. 121.

Whatever Sabellianism was, whether the more simple, or the more philosophical kind of unitarianism, it appears to have been very popular in Africa, and to have had many adherents among the bishops of that country. Athanasius makes heavy complaints on this subject, saying, as was quoted before, that Sabellianism prevailed so much there, that the Son of God was hardly preached in the churches.

The controversy with the philosophical unitarians took a turn considerably different from that with the simple unitarians, and unfortunately led the orthodox into an embarrassment and inconsistency, which became very apparent when the Arian controversy arose. And, indeed, the language that had been adopted as proper for the controversy with the philosophical unitarians, appears to have contributed very much to the rise of Arianism. For as these learned unitarians asserted that the Father, Son, and Spirit (meaning the divinity belonging to them) were the same, their adversaries had incautiously advanced, that they were essentially different, and that the Father and Son had had even different natures. And so far were the orthodox, in this state of things, from asserting, as they did at the council of Nice, that the Son was consubstantial with the Father, that they were the first to assert the direct contrary, as they did in the condemnation of Paulus Samosatensis. Thus Basil says, “that they who condemned “him rejected the word consubstantial *.”

But this language was retracted when Arius was to be condemned. So different a thing was the orthodoxy of the different periods. Optatus, and others, acknowledge that the famous term consubstantial, was first introduced in the Sabellian controversy, when it seems to have been used by the Sabellians, and disclaimed by the orthodox, whose object was to distinguish the members of the trinity, which the Sabellians were charged with confounding (Lib. 1. p. 8.) Origen, in answer to the Sabel-

* Και γαρ τω οντι οι επι Παυλω τω Σαμοσαλει συνελθοντες, διαβαλον την λεξιν ως εκ ευσημον. εφασαν γαρ εκεινοι την τε ομοσιω φωνην παρισταν εννοιαν υσιας τε κη των απ' αυτης, ως τε καταμερισθεισαν την υσιαν παρεχειν τε ομοσιω την προσωγοριαν τοις εις α διηρηθη Epist. 300. Opera, vol. 3. p. 292.

lians, shows, that in several places the Father and Christ are spoken of as different persons, especially when the Father is said to raise Christ from the dead *. I have observed that Origen expressly maintained that the Son had an essence different from that of the Father; and he makes it an objection to the unitarians, that they made the essence of both to be the same. “Be“ cause,” says he, “ Christ is called the true “ light, and in the epistle of John God “ is called light, some think that the es“ sence of the Son does not differ from “ that of the Father †.” On this account, among others, the orthodoxy of Origen was called in question by some after the Arian controversy; whereas it is very evident that * Μέλα δε τριῶ ἐκ αἰοπόν ἐστὶ τὸν ὁμολογῆναι μὴδεν δυνασθαι ποιεῖν εἰαν μὴ τι βλεπῆ τὸν πατέρα ποιῆναι καὶ λεγοῖναι ὅτι ὁ δὲ ἀν πατὴρ ποιεῖ ταῦτα ὁμοίως καὶ ὁ υἱὸς ποιεῖ, τὸν νεκρὸν ὅπερ τὸ σῶμα ἢν ἡγηγε-κεναι, τὸ πατρὸς αἰὸ τῆλο χαριζομένῃ, ὃν προηγεμένως λειλεον εἡγηγε-κεναι χριστὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν. Comment. vol. 2. p. p. 187.

† Ἐπεὶ δι φῶς ἀπαξάπλωζ ἐνλαυθα μὲν ὁ σῶτηρ, ἐν δὲ τῆ καθολικῆ τῆ αὐτῆ Ἰωαννῆ ἐπιστολῆ λεγέται ὁ θεὸς εἶναι φῶς, ὁ μὲν τις οἰεῖται καὶ ἐνλευθεν κάλασμευαζέσθαι ἢ ἔστια μὴ διεσθῆναι τῆ υἱὸν τὸν πατέρα.
 Ibid. p. 70.

both

both his opinions, and his language, were the very same that were held by all the orthodox of his own age; and Athanasius and others made allowance for this, and apologized for him, as they also did for Dionysius of Alexandria, who is often called the Father of Arianism.

Though the orthodox found it convenient to change the use of this word consubstantial when the circumstances of things were changed, the unitarians did not; and therefore Marcellus and Eustathius of Antioch, his disciple, declared loudly for it, at the council of Nice, as Beaufobre observes*.

There is another circumstance relating to this controversy that deserves to be particularly noticed; as it also shews what different ideas, and what different language, men will adopt in different situations. As the philosophical unitarians held that the Father, Son, and Spirit (meaning the divinity belonging to them) were the same, and alledged in proof of this our Saviour saying I and my Father are one; the orthodox, in answer to them, said that the one was in the neuter gender, and therefore, that the unity between them was not an unity of essence, but only of harmony, and affection. Novatian says, that “because Christ says they were one, in the neuter gender, let the heretics understand that it signifies the concord of society, not unity of person*.” This is the very explanation of this text, that the unitarians after the council of Nice always gave, when the orthodox availed themselves of it, as a proof that the Father and the Son were one in essence, or were consubstantial to each other. Then nothing could be said too high of the divinity of the Son. But Novatian, who lived before the Arian controversy, says, “Most of the heretics, moved with the greatness and * Qui potuisset dicere, ego pater, si patrem se esse meminisset. Et quia dixit unum, intelligant hæretici quia non dixit unus. Unum enim neutraliter positum societatis concordiam, non unitatem personæ, sonat. Cap. 27, p. 99.

* Hist. de Manicheisme, vol. I. p. 542.

“ truth of Christ’s divinity, extend his “ honours beyond bounds, daring to call “ him not God the Son, but God the “ Father himself*.” Thus the great object of the orthodox in the second century, was to make a God of Christ, but a far in- ferior God, and also a God of, or out of God the Father, lest he should be thought to be another God, and independent of the Father. On the other hand, the great object of the orthodoxy of a later period, was to exalt the Son to a perfect equality with the Father, so as to allow the Father no advantage but what was nominal, or respected mere order. Hence the difference of the language, and in the arguments of the two different periods. While the unitarians always considered the Father as the only true God, and Christ a mere man, the servant of God. And if the more philoso-

* Ut plerique hæreticorum, divinitatis ipsius magnitu-dine et veritate commoti, ultra modum extendentes ho-nores ejus, ausi sint non filium, sed ipsum deum patrem promere vel putare. Cap. 23. p. 87.

phical among them ascribed any divinity to him, it was only the divinity of the Father, residing in him, and acting by him, and that for a time; it being withdrawn from him again, when the purpose of its emission had been answered.

C H A P.

C H A P T E R XVIII.

Of the Principles and Arguments of the ancient Unitarians.

I SHALL now proceed to give a distinct view of the principles of the ancient unitarians, and of the arguments by which they defended them; and I beg that my readers would compare them with the arguments of the trinitarians, of which an account has been given already.

---

 SECTION I.

Their Zeal for the Divine Unity, and their Sense of the Word Logos.

ALL the denominations of unitarians, comprizing both the vulgar and the philosophical part of them, considered themselves as advocates for the unity of God, which they thought was infringed by their opponents.

opponents. Of this we have sufficient evidence in every period of their history; and thus much is acknowledged by all their adversaries. Whatever their mistakes were, it was owned that they were led into them by their dread of violating the first, and the greatest of all the principles of religion, viz. that of the proper unity of the divine nature. Sufficient evidence of this hath been given already; but to this view of their arguments, I shall prefix a few other passages of the Fathers, which likewise clearly prove it.

Origen evidently considered the unitarians as persons who really dreaded lest, by admitting Christ to be God, they should infringe upon the honour that was due to the Father only. “By these means,” he says, “may be explained that which greatly disturbs many persons, who plead a principle of piety, and who fear to make two Gods*.” He afterwards recurs to the same subject, and introduces it as an objection of persons with whom he would not trifle, and whom he was far from charging with hypocrisy. “But since,” says he, “it is probable that many may be “offended, because we say that one is the “true God, namely, the Father, and besides this true God, there are many who “are made gods by participation; fearing “that the glory of him, who exceeds all “creatures, should be brought down to “that of others, who obtained the appellation of Gods, &c.*” Origen, therefore, must have thought respectfully of those early unitarians, and have considered them as objecting to the doctrine of the divinity of Christ from the very best principles.

* Και το πολλες φιλοθεες ειναι ευχομενες ταρασσον, ευλαβομενες δυο αναγορευσαι. Comment. in Johannem, Edit. Huetii, vol. 2. p. 46.

Novatian says, that “when they,” the unitarians, “observe, that it is written there “is but one God, they think that they “can no otherwise maintain the truth of “this, than by asserting, either that Christ is a * Αλλ' επει εικε προσκοψειν τιναις τοις ειρημενοις ενος μεν αληθινου θεου τω πατριω απαγγελουμενου, παρα δε του αληθινου θεου θεων ωλειωνων τη μελοχη τε θεου γινομενων, ευλαβομενεσ την τε πασαν κησιν υπερεχοηλοσ δεξαν εξισωσαι τοις λοιποις της θεουσ προσηγοριασ τυγχανουσι, &c. Comment. in Johannem, Edit. Huetii, vol. 2. p. 46.

“ mere man, or that he is God the Fa“ ther *. Eusebius says, that “ Marcellus “ wrote his book in order to assert the
 “ the unity of God †.” He also says, that “ Marcellus gloried in acknowledging but “ one God ‡.” Athanasius says, that “ the “ followers of Marcellus and Photinus de“ nied the pre-existence of Christ, and his “ divinity, and his everlasting kingdom, “ along with the Jews, on pretence of esta“ blishing a monarchy §.” “ They so cor“ rupt the sacred faith of the gospel,” says
 Hilary, “ that from a profession of re“ verence towards God, they denied the “ nativity of his only begotten Son, saying,

* Quia cum animadverterent scriptum esse quod unus sit deus, non aliter putaverant istam tenere se posse sententiam, nisi aut hominem tantum Christum, aut certe deum patrem putarent esse credendum. Cap. 30. p. 116.

† Τέλο φησι πεποιημένοι, δια το ενα γνωρίζειν θεον. Ec. Theol. lib. 1. pref. p. 57.

‡ Αλλα και σεμνυμένοι αυτων ενα θεον ειδέναι. Ibid. cap. 17. p. 80.

§ Οι απο Μαρκελλου κ̅ Φόβειου των Ακυρογαλατων, οι την προαιωνιον υπαρξιν τε χριστου, και την θεότητα, κ̅ την αειμνησίαν αυτου βασιλειαν ομοίως Ισραηλιταις αδελφισιν, επι προφασει τε συνισασθαι δοκειν τη μοναρχια. De Synodis Armen. Opera, vol. 1. p. 898.

“ that

“ that there is a protension, rather than “ a descent into man *.” In this he alludes to the principles of the philosophical unitarians. Gregory Nazianzen, addressing the unitarians, calls them, by way of ridicule, φιλαγεννητοι, φιλαναρχοι, as pretending to a great zeal for the honour of the Father, as the unbegotten, and without origin †; and in another place he complains, that “ the greatest obstacle to the “ reception of the truth, was the piety “ of his hearers ‡.” He says they had zeal, but not according to knowledge, and therefore would be punished with few stripes §.

* Quidam ita evangelicæ fidei corrumpunt sacramen-tum, ut sub unius dei pia tantum professione nativitatem unigeniti dei abnegent: ut protensio fit potius in hominem quam descensio. Lib. 1. p. 10.

† Προσηγομαί σε ολιγον φιλαγεννητε συ κη φιλαναρχε. Ογ.
 13. p. 209.

‡ Αλλ' οι και ο τοις αλλο τι διδασκειν υποσχυμενοις ρατον ποιει τον λογον κη ευπαραδεικον, η των ακουοντων ευλαβεια, τειλο ενλαουδα η ζημια καθισταται κη ο κινδυνος. Ογ. 1. p. 17.

§ Και τειλο ει λεγω, των μεριωτερων κη ε πανη κακων το παθος, ει καν της αληθειας διαμαρτανωσιν, αλλα τω γε δι ευλαβειαν τειλο πασ-χειν, κη ζηλον μεν εχειν, αλλ' ε και επιγνωσιν, τυχον εσονται των ε therefore had reason to acknowledge that Sabellianism was innocent in its origin, and arose from the fear of making more gods than one*.

That the cause of the unitarians was considered as the same with that of the Jews, the great advocates of the divine unity appears from Chrysoftom, who, speaking of the divinity of Christ, as proved from the Old Testament, says, that “if any Jew, under the form of a christian, lift up his head (I mean Paulus Samofatensis) the same arguments may be used against him;” and afterwards, “what was said against the Jews, may be said to those who have the same origin †.” M. Caleca also makes Sabellianism to be the same thing with Judaism ‡.

εις τε κ' μονος εμην ολι κ' γεγεννηκεν εξ εαυτης του υιου. Contra Julianum, lib. 1. Juliani, Opera, vol. 2. p. 22.

* Histoire de Manicheisme, vol. 1. p. 535.

† Ει δε ειερος ημιν Ιουδαϊος ανακυπτει παλιν προσωπον χριστιανικη περιφερων Παυλος ο Σαμοσαλευς, λεγω, δυναλον μεν και προς τειον και απο της καινης λεγειν Δει δε τα αλλα απερ προς Ιουδαϊως ειρησαι, και προς τες απο τειε ειπειν. In Pf. 109. Opera, vol. 3. p. 323.

‡ Ου τειο λεγω, ολι ο πατηρ εστι και υιος, και αγιον πνευμα τειο γαρ Ιουδαϊκον εστι και δοξα τει Σαβελως. Combefis Auctuarium, vol. 2. p. 203.

My readers will probably wish to know in what sense the ancient unitarians understood the term logos, of which so many different opinions have been entertained by christians; and on this head it is in my power to give them the most complete satisfaction. The logos has been so long considered by the generality of christians as synonymous to Christ, that they think any other interpretation to be harsh and unnatural. Socinus himself, and many who are now called Socinians, considered it as meaning the gospel, or the word of God, in its most literal sense. But all the ancient unitarians, without exception, considered it as signifying that word of God by which the world was made, viz. the power of God, his essential operative attribute; and it will appear, that they were exceedingly surprised at hearing of any other interpretation of it. Now, considering that the common people, as well as the learned, among the unitarians, had this idea of it, it cannot but be concluded to have been the proper original sense of the term, because it was so understood by those very persons for whose use the gospel of John was written. This is an article of so much consequence, that I shall produce a considerable number of authorities for it; disposing of them pretty nearly according to the age of the writers from whom they are collected.

LogosChristGospelPower

Hippolytus, writing against Noetus, says, “ I shall be told, you tell me something strange, when you call the logos “ the Son *.” In the larger exposition of faith ascribed to Gregory Thaumaturgus, it is said, “ Some make the wisdom of “ God to resemble the wisdom of man, “ because he is wise, and his word to be “ like that word which is uttered, or conceived, in the mind, without any hypothesis †.” “ Some disciples of Paulus * Αλλ' ερει μοι τις, ξενον μοι φερεις λογον λεγων υιον. Opera, p. 16.

† Non minus alieni sunt, qui trinitatem non secundum veritatem ex tribus personis consistuntur, sed in unitate triplicatam secundum compositionem impie fingunt, et sapientiam in deo existimant esse sicut in homine sapientiam humanam, qua sapiens est: et verbum simile esse interpretantur verbo quod ore profertur, vel mente concipitur, nulla hypostasi. Opera, p. 16.

“ Samofatenfis,” fays Athanafius, “ diftin“ guifh the logof from the Son, faying, “ that the Son is Chrift, but the logof is “ another thing*.” “ Paulus Samofaten“ fis,” fays Epiphanius, held that the logof “ of God, and his fpirit, was always in “ God, as the logof of man is in man ; and “ that the Son had no personal fubfiftence, “ which was alfo the doctrine of Sabellius, “ Novatus, Noetus, and others †.” Hilary alfo fays that “ the word of God, ac“ cording to the heretics, was the power “ of God ‡.”

That this was the doctrine of Marcellus and Photinus, we have the cleareft evidence, * Τινες των απο τε Σαμοσαλειως, διαιρηντες τον λογον απο τε υιου, φασκουσι τον μεν υιον ειναι τον χριστον, του δε λογον αλλον ειναι. Contra Arianos, Or. 5. Opera, vol. 1. p. 543.

† Εν θεω δε αει οντα τον αυτην λογον, και το πνευμα αυτην, ωσπερ εν ανθρωπω καρδια ο ιδιου λογου . μη ειναι δε τον υιον τε θεου ενυποστατον, αλλα εν αυτω θεω . ωσπερ αμελει και ο Σαβελλιου, και ο Ναυαλιου, και ο Νοητου, και αλλοι. Hær. 65. Opera, vol. 1. p. 608.

‡ Per quod etiam illud vitii adjungitur, ut deus verbum tanquam pars aliqua virtutum dei, quodam se tractu continuationis extendens hominem illum, qui a Maria esse cœpit habitaverit, et virtutibus divinæ operationis instruxerit; animæ tamen suæ motu naturaque viventem. Lib. 10. p. 258.

especially especially from Eusebius, who wrote against the former of them. “ Marcellus,” he says, “ believed Christ to be the word of “ God, but a mere word, like that of man, “ and not a living and substantial son *.” Again, he says, “ Marcellus asserts, that “ the logos is not used by way of figure, “ though those who teach the contrary “ should burst with their lies, but simply “ and truly logos,” or reason †. “ Mar- “ cellus held that the logos was always “ united to, and connected with the Fa- “ ther †.” He held that the “ logos was in “ God, as his reason ; that it was for a time “ out of God, and returned into him at the “ day of judgment, and was then united to “ him as it had been before §.” Chrysoftom * Ψίλου γαρ, και τω ανθρωπειω λογω ομοιον, εχι δε υιον αληθως ζωντα και υφεσιντα, τον χριστον εινα ομολογειν εθελει. Contra Marcellum, lib. 1. p. 19.

† Ου καταχρηστικως λογος ονομασθεις και διαρραγοιεν οι ειεροδι- δασκαλικης ψευδομενοι, αλλα κυριως τε και αληθως υπαρχων λογος. Ibid. lib. 2. p. 40.

‡ Τετον αυτου λογον εχειν εν εαυτω ενωμενον και συνημενον αυτω φησιν. Ec. Theol. lib. 1. cap. 5. p. 63.

§ Τοσαυτα Μαρκελλος, περι τε λογου ειπων, τε εν τω θεω, καθ' ο- νομα * εν αυτω ιλογικω εινα, δεηνη δυσχωρια περιπεπλωνε, το γικτας ειλος also says, that “ Marcellus, Photinus, and “ Sophronius, say that the logos is an “ energy, and that this energy inhabits “ him who was the son of David, but is “ not a subsisting person*.” Theophilact repeats this in almost the same words, saying, “ Marcellus of Galatia, Photinus, and “ Sophronius, said that the logos was the “ energy of God, and not a personal sub“ sistence, and that it inhabited a descen“ dant of David †.” Epiphanius says, that “ Photinus asserted that the logos of God “ was from the beginning, but that it was “ not the Son of God ‡.”

I shall add a few other testimonies from later writers. Cyril of Alexandria, writing τὸ θεὸν γεγενῆσθαι ὡς φανταί τον ἐν αὐτῷ λόγον . καὶ παλιν εἶλος αὐτῷ μέλα τον καιρον της κρισεως· ἰν εἰως ἦν ἐν τῷ θεῷ ἐνωθεῖς αὐτῷ, ὡς περ καὶ παρῆρον ἦν. Ec. Theol. lib. 1. cap. 8. p. 113.

* Μαρκελλος καὶ Φώτεινος, καὶ Σωφρονιος, τον λογον ενεργειαν ειναι φασι, την δε ενεργειαν ταυτην ἐνοικησαι τῷ ἐκ σπερματος Δαβ. δ, ἐκ Ἰσταν ἐνυποστατον. In Phil. 2. Opera, vol. 10. p. 1239.

† Μαρκελλος ο Γαλαθης, καὶ Φώτεινος, καὶ Σωφρονιος, ελεγον τον λογον τὸ θεὸν ενεργειαν ειναι, ἐκ Ἰσταν ἐνυποστατον· ταυτην δε ἐνοικησαι τον ἐκ σπερματος Δαβ.δ. In Phil. 2. Opera, vol. 2. p. 591.

‡ Καὶ αὐτος φημι ειναι τον λογον ἀπ ἀρχης, ἀλλ' ἔχ. υιον θεὸν γεγεν-ῆμενον. Hær. 71. p. 831.

against

against Theodorus, who is said to have been the proper father of Nestorianism (which differed very little from the unitarian doctrine) evidently supposes that this was the received doctrine of the unitarians, when he says, “ It is false to say that the word “ of God has no substance. It is the “ eructation of a foolish heart; For he “ himself said to Moses, I am that I am, “ and therefore they who think so we deem “ most stupid *.” Again, replying to those who said that the logos is verbum insitum, or the proper internal reason of the Father, “ Why did not our Saviour say, I and the “ word of my Father are one, and he that “ sees me, sees the word of the Father.” He adds, that “ the logos, in the introduc- “ tion to the gospel of John has the article “ prefixed to it, which shews that it did * Minime enim mentietur falsissimum esse sermonem, quod verbum quod ex deo apparuit, dicatur non habuisse substantiam: est enim stultissimi cordis eructatio. Nam ipse dicebat Mosi ego sum qui sum: quomodo autem unquam hoc quod vere est, in substantia per se non servari intelligitur? et propterea eos qui sic sentiunt, merito rudissimos esse definimus. Opera, vol. 2. p. 687.

“ not

“not mean reason in general, but a particular specific logos*.” I do not think it at all necessary to reply to the reasoning of Cyril in this place, I only quote him in order to ascertain what it was that the unitarians, his adversaries, thought on the subject.

The emperor Julian gives his testimony to the unitarians having supposed that by logos was intended the power of God, “Some of the impious,” meaning the christians, he says, “say that Jesus Christ is one person, and he that is called the logos by John another †.” He likewise says that “John does not mention the name of Jesus, or * Præterea si unigenitus dei filius idcirco verbum est et vocatur, quoniam (ut ipsi dicunt) in fitum patris verbum suscipiens, ad illud formatur: cur non dixit ad discipulos, ego et verbum patris unum sumus: et, qui me videt, is etiam verbum patris videt?—Ideo videmus filium hominis, articulo ad utrumque nomen præposito, salvatore nostro proferri, quando se solum ab infinita hominum multitudine velit significare. In John, cap. 4. Opera, vol. 1. p. 610.

† Και τοι δοκει τισι των δυσσεβων αλλον μεν Ιησυν ειναι χριστον, αλλον δε τον υπο Ιωαννη κηρυττομενον λογον. Cyril. Contra Jul. lib. 10. Opera, vol. 2. p. 333.

“ of

“ of Christ, when he calls him God and “ logos*.”

This use of the term logos or word, is common in the Old Testament, as when the Psalmist says, By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, &c. and Macarius, having no view to this controversy, says, “ The word of God is God, and the “ word of the world is the world,” and then speaks of the difference between the word of God and the word of the world, and between the children of God, and the children of the world †.

In this sense, according to Eusebius, the Jews always understood the term logos. “ If “ any one,” says he, “ suppose that the “ Son is a mere word—that it is quiescent “ in the Father, when he is quiescent, but “ was active when he made the world, re-* Ουδαμα δε αυτον ειπε Ιησων, ειπε χριστον, αχρις ε θεον και λογον αποκαλει. Cyril. Contra Jul. lib. 10. Opera, vol. 2. p. 327.

† Ο τε θεος λογος, θεος εστι. και ο λογος τε κοσμος κοσμος εστι. πολλη δε διαφορα και μεσότης τυλχαιει, τε τε λογος τε θεος, και τε λογος τε κοσμος, και των τεκνων τε θεος, και των τεκνων τε κοσμος. εκασον γαρ γεννημα τοις ιδιοις εοικε γενεσιν. Opera, p. 223.

“ resembling

“sembling the logos of man, which is “quiescent when we are silent, but active “when we speak; it is evident that he “interprets as the Jews do, and according “to human reason, and that he denies the “true Son of God*.” He then adds what was quoted in this volume, p. 13. concerning the Jews acknowledging that God has a logos, but no Son.

* Ο δὲ ψιλὸν λόγον εἶναι τὸν υἱὸν ἀπολαμβάνων, καὶ μόνον λόγον εἶναι μαρτυρούμενος, καὶ πολλαχῆς τὰτ' αὐτὸ λεγὼν ὡς εἶδεν ἕτερον ἢ τὸ λόγον, ἐνδὸν μείων ἐν τῷ ψυχασόντι τῷ πατρὶ, ἐνεργῶν τε ἐν τῷ ἡμέτερω τὴν κλίσειν δημιουργεῖν ὁμοίως τῷ ἡμέτερω, ἐν σιοπῶσι μὲν ψυχασόντι, ἐν δὲ φθεγγόμενοις ἐνεργῶντι, δῆλον αἰ εἶη Ἰσραὴλικῶ τινι καὶ ἀνθρωπίνῳ συνήρεχων φρονηματι, τὸν δὲ ἀληθῶς υἱὸν τὰ θεῶν ἀρνεῖται.
 Contra Marcellum, lib. I. p. 4.

SECTION II.

Arguments of the ancient Unitarians from Reason.

HAVING stated what the principles of the ancient unitarians were, I shall in the next place, give a view of the arguments by which they defended them; and as some of these were drawn from the principles of reason, and others from the scriptures, I shall mention the former in the first place. But in this I need not insist upon their capital argument, viz. that the doctrine of the divinity of Christ and of the trinity, is an infringement of the great doctrine of natural and revealed religion, the unity of God. This has appeared sufficiently already. Also many of their other arguments have been mentioned in the replies of their trinitarian adversaries. I shall, therefore, only recite such others as have happened to occur separately.

That

That the ancient unitarians were much addicted to reasoning, and that they often disputed with great acuteness and subtilty, so as to puzzle their opponents, may be inferred from what is said of them by Eusebius, viz. that “they neglected the “scriptures, and reasoned in syllogisms*.” No doubt they did reason, and probably in the syllogistic form, as was the custom with logicians, and I doubt not very closely and justly; but it will be seen that they were far from neglecting the scriptures.

According to the most ancient doctrine of the generation of the Son, there was a time when the Father was simply one, and had not generated this Son. Upon this idea, Marcellus said that, “if it be a perfection in the Father to have a Son, he “was imperfect while he was without “one †.”

* Οὐ τι αἱ θεαὶ λεγέσθαι γραφαὶ ζήλοντες, ἀλλ' ὅποιον σχῆμα συλλογισμῶν εἰς τὴν τῆς ἀθεοῦτος εὐρεθὴ συστάσιν, φιλοπενῶς ἀσκήντες. Hist. lib. 8. cap. 28. p. 253.

† Εἰ γὰρ αἰτελειὸς ὁ θεός, καὶ παρῆσιν αὐτῷ δυνάμει τε πατέρα αὐτὸν εἶναι, καὶ καλὸν αὐτὸν εἶναι πατέρα τε τοιούτων υἱῶν, ἀναβαλλέσθαι, καὶ αὐτὸν τε καλῶς γηρισκεῖ, καὶ ὡς ἐστὶν εἰπεῖν, ἐξ ἑ δυνάσθαι πατέρα εἶναι υἱῶν. Contra Marcellum, lib. 1. p. 22.

To the doctrine of divine generation in general, the objection was, that the divine essence must then be corporeal. “Marcellus said, that, if the Son be a probole,” or production, “from the Father, and he be “his offspring, like the offspring of other “living creatures, both the being producing, and the being produced, must be “corporeal*.”

That the Son, who was generated from the Father, was allowed by those who first advanced that doctrine to be inferior to the Father, the most abundant proof has been given. Afterwards all this was retracted. But the unitarians retorted it upon them. “The enemies of truth,” says Chrysostom, “urge that, if the Son be equal to the “Father, why did not the Father become “incarnate? As it was the Son who took “the form of a servant, is it not plain that “he is inferior. But if on this account “he took human nature, the Spirit, who, ‡ Εἰ γὰρ προβολὴ ἐστὶν ὁ υἱὸς τῆς πατρὸς, καὶ γινῆται μὲν ἐξ αὐτῆς ὅποια τὰ τῶν ζῶων γεννημῆτα, ἀναγκαῖον σῶμα εἶναι τὸν προβαλλοῦντα καὶ τὸν προβεβλημένον. Contra Marcellum, lib. I. p. 22.

“ they say (though we do not acknowledge “ this) is inferior to the Son, should have “ been incarnate *.”

The trinitarians, giving a reason for the mystery of the incarnation, held that the divinity gave a value to the sufferings of the human nature to which it was united. But the unitarians urged the absurdity of this; saying, according to Theodoret, “ If a man
 “ only suffered, it was a man that saved
 “ us †.” This is an argument to which the orthodox have always made very lame replies. They have never chose to say that the deity of Christ suffered, or that it partook of the sufferings of the human nature. Consequently, if it was only man that suffered, the satisfaction made by that suffering could only be finite; and in fact, * Και γαρ και τειλο περιφερουσιν οι της αληθειας εχθροι, λεγοντες; οτι ει ισος ην τω γεγεννηκοι, τινος ενεκεν ο πατηρ ηκ ανελαβε σαρκα, αλλ' υιος υπεδυ την τε δελα μορφην; αρα ηκ ευδηλον, οτι επειδη καλα-δεδεγρος ην; και μην ει δια τειλο την ημετεραν υπεδυ φυσιν, το πνευμα, ο φασιν αυλοι τε υις ελατιον ειναι (η γαρ αν ημεις ειπομεν) εκεινο σαρκωθηναι εδει. Ser. 51. Opera, vol. 5. p. 697.

† Ανθρωπος ην ημιν παρρησε την σωτηριαν. Dial. 3. Opera, vol 4. p. 116.

could

could extend no farther than the sufferings of any other man.

Novatian says, in proof of the divinity of Christ, “ if he be only a man, why is he every where invoked, since it is the nature not of man, but of God, to be present in every place * ? ” But whatever might be the case in the time of Novatian (when what he says could not be true of any besides the trinitarians) this certainly was not the practice even with them in the time of Origen, who flourished not more than twenty years before him. This has been shewn already, and therefore this universal practice might have been urged, and probably was urged, by the ancient unitarians, as an argument in their favour. According to Origen, the custom of christians was to pray to God through Christ †. And * Si homo tantummodo Christus; quomodo abest ubique invocatus, cum hæc hominis natura non sit, sed dei, ut adeste omni loco possit? Cap. 14. p. 45.

† Θεραπευομεν εν τον πατερα της αληθειας, κ̅ τον υιον την αληθειαν, ο̅να δυο τη υποστασει πραγματα, εν δε τη ομονοια, κ̅ τη συμφωνια, κ̅ τη ταυτολη̅ι τ̅ς βεληματος. Ad Cellsum, lib. 8. p. 386.

Christ was supposed to join in their prayers. "We are not to pray," says he, "without our high-priest*." In like manner, other saints were supposed, in the time of Origen, to bear their part in the prayers of the churches to which they had belonged, long before it was thought right to pray to them, and this was the natural progress of things with respect to Christ.

It has been seen how strenuously the ancient unitarians insisted upon the antiquity of their doctrine, and how far all the learned trinitarians conceded to them, by admitting that, in the time of the apostles, the doctrine of the divinity of Christ was not taught openly; because the world was not then ready to receive it. It has also been seen that Basil was charged with introducing novelty into his diocese, especially in his form of doxology to the Holy Spirit; from which it is evident, that the unitarians of that age and country considered his doctrine as having had some other origin than either the scriptures, or christian antiquity; and one of them certainly thought very justly of it, when he said to Basil, “ I know nothing of your foreign “ philosophy*.” In that country, the authority of Gregory Thaumaturgus was very great, and it was appealed to both by Basil and his adversaries, who were perhaps better judges than himself, of what had been the custom before he came into the diocese. In a letter to his clergy, he says, “ do not “ despise the hypostases, do not deny the “ name of Christ, or pervert the sayings of “ Gregory †.”

* Αλλά μη χωρίς τῶ ἀρχιερέως. De Oratione, p. 49.

Gregory Nyssen says, that he and his friends were charged with innovation when they taught the doctrine of three hypostases, of one goodness, one power, and one divinity ‡.”

* Ου γαρ συνιημι υμων της αλλοκοτης σοφιας. De Sp. S. cap. 17. Opera, vol. 2. p. 330.

† Τας υποστασεις μη αθεσεις, το ονομα τε χριστη μη απαρεισθε, τας τε Γρηγοριου φωνας μη παρεξηγησθε. Epist. 63. Opera, vol. 3. p. 98.

‡ Αλλ' καινοδομιαν ημιν προφερασιν ειπωσι το εγκλημα κατ' ημων συνιδεις. τρεις υποστασεις ομολογητων, μιαν αγαθητητα, μιαν δυναμιν κ' μιαν θεότητα λεγειν ημας αλλιωται. De Trinitate, vol. 2. P. 439.

The apostles creed has been shewn to afford a strong argument for the antiquity and purity of the ancient unitarian doctrine. This argument was urged by Photinus, who, according to Ruffinus, pleaded that “the apostles creed, literally understood, was in his favour*.” Marcellus, in his epistle, quotes the whole of the apostles creed, and assents to it †.

The orthodox used to alledge the received mode of baptism as a proof of the divinity of Christ; but we learn from Basil, that the unitarians replied, that “baptizing in the name of the Spirit was no proof of his godhead, because mention is made of baptizing unto Moses ‡.”

* Fotinum vero hæreticum scio eatenus scripsisse, non ut rationem dictorum audientibus explanaret, sed ut simpliciter fideliterque dicta, ad argumentum sui dogmatis traheret. In Symbol. pref. p. 169.

† Epiphani, Opera, vol. I. p. 836.

‡ Αλλ' ἔδε εἰ βαπτίζομεθα, φησιν, εἰς αὐτο, ἔδ' εἶπω δικαίον μέγα θεῶν τέλαχθαι. καὶ γὰρ, καὶ εἰς τὸν Μωσῆν τινες ἐβαπτίσθησαν, ἐν τῇ νεφέλῃ καὶ ἐν τῇ θαλάσῃ. De Sp. S. cap. 14. Opera, vol. 2. p. 318.

S E C T I O N III.

Arguments of the ancient Unitarians from the Scriptures.

THE great strong hold of the unitarians was the scriptures, and the plain literal sense of them. “They bawl out”, says Basil, “with their proofs from scripture, “and make no account of the unwritten “traditions of the Fathers*.” And Photinus, in his dispute with Basil, said that “he could prove his doctrine by a hundred “passages of scripture †.” The orthodox in general, complained of the advantage which the unitarians had in appealing to the literal sense of the scripture. “If,” says Gregory Nyssen, “a man rests in the * Τας εκ των εγγραφων αποδείξεις επιβουλιαι, την αγραφων των πατερων μαρτυριαν ως υδενος αξιαν αποπεμπομενοι. De Sp. S. cap. 10. Opera, vol. 2. p. 313.

† Και μελα καυχησεως περι της υποθεσεως εκαλον μαρτυριας φερειν ο γενναδας επιγρειαλο. Epiphanius, Hilt. 70. vol. 1. p. 829.

“bare letter, so far he judaizes in opinion, “and has not learned that a christian is not “the disciple of the letter, but of the Spirit, “for the letter killeth, but the Spirit “giveth life*.”

It is to be observed, that by judaizing, was meant adopting the doctrine of the simple humanity of Christ. For the ancient unitarians were commonly compared by the orthodox to Jews, and the Arians to Gentiles, as worshippers of two gods; the Arian logos not being of the same substance with the Father; and therefore a maker of the world, or a God, quite distinct from him.

Gregory Nazianzen also represents the heretics as drawing many to them by their interpretation of the scriptures †.

* Ουκὲν, εἰ ψιλῶ παραμένει τῷ γραμματί, καὶ κατὰ τὸ μέρος Ἰουδαίει τῆ γνώμῃ, καὶ ἐπὶ πεπαιδευταὶ οὐκ ἔχει γραμματός ἐστὶ χριστIAN μαθητής, ἀλλὰ πνευματικός. το γὰρ γράμμα, φησὶν, ἀπεκτεινεί, τὸ δὲ πνεῦμα ζωοποιεῖ. Contra Eunomium Oratio 16.
Opera. vol. 2. p. 311.

† Τὰς δὲ παρὰ τῶν θείων γραφῶν, ἐντάσεις τε καὶ ἀντιθέσεις αἰς οἱ τὸ γράμματος ἰερόσυτοι, καὶ τῶν γεν τῶν γεγραμμένων κλεπίστους τῆς πολλῆς σφέτεριζοῦσαι, καὶ τὴν ὁδὸν τῆς ἀληθείας ταρασσουσι. Or. 36.
Opera, p. 577.

With

With respect to the Old Testament, it was the general complaint of the orthodox that the unitarians interpreted it as the Jews did, and proved the doctrine of the unity of God from it. I therefore do not need to mention many of their arguments. Justin Martyr pretended to prove from the appearance to Moses in the bush, that it was not Jehovah himself who spake to him, but Christ. But Marcellus argues from the same thing, in favour of his doctrine, probably considering the God that spake from the bush as the Supreme Being, who was self-existent, and had no rival; for Eusebius says, that “Marcellus argued from *“I am that I am*.”*”

Of the unitarians alledging, Deut. vi. 6. Hear O Israel the Lord thy God is one Lord, and also, Isa. xli. 4. I am the first and I am the last, and besides me there is no other (a text almost as celebrated as that of Moses) I could produce numberless instances, and they are both generally alledged at the same time. Marcellus, after quoting the latter, * Ec. Theol. lib. 2. cap. 19. p. 130.

says,

chizedek) that Christ was inferior to Melchizedek*.

Theodotus argued from Is. liii. in which the Messiah is foretold as to be a man of sorrows, &c. †.

It is remarkable that the wisdom, of which Solomon gives a figurative description in the book of Proverbs, had been so long interpreted to mean Christ, that even Marcellus allowed it, and made use of it to prove, that Christ was a creature, as the Arians did, and thought that it referred to his human nature only ‡. A much better, and a more natural, interpretation is, that it has no reference to Christ at all.

* Και ως είναι τριών & μονον δυναμιν τινα, αλλά & μείζοτερον τῆ χριστῆ φασι κασι, χριστον δὲ ηγεῖν αὐτῶς ἐληλυθότα, & καὶ ἀξιώθεῖν αὐτῆς ἐκεῖνῃ ταξείῳ, δὴ δὲν ἐκ ῥήτε τῆ εἰρημενε, συ εἰ ἱερεὺς εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα καὶ αὐτὴν τὴν ταξίῳ Μελχισεδεκ. ὡς εἶναι, φησιν. αὐτὸν εἰ ὑποδέεσθρον τῆ Μελχισεδεκ. Epiphani. Hær. 55. p. 468.

† Εἶλα ὁ αὐτὸς παλιν φησι Θεοδόσιος, ὅτι & Ἐσαίας περὶ αὐτῆς εἶπεν, ὅτι ἀνθρώπος ἐστίν, εἶπεν, ἀνθρώπος εἶδος φερεῖν μαλακίαν· & εἶδομεν αὐτὸν ἐν πλῆθει, & ἐν κακώσει & ἡμιμασθῆ, καὶ ἐκ ἐλογισθῆ. Ibid. Hær. 54. p. 466.

‡ Το τοῖνον κεφαλαιὸν τριῶν τῆ παροιμίας, & τὴν ἀρχὴν τῆς δευτέρας, ὡσπερ αὐτοὶ νομισασι, τῆ σωτηρίας ἡμῶν πάραγεσθαι βεβλημένον, κύριος ἐκλίτε με, εἶπεν, ἀλλὰ τὴν δευτέραν καὶ σαρκὰ οἰκονομίαν. Euseb. con. Marcellum, lib. 2. p. 45.

Dr.

Dr. Lardner discovers traces of Nazaræan, or Sabellian interpretations of scripture in Eusebius, which he accounts for by supposing, that they were borrowed from some other writer, and inserted into his own work, which, he says, was a frequent method with christian commentators. He gives the following instances :

“ All the Father’s grace was poured out upon the beloved, for it was the Father that spake in him.” Again, upon Pf. lxxii. “ This righteousness of the Father is given to the king’s son, of the seed of David, according to the flesh, in whom, as in a temple, dwelled the word, and wisdom, and righteousness of God.”

Once more, referring to Isaiah lxi. 1. and Luke iv. 18. “ shewing,” says he, “ that his was not a bodily anointing, like that of others, but that he was anointed with the spirit of the Father’s deity, and therefore called Christ *.”

* Ἐπει δὲ τῆ ἀγαπῆς πᾶσα ἡ πατρικὴ εἰς αὐτὸν ἐκένωθη χάρις ἣν γὰρ ὁ πατὴρ λαλῶν ἐν υἱῷ. Αὕτη τοιούτη ἡ τῆ πατρὸς δικαιοσύνη τῷ υἱῷ τῆ βασιλείας δεδίδται, τῷ ἐκ σπέρματος Δαυὶδ κατὰ σὰρκα. ἐν ᾧ καλιώκησεν ὡσπερ νῶα ὁ τῆ θεῶ λογος, καὶ ἡ σοφία, καὶ δικαιοσύνη. Διδασκων,

Well might Gregory Nyssen, and others, complain of the advantage which the unitarians derived from the literal interpretation of the New Testament, which it is hardly possible to open without finding a decisive argument against the trinitarian system. I shall give some examples of the arguments which the ancient unitarians drew from it.

In proof of the proper unity of God, Marcellus argued from Mark xii. 28. There is one God, and there is no other but he *.

The inferiority of the Son to the Father, the unitarians proved, from a variety of circumstances, one of which was, Christ being called a servant; and they chose to adhere to that language in speaking of Christ, that they might honour the Father. “ On what δασκων, τω δε πνευματι της πατρικης θεοτητος κεχρισμενον, και δια τωλο χριστον ανηγορευμενον. Credibility, vol. 8. p. 82.

* Αλλ' ο μεν γραμμαλευς, δια τω νομω θεοσεβειαν μεμαδηκωναι δοκων, επαινων το τω σωτηρος ρηλον φαινεται, ακβε Ιτραηλ, λεγων, κυριος ο θεος σβ εις εστι και ορκω καλωσ ειρησθαι πιστευομενον. επ αληθειας γαρ φησιν, ειπας, ολι εις εστιν ο θεος και εκ εστιν αλλος πωλον αυτις. οι δε τα της νεας διαδηκης αυχωνιες ειδεναι μυστηρια, ελοι και δευτερον αναπλαττειν θεον βελονοιαι υποσασει και δυναμει χωριζομενον τω πατροσ.

Euseb. Ec. Theol. lib. 2. cap. 19. p. 131.

“ account,”

“account,” says Chrysoſtom, “do you call “Chriſt a ſervant? That we may honour
 “the Father. But the Son ſays, that all “men may honour the Son, even as they “honour the Father*.”

The unitarians urged, that, as a ſervant, Chriſt was ſent by the Father, being ſubject to his orders. This, they alſo ſaid, was a proof that Chriſt was not omnipreſent. It may be curious to ſee what Chryſoſtom ſaid in anſwer to this argument. “To be “ſent of God,” ſays he, “does not imply “removal from place to place, but the ma-“nifeſtation of the œconomy. Concerning “John the Baptiſt, who was of the earth, “and who appeared upon the earth, the “goſpel ſays, There was a man ſent from “God †.”

* Τινοσ δε ενεκεν αυλον υπαργον φαλε* ινα τιμησωμεν τον πατερα.
 κη μην ο υιοσ φησιν; ινα παντες τιμωσι τον υιον κατωσ τιμωσι τον πατερα. In Pf. Opera, vol 3. p. 121.

† Οτι το απεσλδαι παρα του θεσ, κ την απο τοπων εισ τοπων μελασασιν σημαίνει αλλα της οικονομιασ την φανερωσιν. Περι Ιωαννη τε βαπτιςτου λεγει το ευαγγελιον τεσ απο γησ ονιοσ, και απο γησ φανε-ρωθενιοσ. Εγενετο ανθρωποσ απεσλδμενοσ παρα θεσ. Ser. 5.
 Opera, vol. 6. p. 59.

When

When the unitarians were urged with the Father and the Son being said to be one, they said that they were one by consent and harmony, and proved it from Christ's saying, that his disciples might be one with them, as they two were one*.

The reward that was given to Christ, on account of his services and sufferings, was alledged by the ancient unitarians as a proof of his having been employed by God as his servant, and that he had no dignity before. "The heretics," says Chrysostom, "urge that Christ was advanced on account of his sufferings. But he replies, that mention is made by John of his dignity before his suffering †." The unitarians likewise * Quando igitur ad evertendam naturalem trinitatis identitatem, hunc locum in medium hæreticus affert, quemadmodum dicens, nos non identitate absoluta corporum, nec animarum alterius in alteram confusione unum sumus; sed affectu charitatis, animarumque ad servanda mandata dei consensu; sic et unum filius cum patre est. Cyril Alex. in Joan. lib. II. p. 987.

† Διο και ο θεος αυτον υπερυψωσε δια το παθος, ως μισθον τε παθους δεδωκας αυτω την υψωσιν. Παντως λεγεις, αιρετικες και εδωκεν αυτω ονομα υπερ των ονομα. Ινα εν τω ονοματι, Ιησου των γουνο καμψη, επυρανιων, και επιγειων, και καλαχθονιων. Ο βας φησι, μελα τον τσαυρον υψωθη, ορας, φησι, μελα το παθος μισθον ελαβε την υψωσιν.

urged the Father raising the Son from the dead*.

The gospels were thought to furnish the strongest arguments for the simple humanity of Christ; and this was urged with the more force, as it was acknowledged by the orthodox, that the three first gospels did not teach his divinity. But the ancient unitarians brought as many arguments from the gospel of John, as from any of the others.

We learn from Epiphanius, that Theodotus urged, Luke i. 35. The spirit of the Lord shall come upon thee; arguing that he did not enter into her, as the orthodox supposed †; and, John viii. 40. Ye seek to kill me, a MAN who told you the truth ‡. Austin says, that the Sabellians

σιν. Ει τοιωνν μίσα τον σαυρον υψωθη, ως υμεις φατε, δια τι ο βαπτιστης Ιωαννης προ τε παδης, προ τε σαυρου ελεγεν. Ser. 4. Opera, vol. 6. p. 33.

* Αλλ' επισηνωσιν οι αιρετικοι λεγοντες, ιδε ο πατηρ εγειρει τον υιον. Chrysostom in Gal. 1. Opera, vol. 10. p. 965.

† Είπα, φησι, και το ευαγγελιον εφη τη Μαρια, πνευμα κυρις επελευσειαι επι σε, και εν ειπε πνευμα κυρις γενησειαι εν σοι. Hær. 54. Opera, vol. 1. p. 465.

‡ Και οι απ' αυτης συσαδεντες θεοδωλιανοι, ψιλον ανθρωπον φασκοντες ειπαι τον χριστον, και εκ σπερματι⊖ ανδρος γεγενησθαι. είπα εκς κακην εαυτης απολογιαν οσαυτερ χρησιμα ευρειν, εχ αγνωσ οιομει⊖, αλλα urged, John vii. 6. My doctrine is not mine *. Basil's enemies quoted against him John vi. 57. I live by the Father †.

It is remarkable enough, that both Chrysostom and Theophylact blame Paulus Samosatensis for making a pause before the words, Marvel not at this, John v. 27. as if they would connect them with the account of God's giving all judgment to the Son ‡. For all αλλα προφασει της εαυτη παρεκδροτης ταυτα εαυτω επισωρευων συνηγαγεν . οτι φησιν, ο κυριος εφη . νυν δε ζητειε με αποκλειναι ανθρωπον, ος την αληθειαν υμιν λελαληκα . ορας φησιν, οτι ανθρωπος εστιν. Hæc. 54. Opera, vol. 1. p. 463.

* Utique si tua doctrina non est tua, O domine, cujus est nisi alius sit cujus sit? Quod dixisti, Sabelliani non intelligunt: non enim trinitatem viderunt, sed sui cordis errorem secuti sunt. Nos cultores trinitatis et unitatis patris et filii et spiritus sancti, et unius dei, intelligimus de doctrina Christi, quomodo non est ejus. In John, Tr. 29. cap. 7. Opera, vol. 9 p. 246.

† Τα δε ρηματια της θειας γραφης, απερ λαμβανουιτες οι αυλικειμενοι και διασρεφοντες προς την οικειαν συνειδησιν εις καθαιρεσιν της δοξης τῆ-μονογενεος ημιν προσφερεισιν, εως εξηλασσομεν, κατὰ το δυνασιν ημιν αναπτυσσοιτες αυτα . και πρωτον ημιν πρῶτιδεσθω το, εγω ζω δια τον πατερα . τειλο γαρ εστιν εν των βελων των εις κρανον πεμπτομενων υπο των ασεξων αυτα κεχρημενων. Epist. 141. Opera, vol. 3. p. 166.

‡ Χρη δε γνωσκειν οτι Παυλος ο Σαμοσαλευς ψιλον ανθρωπον δογματιζων τον κυριον εως ανεγνωσκε τειλο το χωριον, και εξεστιαν εδωκεν

our printed bibles are now divided, as Paulus Samosatensis and his followers had pointed the passage; and the punctuation received by Chrysoftom and Theophylact is followed by no person.

Epiphanius says that Theodotus argued from Acts ii. 22. where Peter calls Christ a man approved of God *. And indeed it was acknowledged by the orthodox, that, in all the period to which the history of Luke extends, the apostles did not openly preach such offensive doctrines as those of the pre-existence and divinity of Christ.

The unitarians found a variety of solid arguments in the apostolical epistles. There is hardly any text of which the trinitarians avail themselves more than Phil. ii. 6. Who being in the form of God, thought it no robbery to be equal to God. But even this text the ancient unitarians thought favourable to themselves. Epiphanius says, the here-αὐτῷ καὶ κριστῶν ὡσειν ὅτι υἱὸς ἀνθρώπου ἐστίν. εὐλαβῶν δὲ σιζῶν, ἀπὸ ἄλλης ἀρχῆς ἀνεγέννησθε το, μὴ θαυμαζήσθε τίς. In John. cap. 5. vol. 1. p. 632. See Chrysoftom, vol. 8. p. 201.

* Ἀλλὰ, φησιν, εἶπον οἱ ἀποστόλοι, ἀνδρᾶ ἀποδεδειγμένον εἰς ὑμᾶς σημεῖοις καὶ τερασι καὶ ἔκ εἶπον θεὸν ἀποδεδειγμένον. Hær. 54. Opera, vol. 1. p. 467.

tics avail themselves of this text, “ as if it “ meant that Christ would not by robbery “ make himself equal to God*.” i. e. it would have been robbery if he had done so.
 Chrysostom also says, that the Arians prove that Christ is not God from this text, saying, that Christ being in the form of God, did not seize upon an equality with God ;

εκ ηρπασε † ?

Lardner observes that Origen understood this text as expressive of the humanity of Christ ‡, and that it seems to have been so understood in an epistle from the churches of Vienna and Lyons, they supposing the apostle to have meant that to be equal, or like to God, Christ did not think a thing to be caught at §.

Theophylact, commenting on Eph. iv. 6.
One God, and Father of all, who is above all,

* Ου γαρ ειπεν, εκ ηδελησε γενεσθαι ισος θεω δι αρπαγμας . αλλ' εκ αρπαγματων ηγησατο ειναι ισα θεω, το θεον ειναι φυσει, ολι ην . Ancoratus, sect. 45. Opera, vol. 2. p. 50.

† Αλλα τις ο σοφος αυτων λογος, η μην τριανθιον δεικνυσι, φησι .
 ειπε γαρ ολι εν μορφη θεε υπαρχων, εκ ηρπασε το ειναι ισα θεω .
 η μην ει ην θεος, πως ειχεν αρπασαι . In Phil. 2. Opera, vol. 10.
 p. 1240.

‡ Credibility, vol. 3. p. 399. § Ibid. vol. 1. p. 339.

and through all, and in you all, observes that the heretics thought that the preposition διὰ (through) was peculiar to the Son, and ἐν (in) to the Spirit; both implying inferiority; whereas he says they are now both applied to the Father*.”

In Coll. i. 15. Christ is called the first born of every creature. On this Marcellus said, “How could he who existed always be the first-born of any thing; but the first new man, in whom God would that all things should be collected; the holy scriptures calling him the first-born of the creation †.” Cyril of Alexandria, also says, “They continually urge the more simple with the word first-born ‡.”

* Σημειῶσαι δὲ οἱ μὲν αἰρετικοὶ τὴν, διὰ, προθεσὶν ἀποκληρεσι τε υἱῷ, καὶ τὴν, ἐν, τῷ πνεύματι, ὡς ἐλαττώσιν εἰσαγαγῶσαν. νυν δὲ τῷ πατρὶ εὐρισκόντι προσκειμεναι. ἐκ ἀρα ἐλαττώσεως. Vol. 2. p. 533.

† Πῶς γὰρ δυνατὸν, τὸν αἰεὶ οὐκ, παρὴλοκον εἶναι τινος, ἀλλὰ τὸν παρῶν καινοῦ ἀνθρώπου, εἰς ὃν τὰ πάντα ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι ἐβλεπθῆ ο θεός. τέλει αὶ δεῖται γραφαὶ παρὴλοκον πάσης οὐμαζῶσι κίσεως. Euseb. contra Marcellum, lib. 2. p. 44.

‡ Semper insipienter dicunt nomen primogenitus simplicioribus objicientes. De Trinitate, lib. 4. Opera, vol. 2. p. 415.

But the two decisive texts in proof of the unity of God, and the proper humanity of Christ, in this epistle, are the following : Eph. iv. 5. One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all ; which was urged, as Eusebius informs us, by Marcellus* ; and 1 Tim. ii. 5. There is one God, and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus ; which was pleaded by the same †. This was also alledged by Photinus ‡.

* Και πάντων είναι τον πατέρα [και] τον υιον επιδειξει περιωμμενος εις γραφει· αυτος γαρ ομολογει λεγων, εν εμοι ο πατήρ, καγω εν τω πατρι· οτι δε τρις εχ απλως εδε ασκοπως ειρηκε, δηλον [αν] και αφ' ειερας αποστολικης ρησεως· εις γαρ ο, ειπων, κυριος, μια τωις, εν βαπτισμα, εις θεος εφη, κη πατήρ, ο επι πάντων κη δια πάντων, κη εν πασιν Ec. Theol. lib. 2. cap. 19. p. 131.

* Νυν αυτον συκοφαντει, ως ψιλον ανθρωπον λεγονία είναι τον χριστον, προφανως καλαψευδομένος, εν τε οίς ειρηκε, κη εν οίς εξης επαγει αυδις περι αυτη λεγων· αλλ' ο προειρημενος, βραχεα των αγιων προφητων φρονισης, ως απορηλον τινα κη λανθανεσαν τε αποστολε θεολογίαν εξηγημενος, εις θεος εφη, εις κη μεσιτης θεε κη ανθρωπων, ανθρωπος Ιησους χριστος. Euseb. Con. Marcellum, lib. 1. p. 28.

† Hoc si timemus, delemus in apostolo quod dictum est : mediator dei et hominum homo Christus Jesus, quia ad auctoritatem hærefis suæ Photinus hoc uitur : et non legatur a nobis, quia ab illo male intelligatur. Hil. Ad Arianos, Opera, p. 392.

If my readers only compare these unitarian interpretations of scripture with those made by the trinitarians, in a former part of the work, he must be sensible, without any assistance from me, how infinitely more natural these are than those. The wonder is, that any other sense should ever have been put upon them. The history, however, that I have given of the rise of the doctrine of the trinity, solves this difficulty, and shows the necessity the trinitarians were under of wresting the scriptures so miserably as they did.

Πάλιν δὲ προφασιστέλαι λεγων, οτι εφη περι αυτου ο αποστολος, οτι μεσσης θεος κ̅ ανθρωπων χριστος Ιησους. Epiphanius, Hær. 54. Opera, vol. I. p. 467.

CH A P.

CHAPTER XIX.

Of the Practice of the Unitarians with respect to Baptism.

THE form of baptism, supposed to be prescribed in the gospel of Matthew, viz. in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, and the trine immersion, which was used along with it, contributed very much to establish the doctrine of the trinity. It was natural enough, therefore, for the unitarians to oppose this superstition by discontinuing the practice; though it is probable that the custom itself was an innovation. That it was not in use from the beginning, is pretty evident from there being no trace of it in the New Testament, though we are not able to say at what time it began. However, that many persons did not baptize in this manner, before, as well as after, the council of Nice, is evident from the decrees of that council, and other proceedings ceedings of a similar nature ; and this was the foundation of the different treatment of those who were called heretics, when they returned into the bosom of the church. For if they had been baptized in the usual form, their baptism was deemed to be valid, how heretical soever the church had been in which they had received it ; but if they had not been baptized in that particular form, it was decreed that they should be re-baptized.

In what manner the unitarians, who disapproved of the common form, did baptize their catechumens, does not clearly appear. But it should seem that some of them baptized in the name of Christ only, and others into the death of Christ, which they probably adopted from that expression of the apostle Paul. It appears from Basil, that “ some held that it was sufficient to “ baptize in the name of Christ*.” And the canons which are ascribed to the apostles ordered that “ if any bishop did “ not use trine immersion, but baptized * Προς τας λεγοντας εξαρχειν η μονον το εις τον κυριον βαπτισμα.

De Sp. S. cap. 12. Opera, vol. 2. p. 315.

“ only

“ only into the death of Christ, he should “ be deposed*.”

The Eunomians, Theodoret says, baptized in this form, and also did not immerse the whole body, but only applied the water to certain parts of it †.

According to Athanasius, all the unitarians did not object to the common form of baptism; for, he says, both the Manicheans and Paulus Samosatensis baptized in the common form ‡. But they must in general have disliked that form; because it was decreed at the council of Nice, that the Paulianists, returning to the church, should be rebaptized §. Austin also says, that “ the * Εἰ τις ἐπίσκοπος, ἢ πρεσβύτερος μὴ τρία βαπτισμὰ μαζ μυσσεως ἐπιτελεσει, ἀλλὰ ἐν βαπτισμᾷ εἰς τὸν θανάτῳ τε χειρὶ δίδωμενον, καθαιρεῖται. Zonaras, p. 26. Canon 50.

† Μὴ χρῆναι λέγων τρεῖς καταδυεῖν τὸν βαπτίζομενον, μὴ δὲ ποιεῖσθαι τὴν τῆς τριάδος ἐπικλησιν. ἀλλ' ἀπαξ βαπτίζειν εἰς τὸν θανάτῳ τε χειρὶ. καὶ βαπτίζοντες δὲ μέχρι τῶν γερῶν τῷ ὕδατι δεύουσι, τοῖς δὲ ἄλλοις μορίοις τὸ σώματος ὡς ἐναγεσι προσφέρειν τὸ ὕδωρ ἀπαγορεύουσιν. Hæc. Fab. lib. 4. Opera, vol. 4. p. 356. Ed Halæ.

‡ Οὕτω Μανιχαῖοι καὶ Φρύγες καὶ οἱ τῆς Σαμοσατεύου μαθηταί, τὰ ὀνόματα λεγόντες, εἶδεν ἦσαν εἰσὶν αἰρετικοί. Contra Arianos, Or. 3. Opera, vol. 1. p. 413.

§ Περὶ τῶν Παυλιανιστῶν εἰς ἀποφυγῶν τῆς καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας ὁρος ἐπιτελεῖται ἀναβαπτίζεσθαι αὐτοὺς ἐξαπαλίθη. Canon 19. Zonaras, p. 64.

“ Paulians

“ Paulians were ordered to be rebaptized “ by the council of Nice; from which,” he says, “ it is evident, that they did not ob“ serve the rule of baptism, which many “ heretics, though they left the catholic “ church, did*.” Pope Innocent also would not receive the Paulianists without baptizing, “ because they did not baptize “ in the name of the Father, the Son, and “ the Spirit, as the Novatians did †.”

* Istos sane Paulianos baptizandos esse in ecclesia catholica Nicæno concilio constitutum est. Unde credendum est eos regulam baptismatis non tenere, quam secum multi hæretici cum de catholica discederent abstulerunt, eamque custodiunt. Catalogus Hær. Opera, vol. 6. p. 30.

† Unde prædictus papa Innocentius, cum de duabus hæresibus Paulianistis videlicet, et Novatianistis communiter disputaret, cur a Paulianistis venientes baptizandos esse decerneret, a Novatianis autem funditus prohiberet, causam his reddidit verbis, dicens: quia Paulianistæ, in-quit, in nomine patris, et filii, et spiritus sancti minime baptizantur, nec apud istos, videlicet Novatianos, de uni-tate patris et filii, et spiritus sancti quæstio aliquando mota est. Damiani Epist. cap. 23. Bib. pat. App. p. 634.

Paulianistæ in nomine patris et filii et spiritus sancti minime baptizabant. At Novatiani iisdem nominibus tremendis vinerandisque baptizant, nec apud ipsos de uni-tate potestatis divinæ, hoc est et patris, et filii, et spiritus sancti, aliquando quæstio commota est. Epist. P. Innocentie ad Macedoniæ Episcopos, Apud Binnii Concilia,
vol. 1. p. 620.

At

At a council held at Carthage, in 419, the Paulianists were ordered to be rebaptized*. And at the council of Constantinople, the Montanists, Eunomians, and Sabellians, were all ordered, after much preparation, in which exorcism was not omitted, to be rebaptized when they returned to the catholic church†. This seems to show, that the unitarians in general, and also the most zealous Arians, refused to make use of the common form of baptism; and it is probable that they continued to do so till a very late period, if, indeed, they ever dropped it at all. For Damascenus, who wrote in the eighth cen-

* De Paulianistis refugientibus ad ecclesiam catholicam definitio prolata est rebaptizare omnino. Binnii Concilia, vol. i. p. 726.

† Ευνομικαντες μενοι τες εις μιαν καταδυσιν βαπτιζομενες, και Μοντανιστας τες ενλαυδα λεγομενες Φρυγας, και Σαβελλιανες τες μιοπατοριαν διδασκοτας, και ετερα τινα χαλεπα ποιειστας, και τας αλλας πασας αιρεσεις (επειδη πολλοι εισιν ενλαυδα, μαλιτα δι απο της Γαλασιων χωρας ερχομενοι) παστας τες υπ αυτων θεολογας προσιδεσθαι, τη ορθοδοξια ως Ελληνας δεχομεθα, και την πρωτην ημεραν ποιουμεν αυτες χριστιανες, την δε δευτερην κληθεμενες, ειτα τη τριτη εξοριζομεν αυτες μελα τε εμφυσαν τριλον εις το προσωπον και εις τα οια, και εως κληθεμεν αυτες, και ποιουμεν χρονιζεν εις την εκκλησιαν, και ακροασθαι των γραφα και τοτε αυτες βαπτιζομεν... Canon 7. Zonaras, p. 77.

ture,

tury, says, that “ they who had not been “ baptized into the holy trinity, ought to “ be re-baptized*.” It is to be hoped, that the unitarians of the present age will imitate their predecessors, by baptizing, as the apostles did, in the name of Christ only, without the invocation of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, or expressing what they apprehend to be the real meaning of that phraseology.

* At qui in sanctam trinitatem minime baptizati sunt, hi denuo baptizentur necesse est. Orthod. Fid. lib. 3. cap. 10. p. 446.

END OF THE THIRD VOLUME.

